Bremer's Release Spurs Kidnaper Hunt by U.S.; $200,000 Ransom Paid

Says 10 or 12 Men Held Him Prisoner

Details of Negotiations and Ransom Payment Kept Secret.

St. Paul, Feb. 8 (AP).—Freedom, bought and paid for with a fortune in cash, was Edward G. Bremer's again today upon his return from 22 days in a kidnaper's lair, weak, wounded, and exhausted.

Two hundred thousnd dollars—$85,000 in $5 bills and the rest in $10 denominations—was the amount paid. With the ransom went a note from Adolph Bremer, wealthy brewer and father of the victim, it read;

"To the parties holding Edward: "I have done my part and kept my word 100 per cent as I said I would. This money is not marked and you have the full amount asked for. Now, boys, I am counting on your honor. Be sports and do the square thing and turn Ed loose immediately and tell him to come first to my home.

"ADOLPH BREMER."

Manhunt Launched.

Law enforcement agencies, headed by the Federal Department of Justice, already had launched an intensive manhunt.

Ten or 12 men were in the gang which seized him January 17, shortly after he had left his little daughter, Betty, at the Summit Girl's School, Bremer told police and Federal investigators at the home of his father.

The banker appeared at his father's home near midnight last night after being pushed from a sedan bearing three of the gang at or near Rochester, Minn., 75 miles south of here, about 8 p. m. yesterday.

The wounds on his head were suffered, Bremer related, when two of the kidnapers invaded his automobile after he had stopped at an arterial highway en route to his office.

Tells of Capture.

When one man sought to enter the car, the banker tried to get out the other door, but he was met by another of the gang wielding a pistol. Both got in beside him and, he believes, slugged him on the head simultaneously.

His car, profusely blood-splotched, was found abandoned in an outlying

Knife Wielded In Relief Office

Police last night were looking for a man who had been looking for Frank Walker, head of the National Emergency Council, with a knife.

The man, described as being about 25, of medium stature, wearing a windbreaker, brown trousers and a chauffeur's cap, and carrying a knife, entered the NEC office in the Commercial National Bank Building.

"Where's the manager?" he asked, brandishing the knife in the direction of Miss Elizabeth Pressly, personnel manager.

"He's out," stammered Miss Pressly.

"When I see the manager, it will be just too bad," the stranger replied.

Miss Pressly shouted for help.

Two fellow workers led the man into a private office and a few minutes later released him.

He disappeared while NEC employes were calling police.

The elevator operator said the man had a badly cut finger. Police are checking hospitals and physicians' offices to learn whether a man had called to have such a wound dressed.

Nazi Groom Takes Name of His Bride

Munich, Germany, Feb. 8 (AP).—Cupid unhesitatingly accepted the rigid Nazi farm inheritance law today when Anton Leicht married Babette Mahkorn at Unter-Zettlieta and became Anton Mahkorn.

It was the first time in Bavaria that a bridegroom assumed the name of his bride, under the new property law, and the event was celebrated by the whole village.

Babette, as the owner of a large farm, has a right to keep her maiden name provided the husband assumes hers.

Legion Official Heard By Lobby Grand Jury

(Associated Press.)

A thornier road for lobbyists before Government departments, the investigation of whom has brought intimations a ring existed which sought to arrange for a division of millions of dollars of contracts, is being charted by Administration officials.

The investigative whirl, circling about three persons high in veterans' and National Guard organizations, produced new witnesses before the grand jury yesterday to tell about the events that led to holding up the millions of dollars of contracts for supplying equipment for the War Department's motorization program.

While the Government was arming itself against future attempts to use undue influence in procuring Government business, Edward Hayes, National commander of the American Legion, came to the Capital to conduct his own investigation into reports that two men high in the legion were involved in the War Department inquiry.

Among the grand jury witnesses yesterday was Lieut. Col. H. Weir Cook, active in legion efforts for increased air defense.

Until Cook appeared, the identity of grand jury witnesses indicated the trend of investigation was into the Government purchase of automobiles and trucks, mainly for the $10,000,000 motorization of the Army program.

It was the reported attempt of persons to induce motor companies to employ them and their self-professed influence with the Government, and particularly the War Department, with ensuing complaints to the Justice Department and White House, that set investigators to tracking down lobbyists.

90% Profit Made on Army Plane Award

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

A Governmental audit showing that private contractors had made profits as high as 90 per cent on Army airplane orders was submitted to Congress yesterday.

The 90 per cent profit was credited to the Boeing Airplane Co. for its 1932 contract work. And from 1928 through eight months of 1933, the auditors figured Boeing's total Army airplane sales were $4,529,208, and its average profit 32 per cent.

The House Military Affairs Committee will investigate these figures. The House Naval Committee already is making a similar inquiry. Detailed figures on Army contract profits did not become available until yesterday.

The audit showed that the Pratt-Whitney Co. from 1927 through the first four months of 1933, collected $12,080,222 from the Army for airplane engines, making a 23 per cent profit.

In 1927, the Army bought $326,786 worth of "Hornet" engines from Pratt-Whitney, on which the contractor was shown to have made 73 per cent; in 1928, the Army paid Pratt-Whitney $220,139 for "Wasp" engines, on which the company's profit was placed at 48 per cent.

In 1930, Pratt-Whitney's profit on Army engine sales was shown by the audit to have been 25 per cent; in 1931, it was listed at 23 per cent; in 1932, 25 per cent, and for the first four months of 1933, only 7 per cent.

Some figures from the audit on other companies:

American Couple's Spy Trial Monday

Canadian Woman Also Detained by Finland.

Helsingfors, Finland, Feb. 8 (AP). An American couple and a Canadian woman will go on trial for espionage here next Monday with 25 others.

Police charge that Mrs. Mary Louise Martin, a Canadian, was leader of an espionage group and that Arvid Jacobson, 27, former high school teacher of Northville, Mich., and Mrs. Jacobson aided her.

Wife of Insull, Jr., Undergoes Operation

Quotas to Cut Sugar Urged By President

Forced Cotton Reduction Plan and Pure Food Bill Approved.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Broad extension of Federal authority over three more phases of American economic life was advocated yesterday by President Roosevelt.

In a special message to Congress, he proposed that sugar be made a basic commodity under the agricultural adjustment act in order that production might be cut and imports be placed on a definite quota system.

In a talk with the Bankhead brothers, Senator and Representative, from Alabama, he gave the word for full speed ahead on their cotton-control plan to compel the South to abide by individual production quotas.

In another conference, with Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, and Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, he approved a revised pure food and drug bill, which will be pressed at once.

Speed in Congress Seen.

All three proposals, which have gradually taken concrete form during the winter, are expected to move forward with alacrity through a Congress that has set a record for agreement with the White House. Much of the opposition to the drug bill has been met by eliminating material features of the original Tugwell measure.

The President's message urged that sugar production be allotted between domestic growers and insular countries to alleviate "a price and marketing situation prejudicial to virtually everyone interested." It contained strong hint that Cuba was to get its long-awaited New Deal.

Considered just as important was Mr. Roosevelt's approval of the Bankhead measure, which would limit all cotton growers to the ginning of a specified number of bales, after which a heavy tax would be collected on excess production. For the first time in history, the Government would be forcing a reduction scheme.

Suggests Sugar Quotas.

As for sugar, the President suggested that the following "temporary" quotas be set up under the AAA, in short tons: Continental beets, 1,450,000; Louisiana and Flor-

Warrant for Insull Refused by Canada

Toronto, Feb. 8 (AP).—Damon C. Woods, official of the United States Consulate here, today asked Justice H. T. Kelly to issue a warrant for the arrest of Martin J. Insull, former Chicago utilities executive, under United States bankruptcy laws. The application was refused.

Justice Kelly said the United States authorities should be represented by an Ontario attorney in making such an application.

Riots Cease, Doumergue Calls 'Sages'

Former Premiers to Be Basis of "Truce" Cabinet.

Aged "Savior" Hailed by Paris; Armed Police Patrol Streets.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Paris, Feb. 8.—The aged and venerated Gaston Doumergue led anxious France along the path to peace today after 48 hours of violence, but the premier-elect met difficulties as he sought a "Cabinet of Political Truce."

A veteran of political strife as former minister, premier, and president, Doumergue worked to perfect his "salvation government" in an atmosphere of sadness, with flags everywhere at half staff in honor of victims of two nights of terror.

His arrival from his country home today brought a rush of affection by a relieved citizenry, who acclaimed him with shouts of "Vive Doumergue!" and followed his automobile almost worshipfully.

He hoped to build his "ministry of premiers" in 12 hours, but his secretary tonight admitted that the task would have to continue tomorrow.

Police Get Respite.

Policemen and guards, meanwhile, got a breathing spell from what the French press itself described as "insurrection" or "civil war" that took a toll of 12 dead and thousands injured, with heavy property damage.

There was one minor riot near the Madeleine Church tonight, which police quickly broke up. The general run of demonstrators, however, appeared content to await developments.

A Socialist and Communist manifestation scheduled for Friday night worried authorities, while a 24-hour general strike set for Monday by the French Federation of Labor aroused fears of a renewal of rioting.

Another dangerous period was anticipated during the funerals of the riot victims, who will be buried at the cost of the city next Tuesday.

Although Doumergue failed to form a cabinet as soon as he expected, friends insisted this was because he was so long out of the political picture he feels it necesary to secure all viewpoints.

Ministry This Morning.

"The ministry will be formed tomorrow morning without fail," said Secretary Mallarme after seeing Doumergue.

It was known, however, that parties in the Chamber of Deputies remained skittish about throwing their weight behind the "political truce" the premier-elect asked.

For example, the Radicals want former Premier Edouard Herriot, a radical Socialist leader, to have the foreign affairs portfolio, while the Moderates urge former Premier Andre Tardieu.

As a result, neither may get the job.

The forthcoming government, also, already had one interpellation on hand—that of Deputy Besson, who asked for "light" on its "general and monetary policy."

As part of M. Doumergue's desire to form an absolutely nonpolitical cabinet, M. Herriot told the Radicals, the premier-elect is planning to offer a seat to the Socialist leader, Leon Blum.

Except for the Madeleine disorders, Paris was calm tonight. Thousands of sight-seers visited the Cafe Weber, where a field hospital was set up to care for those hurt

Kraschel Loses Move To Quash Indictment

Des Moines, Feb. 8 (AP).—A defense motion to dismiss the indictment charging Lieut. Gov. Nels G. Kraschel with conspiracy to defraud the Government in connection with the Iowa public works program was overruled here today by Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey.

The court's decision paves the way for arrignment and pleading by Kraschel and Carleton D. Beh, Des Moines investment banker, who was charged with him.

Senate Votes 950 Million To End CWA

4,000,000 to Be Ousted From Jobs by May Under New Plan.

Efforts to Increase Funds Meet Defeat After Debate.

Demobilization of the civil works army of 4,000,000 was voted by the Senate last night when it passed without a record final vote the Administration measure providing $950,000,000 more for the civil works and Federal relief administrations.

Twice before the final vive voce vote the Administration beat down, by overwhelming votes, efforts to increase the funds for the civil works program.

A proposal by Senator Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, to lengthen the works program and increase the fund to $2,500,000,000 was defeated after several hours of debate by a vote of 58 to 10.

Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin, sought to have the fund increased to $1,500,000,000. He pleaded there has not been a sufficient revival in private employment to justify cutting down the civil works rolls.

The Administration program on which the $950,000,000 was based would mean demobilization of the civil works army at the rate of 250,000 a week beginning today, he said.

Program to End May 1.

"This program doesn't contemplate carrying the civil works employment forward at the present rate until May 1," La Follette said. "It means that by May 1 not one person will be employed on civil works."

That seemed to surprise some of the Senators. Senator Park Trammell (Democrat), Florida, and one or two others indicated their disapproval of immediate dismissals, but the plea of the Wisconsin Senator was only good for four more votes than was recorded for the larger Cutting amendment. Even Senator Trammell voted against it. The vote was 52 against and 14 for.

Earlier the Senate voted to extend to Civil Works employes protection of the workmen's compensation law; and, in the closing minutes, approved an amendment making appointment of all CWA State directors subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Senator Hayden (Democrat), Arizona, was author of the workmen's compensation amendment and Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, sponsored the amendment providing for Senate approval of CWA State supervisors.

The McCarran amendment was adopted by a record vote of 42 to 19 and was designed, in part at least, to answer charges of graft, inefficiency and dissatisfaction which have developed out of the hastily gathered together organization under direction of Harry L. Hopkins, Federal Civil Works administrator.

Gives Senators Control.

The amendment, too, had a political aspect inasmuch as it will give to the Senators of the various States a means of control over personnel

Robber Shoots Guard Set to Balk Holdups

Chicago, Feb 8 (AP). — Policeman Emil Harder, stationed in the back room of a drug store for several months to guard against holdups, was shot by a robber today before he could draw his gun.

The holdup man marched a clerk into the back room, fired at the officer and escaped despite shots fired after him by the clerk, using the patrolman's gun. Doctors said Harder would recover.

Starlings Triumph at Capitol; U. S. Runs Out of Ammunition

The porticos and plinths of the Capitol were studded with chattering starlings last night, and not a shot was fired to disturb them from their peaceful, pestiferous perches.

Up from the feeding marshes, in numbers that darkened the southeastern heavens, they flew at sundown, to settle upon the marble ledges beneath which the Senate still deliberated over CWA appropriations.

With echoes of the volleys of a stalwart police firing squad still ringing in their sensitive ears, the starlings did not settle down, however, with customary deliberation. Every bird was on his claw-tips, in anticipation of a few complimentary spirals in response to the gunfire of Capt. Will Orthman's firing squad.

As much to the surprise of the birds as to that of the few, shivering bystanders, there was no volley fired last evening. A youth on roller skates wheeled about, slapping a pair of leather gloves resoundingly, and a few of the nearest starlings took tentative wing. But there was no gunfire.

After nightfall, with the starlings in complete possession of the Capitol's overhanging ledges, the departing Senators were forced to duck and run hastily as they emerged from their belated session. An inquiry was started as to whether this meant surrender to the birds, or presaged some more devious form of eviction.

It developed, upon inquiry of David Lynn, who thought up the idea of driving away the starlings by gunfire, that the answer was simple.

Boettcher Kidnaper Ends Life

Verne Sankey, confessed kidnaper of Charles Boettcher 2d, of Denver, who strangled himself in the Sioux Falls, S. Dak., jail within a few feet of two special guards. The kidnaper was questioned for 30 hours about the Lindbergh abduction when captured recently in a Chicago barber shop.

Confessed to Two Noted Abductions

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Feb. 8 (U.P.). Verne Sankey, confessed kidnaper of Charles Boettcher 2d, of Denver, committed suicide by strangulation in his cell at the State Penitentiary here tonight.

Sankey, one of the principal suspects in the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was arrested in Chicago a week ago when he went to a barber shop.

He was captured by Federal agents, who had been seeking him for months, and questioned for almost 30 hours by Federal operatives in connection with the abduction and death of the baby son of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh.

Death a Mystery.

He was extradited to South Dakota after the agents said they had become convinced that they could not implicate him directly with the Lindbergh case.

How Sankey accomplished the difficult feat of ripping up a portion of his clothing, knotting it around his neck and then strangling himself to death, within a few feet of two United States deputies set to guard him and his confessed accomplice, Gordon Alcorn, was not immediately disclosed.

It was announced officially, however, that he did it shortly before 7:40 p. m.

Last Bravado.

After his arrest in Chicago and his transfer here, Sankey lost all his bravado. It was reported reliably that he planned to plead guilty within a few days and accept a life sentence.

His only plea was that his wife, Mrs. Fern Sankey, be treated with leniency when her case came up. She was in the county jail here facing charges of aiding Sankey in the Boettcher kidnaping.

Sankey was taken into custody by United States Department of Justice operatives under the direction of Melvin Purvis. He was captured in a North Side Chicago barber shop January 31. He offered little resistance and readily admitted his identity.

His arrest was kept secret in Chicago and was announced five hours later in Washington. Department

Republicans Demand CWA Be Concluded

By Raymond Clapper.

Declaring CWA hopelessly saturated with graft and political favoritism, the Republican National committee, in a broadside last night, demanded abandonment of this emergency work agency as soon as possible.

The Republican attack, capping a wave of scandal charges, came while the Senate was debating the Administration request for $950,000,000, part of which would be used to continue CWA at least until May 1.

"The CWA should be liquidated at the earliest possible moment," the Republican National committee broadside said. "There should be no temporizing with those who demand its continuance. By the admission of its own officials, it is saturated with corruption, and so honeycombed with political favoritism that there is no hope of its being renovated.

"The President owes it to the honor of his Administration and his own self-respect to wind up its affairs."

Relief Rolls Preferable.

The National committee said that if those now on CWA pay rolls could not find private employment, they should be returned to relief rolls.

"If this Administration can not successfully shoulder the responsibility of conducting an organization dedicated to square dealing among the Nation's needy, involving the expenditure of over $10,000,000 a day, without the graft and discrimination which marks that organization, then it should disavow the responsibility altogether and pass the care of the needy in every community back to the local and State agencies which handled the situation in the first place!" the Republican statement said.

Not to disband this agency, the Republican committee said, would be tantamount to public notice that the Administration intended to use it to help win the 1934 elections.

"It is unthinkable that the CWA be continued beyond the shortest time necessary to bring its affairs to an orderly close," the statement said.

"To do so would be publicly to proclaim what is now being freely stated privately: namely, that the Administration intends to use the CWA as a political machine to control the 1934 elections. If this should be done, it would furnish the great-

Vare Again Reported As Slightly Improved

St. Lucie, Fla., Feb. 8 (U.P.).—William S. Vare, former United States Senator from Pennsylvania, showed slight improvement today. Vare suffered a paralytic stroke several weeks ago, and his condition was aggravated this week by the shock of learning of the death of a friend, Charles Fortner.

One More Dies As D. C. Waits Record Cold

5 Degrees Predicted Here; Frigid Wave Grips East; Ice Accidents Grow.

Another death was added yesterday to the cold weather's toll here as the Capital was warned to prepare for the lowest temperature in a decade.

A severe cold wave has descended suddenly from the Great Lakes region and subzero cold has tightened its grip on the East, the Weather Bureau said.

Robert Simpson, 13, of Bradbury Heights, Md., died yesterday morning at Gallinger Hospital of injuries suffered in a coasting crash the night previous in which his companion, Boyd Seaton, 16, was instantly killed. Two other boys, with them on the same sled when it collided with an auto at Benning road and Central avenue northeast, were slightly hurt.

Auto Accidents Numerous.

Auto accidents were numerous on the ice-crusted streets. The hills on Thirteenth street at Central High School, Connecticut avenue at Columbia road and Wisconsin avenue at Mount Alto Hospital, all of which bear dense traffic, especially during rush hours, tested the most skillful drivers. Skid chains helped only slightly, many motorists said.

The mercury drop began from Wednesday midnight's 35 degrees, going to 35 at 2 a. m., 26 at 6 a. m. and 21 at 10 a. m. By 2 o'clock in the afternoon the temperature had risen to 23. Then it started the predicted decline which is not expected to stop this side of 5 degrees above zero by daylight today. More snow was forecast.

Wanakena, a New York village on the western slope of the Adirondack Mountains, was probably the coldest spot in the country yesterday. Five thermometers at the State Forest Rangers School there registered 58 below zero, the Associated Press reported.

Syracuse Suffers Record Cold.

North Sea Storm Sinks Fishing Boat

Widespread Toll Ashore and at Sea Reported.

Hamburg, Germany, Feb. 8 (AP). A violent gale swept the North Sea and the Baltic coast today, causing widespread damage.

The fishing vessel Condor sank with all hands aboard off Estuary Wester. The North German Lloyd liner General Von Steuben, scheduled to dock this morning, was held up. Numerous small craft were damaged.

Trees were uprooted and houses unroofed in many places. The radio tower of the Fuhlsbuettel Airdrome was blown down.

Veterans Win Appeal Right

Compromise Is Granted for Presumptive Disabilities.

(United Press.)

A compromise on veterans' legislation was reached yesterday at a White House conference, under which the Administration will make concessions to advocates of greater benefits for the former soldiers, Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, majority leader, announced last night.

The compromise provides that the cases of all veterans whose disabilities were presumptively service connected, but who could not prove it and who therefore lost their compensation, shall be appealed to the Board of Veterans' Appeals here on motion of the veterans' administrator, and that pending final action on the appeals the veterans shall be restored to the rolls.

Time for consideration of such appeals is extended from six months to a year. Provisions for hospitalization of veterans unable to finance their own treatment, put into effect recently by Presidential order, will be written into the bill.

Farley Talks To Roosevelt On Air Awards

Possible Cancellations and Prosecutions Are Studied.

By Martha Dalrymple.

Cancellation of many important air mail contracts and criminal prosecution of various officials loomed as possibilities last night on the eve of the Senate trial of four men charged with contempt of the Senate purportedly by removing and destroying air mail correspondence under subpena.

Postmaster General Farley spent hours late yesterday with President Roosevelt and later with Attorney General Cummings. Accompanied by the Postoffice Department solicitor, Karl A. Crowley, who has attended all the air mail committee hearings in addition to making an independent investigation, Farley laid a complete report before the President.

His trip to the Department of Justice, it is believed, was for the purpose of securing legal advice before making any definite move toward cancellation.

Discussed Mail Contracts.

"I discussed the air mail situation with the President and also conferred with the Attorney General. I will have no further statement until after tomorrow morning when I will confer again with the Attorney General."

Either the President by Executive order or the Postmaster General has the right to cancel any Government mail contracts, provided they are satisfied that they are not compatible with public welfare. However, in view of the President's interest in developments it is thought likely that if there are any cancellations, it will be by Presidential order, on advice of the Postoffice Department.

In addition to Crowley, Farley was accompanied to the White House and the Department of Justice by W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General and Harllee Branch, Second Assistant, in whose division the air mail service operates.

The Attorney General, besides giving legal advice about the wisdom as to the legality of cancellation, is scanning the reports of his own operators who are investigating the air mail situation with a view to possible criminal action.

Col. Carl Ristine, special Assistant Attorney General in charge of the department's investigation, joined the conference with the Postoffice officials.

Brittin Loses Post.

Meanwhile three other interesting developments completed the day's activities in the air mail investigation, the dismissal of one of the air officals scheduled to stand trial today in the Senate from an advisory job with the Government; adoption by the Senate of the rules to govern today's trial, and jigsaw puzzle activities of Senate investigators in piecing together torn correspondence.

Col. L. H. Brittin, vice president of the Northwest Airways, who has been airport adviser for the CWA Minnesota Airport project, was relieved of his post yesterday. The announcement, made by the Department of Commerce, which is cooperating with the Civil Works Administration in the Nation-wide airport program, said that the action had been taken "for administrative reasons."

Department of Commerce figures however, indicate that there are no grounds for dissatisfaction with Brittin's work, since Minnesota has more fields than any other State and more than twice the number of men employed on airport projects than any other State. Since the program was started Minnesota has opened 55 new fields, improved 13 existing fields, and employed 7,173 men. Brittin was appointed in December.

Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, refused to amplify the Administration's reason in dispensing with Brittin's services, although it is generally believed that his intimate connection with air mail irregularities may have had something to do with it.

Trial Procedure Set.

The Senate pushed through its plans for the trial today of Brittin, William P. McCracken, jr., former Department of Commerce air official, Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express, and Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative for Western Air.

Without a record vote it adopted the rules of procedure offered by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, whose mail contract investigating committee unearthed the whole scandal.

After they are brought before the bar of the Senate the four defendants will be asked by Vice President Garner to "show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of the Senate on account of the destruction and removal of certain papers, files, and memoranda from the files of William P. MacCracken."

The clerk will then read the reports of Black's committee in which it summed up the evidence against the four men and requested that the Senate take action. Whereupon the Vice President will ask:

"Have you anything to say in excuse or extenuation of your connection with or participation in the matters described in such report and resolution?"

In reply to this question the defendants will be allowed counsel. Only the defense attorneys and the five members of the committee will be allowed to examine, cross-examine, and argue orally. Other members of the Senate will be allowed to ask questions only by preparing written questions for the President of the Senate to propound.

To Be Allowed Witnesses.

The respondents will be allowed to call defense witnesses "to testify to matters pertinent to the issue as the Senate may think proper."

The Senate will go into executive session for its deliberations, returning to an open meeting when it announces its decision.

"Nuisance! Profiteers!"

Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, retired, former chief of the Army Air Corps, told the House Military Affairs Committee that the "merchants" have been in control of the Army Air Corps since the Coolidge Administration and have been responsible for "profiteering" and lack of development. He also called photographers a "nuisance" and asked that they be put out of the committee room.

residential district shortly after Walter Magee, wealthy contractor friend, had received an anonymous telephone call, instructing him to pick up a ransom note on the rear steps of his office.

During his captivity Bremer was kept in a dark room with guards, working in relays of two, constantly sitting behind him night and day, he said. When he regained consciousness after being seized he was blindfolded and cautioned not to look around on pain of death.

Last night, after at least four notes had been received from the gang during his captivity, Bremer was freed. Upon entering a bus depot in Rochester, he learned he had missed the last bus for the Twin Cities, but took a train to Owatonna, where he caught the bus.

Kidnapers' Notes.

Three of the kidnapers' notes were received by Dr. H. T. Nippert, physician friend of the Bremers, on January 20. They were in a large envelope addressed to him and slipped under his front door. A milk bottle had been thrown through the front-door window to attract his attention.

Dr. Nippert, however, did not find the notes until the next morning when an unidentified man telephoned him to "go down and look at your front door and don't be afraid."

Addressed in ink by the kidnaped Bremer, to Dr. Nippert, the envelope contained notes for him, Magee and Adolph Bremer. Nippert's missive instructed him to deliver the other two, which he did.

After the notes were received by Nippert, the family insisted repeatedly no communication had been received from the gang. The captors' silence finally prompted Adolph to issue a statement last Saturday begging for return of his son and pledging his word of honor that any contact would be kept secret.

He gave the gang three days and three nights in which to open negotiations without outside interference. In denying yesterday noon that contact had been established, Adolph announced he was extending the time of grace until midnight today. His son's release followed about six hours later.

A fourth communication was believed to have been received some time during the last three days, since Magee, the intermediary, turned over the ransom to the gang during that time.

Magee, with members of the family, remained inside the Bremer home, guarded by Department of Justice investigators, and could not be reached. Although the complete story of how the money was transferred still was lacking, it was known a small coupe had figured in the delivery.

Its inside windows were soaped and the rear window was slightly open. A note from the gang was in a pocket of the car, and, after reading it, Magee left two bundles of money, wrapped in two large cardboard suit boxes and tied with heavy cord, on the seat.

As bits of Bremer's experience leaked out, reporters sought unsuccessfully to gain entrance to the Bremer home. Various ruses were attempted, one woman reporter, dressed in a nurse's garb, being ejected after getting inside the door.

Thanks Roosevelt.

Shortly afterward Adolph Bremer issued a statement thanking President Roosevelt and Gov. Floyd B. Olson and others for the interest they had shown. He prayed "that other fathers and mothers will be spared the agony of a similar ordeal," and said "the hideous hours of suspense have been almost unbearable for all of us."

Gov. Olson announced a conference tomorrow of all law enforcement officials in the State at his office to lay plans for "crushing the menace of kidnaping."

It was a happy day for Magee. Daily since the abduction he has put in 14 to 16 hours sitting beside telephones in his office and at his home. He, like the family, was alternately assailed by fears of Bremer's death and hopes for his early return.

Mrs. Bremer, wife of the banker, remained in seclusion to a greater extent than did any other member of the family. Her intimate friends said she stood the strain of waiting with Spartan fortitude. She and Betty, the 8-year-old daughter of the kidnap victim, were at Adolph's home today for the reunion with Edward.

Prosecution Speeded In St. Louis Kidnaping

St. Louis, Feb. 8 (AP).—Prosecutor Arthur Anderson, of St. Louis County, said today he will seek the earliest possible grand jury action in the cases of three men and a woman arrested yesterday in the kidnaping of Dr. I. D. Kelley, in 1931.

Preliminary hearings for the four were set for March 6, but this was looked upon as merely a routine action, which will not be required if a grand jury indicts the quartet.

Counsel for the woman, who was released today on $25,000 bond, denied that she had any connection with the kidnaping.

The other three, held in jail, are Bart Davit, who was acquitted in May, 1932, of a charge of robbery in connection with the attempted kidnaping of Oscar Johnson, wealthy St. Louisan; John C. Johnson, 51, colored, whose farm shack in St. Charles County corresponds to a description given by Dr. Kelley of his place of imprisonment, and a man known to his associates as "The Dago."

U. S. Drive Intensified By Bremer's Release

The return of kidnaped Edward G. Bremer brought no respite to Justice Department agents in their drive on the underworld's "snatch" racket, according to the Associated Press.

With only one case lost in the 20 undertaken since they started the drive last March, every one of the 313 agents scattered throughout the country was on the alert last night for the slightes clew which might lead to arrest of the St. Paul brewer's son's abductors.

Officials of the Department's Bureau of Investigation here maintained silence about what their next move would be. It, was learned however, that J. Edgar Hoover, bureau chief, was in frequent communication by telephone with Harold Nathan, his assistant, in St. Paul.

"Give up" is an unknown phrase to the bureau. All of its scientific methods of crime detection as well as its sources of private information in the criminal world likely will be used from now until Bremer's kidnapers are arrested—no matter how long that takes.

RFC Chairman's Firm Clears Receiver Plea

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 8 (AP).—dismissal of a receivership suit against the Fort Worth Properties Corporation, one of the Texas interests of Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, was ordered by Federal Judge James C. Wilson here today on motion of attorneys for the plaintiff, Mrs. Selma Sternberg, Missouri widow.

Army Aircraft Limited to 276, Says Mitchell

Rest of Force Obsolete, House Committee Is Informed.

The Army has only 276 planes fit for use in war, William Mitchell, former chief of the American Expeditionary Air Forces, told the House Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

Mitchell, who in 1926 was court-martialed after his outspoken criticism of Army aviation, renewed his plea for preparedness in the air and declared that "merchants" and "racketeers" had made a "hodge-podge" of the Nation's aviation.

The committee planned to call Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, today to testify to the manner in which Army airplanes are bought under his direction.

"Merchants" in Control.

Mitchell testified that the Navy Department had put a "soft pedal" on aeronautical experimentation and that merchants, backed by steel companies, controlled Government airplane contracts.

As a result, he said, although the Army is supposed to have 1,800 planes, "the actual planes that could be used for service purposes amount to 47 bombers—and they are obsolete—150 pursuit and about 79 observation, and we have been spending $187,000,000 a year."

Mitchell told the committee that "merchants" were in control of the Government under Coolidge and later under Hoover.

"These 'merchants,'" he said, "sent the Shenandoah over the mountains over the protest of her commander and, of course, she was lost."

Hawaiian Flight Cited.

He said the Navy's flight to Hawaii several years ago was made without adequate preparation.

"One fellow was afloat for nine days before he found the Navy," he continued. "The Navy never did find him."

Mitchell declared the United States is going backward instead of forward in aviation, because "fakers" have had charge of aviation.

"There is indisputable evidence that nobody can invade this country if we have a proper air force," he said. "The American people want a new deal, and that applies to National defense. The air forces have a mission of their own, quite separate from the Army on the land and the Navy on the sea.

Mitchell declared that submarines will be the only way of going about by sea in the next war and that battleships and cruisers will be useless. He urged the building of more airplane carriers, as well as more airplanes and dirigibles. He said the Army should have 2,400 planes ready for service.

Air Department Advised.

In answer to Chairman McSwain's question concerning the manner of administering the air service, Mitchell advised that there should be a Department of Aeronautics equal in power to and independent of the War and Navy Departments. He said the 2,400 planes should include at least 400 long-distance bombers.

Airships of the Akron type, he said, are tremendously important, and are lost only because "people don't know how to handle an airship."

Army aviation officers can not be relied upon to give necessary facts when they are called before an investigating committee, he said.

"They have been pounded on the head so hard that they can't call their souls their own," he added. "They have to watch every word they say. It is a terrible condition of affairs. The organization of aviation is so complex that the right hand doesn't know what the left is doing. It is a regular hodge podge."

2 at German Debt Conference Return

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—John Foster Dulles and Laird Bell, who represented American interests at the long-term German debt conference in Berlin, returned today and said material progress had been made.

"Results were far better than we had anticipated," they declared. "Aside from getting Germany to increase the amount of payments to American bondholders, the greatest accomplishment from the American standpoint was Germany's agreement to the principle of uniform treatment of all creditors as the basis for the meeting called in April, at which time Germany proposes to ask a general reduction in interest rates."

Kidnapings of Past Year

Thousands Paid for Release of Victims; Abductors Convicted in Most Cases; Brooke Hart Killers Paid With Lives in Lynching.

(By the Associated Press.)

Here are some of the outstanding kidnaping cases in the past year, culminating with the release of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, Wednesday night:

Denver—Charles Boettcher 2d, returned March 1, 1933, after 16 days' imprisonment; $60,000 paid; suspected kidnapers either convicted or awaiting trial.

Harwichport, Mass.—Peggy McMath, returned May 5 after three days; $80,000 paid; kidnapers convicted.

Kansas City—Mary McElroy, returned May 28 after being held one day; $30,000 paid; kidnapers convicted.

St. Paul—William Hamm, jr., returned June 15; $100,000 paid; suspects acquitted.

Chicago—John Factor, returned July 12 after 12 days; $70,000 paid; suspects awaiting retrial.

Albany, N. Y.—John J. O'Connell, jr., released July 30 after being held 23 days; $40,000 demanded.

Alton, Ill.—August Luer, banker, returned July 16 after six days; kidnapers convicted.

San Jose, Calif.—Brooke Hart, kidnaped November 9; slain; kidnapers lynched.

St. Paul—Edward G. Bremer, kidnaped January 17, released February 7; $200,000 reported paid.

Diva Admits Troth to Film Hero of Past

CAMELA PONSELLE.

Boston, Feb. 8 (AP).—Carmela Ponselle left Boston today for Chicago with words of affection for Francis X. Bushman, movie hero of a past generation, to whom she said she would be married soon.

"He's marvelous; he's the grandest person in the world," said the mezzo soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, as she boarded a Chicago-bound train. She sang in an opera here last night.

Until just prior to her departure, Miss Ponselle withheld confirmation of the announcement made in Chicago by Bushman that they would be married. Finally, however, she divulged she was going to meet him at 9 a. m. tomorrow in Chicago, where they would discuss their matrimonial plans.

Miss Ponselle also let it be known she plans to retire from the opera stage within a year.

"I will retire within a year to devote my time to my New York school and philanthropy," she said. I love children and I understand them. Any mother should be able to tell when a child reaches the age of five whether he is fitted for a musical or dramatic career. I can tell by the poise, mannerisms and speech."

The Bushman-Ponselle nuptials will be a quiet affair. The date, though not set, probably will be within a month.

"The woman usually sets the date," she said, "I have been too busy to do that. All I can say is that it will be a quiet ceremony. I don't like pomp and splendor."

Meanwhile Bushman, now a partner in a Chicago retail liquor store, awaited the arival of his bride-to-be. His partner, Milton Pollock, quoted him as saying of the affair:

"I'm the happiest man in the universe."

Bushman gained fame in the movies before the advent of the "talkie." Marriage to Miss Ponselle would be his third. Both of Bushman's two previous marriages ended in divorce. His second wife was Beverly Bayne, who also starred in movies of the past. He had five children by his first marriage and one by the second.

G.O.P. Demand "Graft-Ridden" CWA Be Ended

Failure to Wind Up Plan to Indicate "Election Machine," Body Says.

est example of organized venality in history—an attempt to nullify the voice of a free electorate by a corrupt, paternalistic organization."

Urge Compensation Change.

No suggestion was made as to how soon the Republican National committee thought CWA could be disbanded. Meantime, it advocated empowering Comptroller General McCarl to scrutinize handling of CWA funds.

It also advocated revocation of the ruling of Harry L. Hopkins, CWA administrator, applying provisions of the Federal employes' compensation act to some 4,000,000 CWA workers. Under this ruling, it was stated, workers totally or permanently disabled may draw as high as $116 a month for the rest of their lives as against a maximum of $100 a month for a former service man.

"In other words," the statement continued, "the Government is being committed to a permanent pension roll of 4,000,000, twice the number of the United States overseas force in the World War, who are now on the CWA pay rolls. This includes those who got on by reason of political favoritism. It includes those who are performing such ridiculous jobs as raking leaves, cleaning rubbish, teaching bridge and tap-dancing classes, and manicuring fingers of inmates of charitable institutions. It includes the vast army of Democratic politicians who have insinuated themselves on the CWA pay roll as supervisors, superintendents, timekeepers, &c. Already this sideline expense of the CWA has amounted, in 60 days, to $15,000,000."

CWA Workers Crowd Hospitals.

It was also alleged that Government hospitals are being filled up with CWA workers seeking medical treatment and that at the present rate the Government either will have to build more hospitals or pay for treatment in private institutions.

The Republican National committee said the scandals in the CWA were inevitable, considering that it was set up over night by a "panicky" Administration to cover up and divert attention from the failure of the recovery program to relieve unemployment; that it was a political set-up dominated largely by Democrats, and that it was organized solely to spend enormous sums of money quickly.

Recalling that Administrator Hopkins had indicated some disillusionment at the rapacity of individuals toward CWA, the committee said: "Certainly the same may not be said of his superiors in the Democratic party. Those old stagers knew when local political leaders are placed under a $400,000,000 plum tree and are told to shake it—they really shake it."

The committee said President Roosevelt himself had contributed to the situation by his executive order creating CWA, in which it was exempted from all civil service requirements.

Vienna Raids Reveal Bomb Plot Evidence

Socialist Party Expected to Be Outlawed by Dollfuss.

Vienna, Feb. 8 (AP).—What an official communique described as "an unprecedented criminal plot of Bolshevists and Marxist elements" was uncovered in a series of police raids on Socialist centers, culminating in the ocupation today of the Socialist newspaper Arbeiter Zeitung.

Several thousand high-powered bombs, each large enough to blow up a building, were among the explosives confiscated in Vienna and nearby cities, said the statement.

"In other words," it added, "there were enough bombs to destroy entire sections of the city."

Police Commandant Held.

A number of leaders of the outlawed Socialist Republican Guards were arrested in connection with the reported discoveries, including the commandant of police in the Vienna municipality.

Several of the arrested leaders confessed, it was announced, but the extent and character of the alleged confessions were not revealed.

The government pointed out that the anti-Socialist action should not be interpreted as a move opposed to the working class and warned workers not to permit themselves to be "lured into attempting antigovernment demonstrations."

Police found indications of renewed secret activity among members of the outlawed guard and recently it became evident they were "systematically collecting weapons and munitions for violent action on a big scale," the statement alleged.

Party May Be Outlawed.

The Socialist party, some observers believed, may be outlawed as a result of the reported findings.

Persistent rumors that Vice Chancellor Emil Fey would launch a drastic drive against Socialists as soon as his superior, Engelbert Dollfuss, was out of the country, were partly confirmed by the raids.

The officers, in steel helmets and with fixed bayonets, took over the building of the Socialist Arbeiter Zeitung and the official Socialist organ, Toher, and descended on the headquarters "to search for concealed weapons."

The search continued tonight, with reports circulating to the effect that Socialist Vienna's City hall would be occupied and a federal commissioner appointed to administer the city's affairs.

Papers Not Suppressed.

Although the Socialist's printing plants were raided in various sections, the party publications were not suppressed.

Chancellor Dollfuss was in Budapest, conferring on unannounced subjects with Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary.

A dispatch from Budapest said Dollfuss declared that no change in the Austrian government should be expected and that "the government's position has never been so strong as today."

Labor on Code Boards Sought

Green Makes Demand for Representation on Authorities.

(Associated Press.)

A new demand for labor representation on code authorities was made yesterday by William Green in an editorial appearing in the current number of the American Federationist, official organ of the Federation of Labor.

"Since the code authority exercises public control," Green said, "labor maintains that in addition to representation of the industry, it shall provide representation for workers and consumers, either in advisory capacity or as members."

Green argued that the customary view of industry that the code authorities deal with management questions and therefore should not include labor representatives, was not sound because principal responsibilities of the code ruling committees were administrative.

Green said labor and consumer representatives, whether as participating members or in an advisory capacity, should be notified of meetings of the authorities and have complete access to all records and statistical data connected with code administration.

"The future of the National Recovery Administration," he said, "turns upon the decision made on this issue."

Brother of Al Capone Due to Go Free Soon

Ralph Capone, brother of Al Capone, will be released from the Federal Penitentiary at McNeil Island, Wash., February 27, when his sentence expires, provided he pays a $10,000 fine, Department of Justice officials said yesterday.

Failure to pay the fine, they said, would extend his term by 30 days and require him to take a pauper's oath. Capone was sentenced to three years for violation of the Federal income tax law.

Fast Action Foreseen For Newspaper Code

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 8 (AP).—A belief that the code of fair competition for the newspaper industry will be signed as drafted in the near future by President Roosevelt was expressed before the Ohio Newspaper Association convention today by Charles R. Butler, of Mankato, Minn.

He told newspapermen that every consideration had been given to problems of small newspapers under the code. Butler, president of the Inland Daily Press Association, is a member of the newspaper code of Justice agents who had been working for two years in trailing the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby flew to Chicago from the East to question Sankey.

Notes received in the Lindbergh case were compared with Sankey's handwriting. He was confronted with the fact that telephone calls were made from his ranch at Pierre, S. Dak., to New Jersey at the time the Lindbergh baby was missing.

Despite constant questioning by a dozen or more secret service men, Sankey clung to his denial that he had any part in the Lindbergh kidnaping. He readily—too readily, Federal officers believed—admitted he was the leader in the abduction of Boettcher and Haskell Bohn, of St. Paul.

He admitted obtaining approximately $30,000 of the $60,000 paid for the release of Boettcher, after the wealthy Denver man had been held 16 days on the Sankey ranch in South Dakota. He also led the kidnaping of Bohn in St. Paul later, and received $12,000 ransom in that case, he admitted.

Sankey had been living in Chicago several months under an alias. Agents trailed him through a letter mailed in South Dakota. They watched him and when he entered a barber shop for a shave one of the Federal men stuck a gun in his face.

Taken by Surprise.

The former rancher was taken completely by surprise. "All right, you've got me," he told Federal agents. "I'm Verne Sankey, all right."

Federal officers then raided an apartment where he had been living with a woman who gave her name as Helen Mattern. They found several revolvers and two shotguns. The woman was taken into custody, but later was released.

Officers also found a letter in his apartment, addressed to the family of Boettcher. The letter threatened to kill Boettcher if an unnamed sum of money was not delivered at once and said that "if you double-cross me again and notify police, I'll kill him." Sankey wrote that "life means nothing to me now and this kidnaping is more for revenge than anything else."

Soldier Admits Two Holdups

Cavalryman Is Held for Grand Jury Under $5,000 Bond.

Pleading guilty to robbery charges in Police Court yesterday, a United States Army private was held for grand jury action under $5,000 bond.

Frank E. Green, 26, a cavalryman stationed at the Army Finance School, was charged with using an Army revolver in the holdup and robbery of two persons near Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue northwest, last week.

Less than ten minutes after Mrs. Isabelle Poss, of 2926 Tenth street northwest, reported she was robbed at gun point by a uniformed soldier, Green was arrested a short distance from the White House. He was identified by Mrs. Poss, and later pointed out as the man who held up Marion H. Hedges, of 305 Dorset street, Chevy Chase, Md., near the same intersection.

The soldier was alleged to have taken $5 from Mrs. Poss and $18 from Hedges. The gun and money, police said, were found in his possession.

Tuberculosis Tests For Children Urged

G. W. U. Institute Is Told of X-Ray's Value.

Two physicians yesterday advised the use of X-ray and tuberculin tests for the early detection of tuberculosis infection of children at the session of the Tuberculosis Institute at George Washington University.

The speakers were two specialists in childhood tuberculosis, Dr. H. E. Kleinschmidt, of the National Tuberculosis Association, and Dr. Samuel C. Pruitt, clinic director of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Association.

"With the best of contact examination," Dr. Kleinschmidt said, "many childhood cases elude the attention of the doctor. One of the supplementary devices for finding cases is that of examining school children with the tuberculin test and X-ray. By this method early cases are found among apparently

N. Y., the Associated Press added. Twenty-one below at Syracuse was an all-time February record. Rochester reported 12 below. Lake Ontario was reported frozen for the first time in 60 years.

Other subzero temperatures in the East included 26 at St. Albans, Vt., Buffalo, 8; Binghamton, 9, and Toronto, 22.

Sault Ste. Marie was the coldest point in Michigan, 36 below. Chicago was relatively comfortable at 10 above. It was 10 below in Detroit, 12 below at Lansing and 6 below at Escanaba.

The abnormal amount of snow and persistent cold which have enveloped Washington and environs since February 1 were blamed yesterday by Joseph B. Kincer, chief of the weather bureau's division of climate and crop weather, on the unusual route taken by high pressure areas from the Arctic Circle.

Drought Features Weather Freak.

Contrary to custom, the pressure areas have shunned the westward passage via the plains and Ohio Valley and struck the East by way of Eastern Canada and the Great Lakes. Consequently snow and cold have been extremely severe in New England and along the seaboard, while States West of the Rockies are enjoying exceptionally warm weather.

Last winter, when the high pressure areas adhered to tradition, conditions were reversed and the West shivered while the East had mild temperatures, on the whole.

Since February 1, the day of the 8-inch snowfall, temperatures have averaged two or three degrees below normal. The precipitation on that one day alone, said Kincer, was above the normal average for the entire month of February.

Another symptom of the weather freak, he declared, is the drought in Illinois, Kansas, Oklahoma and the Rocky Mountain States, which have had virtually no rainfall whatever in more than a month.

Girl Seriously Hurt Here.

Injured when she was struck by an automobile after alighting from a street car at Wisconsin avenue and Davenport street northwest, Carol Gochenour, 16, of 4805 Wisconsin avenue northwest, was reported in a serious condition at Georgetown Hospital last night.

She suffered a fractured collar bone and possible internal injuries. Mrs. Nettie Howard, 20, of Rockville, Md., said to have been driving the machine which hit her, was held for questioning by police.

Others hurt in falls on the ice are:

Mrs. Flora Davis, 54, of 948 L street northwest, fractured right ankle; Rosalia Grill, 47, of 2935 Upton street northwest, fractured right arm; Gordon F. Fox, 36, 2817 Connecticut avenue northwest, fractured left leg; Cyril Carroll, 48, of 825 Ingraham street northwest, fractured ankle.

Many Others Injured.

Jake Arrowood, 40, address unknown, sprained hand; Margaret Buck, 41, of 1817 Rhode Island avenue northwest, bruises; Anna Scott, 38, of 1930 Temperance avenue northeast, fractured wrist; Charles Palmer, 29, of 1902 S street northwest, lacerations to the face and head; Charles Justice, 49, of 212 Indiana avenue northwest, several fractured ribs.

Wilhelmina Bobbitt, 49, of 925 Upshur street northwest, fractured ankle, and Margaret Butt, 41, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, injured back.

Many others received treatment for hurts at hospitals throughout the city, but declined to give their names.

Student Loses Clothes In Suitcase Worth $282

John J. Talley, a student at Georgetown University, told police yesterday that a suitcase, containing clothing valued at $282, was stolen from the entrance of Copley Hall, on the university grounds.

of the various State administration machines they do not now have.

Determination of the supporters of the McCarran amendment to keep it in the measure was made clear just before adjournment when Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, moved to instruct the Senate conferees not to yield to the House on that proposal. The upshot of a rather informal argument in the course of which Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, party leader, made a point of order, was a promise by Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, that the Senate representatives would not yield on the provision.

Without a record vote the Senate cried down an amendment by Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana, providing that $50,000,000 of the appropriation be devoted to the school systems of the States.

Vote on the Hayden amendment apparently caught the Senate by surprise. Vice President Garner threw his steam roller into high gear and ruled theamendment was beaten by a voice vote, and when several Senators sprang to their feet with cries for a record vote, ruled not enough had asked for the ayes and nays. A count on a standing vote showed 19 for and 15 against the Hayden amendment, a toal of 34, considerably less than a quorum, but that point wasn't raised.

Confer With President.

That was the first break against the Administration during consideration of the bill. Soon thereafter Senator Robinson, majority leader, and SeCator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, went to the White House and conferred with President Roosevelt, but both refused to discuss the conference.

Votes were not based on party lines. The ten who voted for the $2,500,000,000 Cutting amendment were: Democrats, Black, Alabama; Bone, Washington; Costigan, Colorado; Dill, Washington; Long, McCarran, and Wheeler, Montana; Republicans, Cutting and LaFollette; Farmer-Labor, Shipstead, Minnesota.

The 14 who voted for the LaFollette amendment were: Democrats—Black, Bone, Costigan, Dill, Hatch New Mexico; Long, McCarran, Murphy, Iowa; Pope, Idaho; Russell, Georgia, and Wheeler. Republicans—Cutting and LaFollette. Farmer-Labor—Shipstead.

Cunard and White Star Agreement Is Reached

London, Feb. 8 (AP).—A final agreement for merger of the Cunard and White Star steamship lines has been reached with the British treasury, the House of Commons was informed today by Leslie Hore-Belisha, financial secretary to the treasury.

An agreement published simultaneously revealed the new company will be called "Cunard-White Star, Ltd." It will acquire from Cunard and the White Star (Oceanic Steamship Navigation Co.) their North Atlantic fleets and good will.

Tennessee Hillsmen Plan Refuge in Brazil

Maynardville, Tenn., Feb. 8 (AP).—Like their forefathers, who penetrated the East Tennesse mountain wilderness to seek homes and fortunes, a group of farmers near here are planning to escape the encroachment of civilization by emigrating to uncultivated regions of Brazil.

The lands they have long tilled soon will be buried beneath the waters of an 83-square-mile lake formed by the Tennessee Valley Authority's new $34,000,000 Norris Dam, on Clinch River.

Baroness Von Stamwitz Plays Her Final Tragedy

Norwalk, Conn., Feb. 8 (AP).—Baroness Elizabeth Von Stamwitz Dangfeld Burger, 78, known on the stage as Baroness Von Stamwitz and Liska, died today in the Norwalk Hospital.

Previous to her retirement, 35 years ago, she was regarded as one of the leading tragediennes in America and Europe.

Kisses Away From Home Not Cruel, Rules Court

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—A husband's failure to confine all his kisses to his wife is not essentially cruel, Supreme Court Justice Peter Schumuck ruled today.

The ruling was made in connection with abandonment and nonsupport claims, made by Mrs. Kathleen Johnson, 38, British war nurse, in her suit for separation from Herbert W. Johnson, 40, British engineer. The woman's charges were dismissed and the husband's counterclaim for an annulment was granted by Justice Schmuck.

Edwin Gruhl's Estate Valued $362,338 Net

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Edwin Gruhl, of Hunterdon County, N. J., who was president of the North American Co., left a net estate of $362,338 when he died January 22, 1933, a transfer tax appraisal filed today showed.

The entire estate was left to Mrs. Helen W. Klingler, of Whitefish Bay, Wis., his widow.

Crime Suspected In Disappearance

Florida Produce Man Parks Truck, Fails to Return.

The mysterious disappearance of a Florida produce dealer was being investigated by police last night.

Reported to be carrying a large amount of money, Joe Corver, 50, of Miami, disappeared shortly after 10 a. m. yesterday after leaving a Western Union Telegraph office at Twelth and Water street southwest.

He drove here from Florida in his produce truck, and went directly to the telegraph office, where a friend, Charles T. Williams, is employed. Williams told police Corver planned to visit downtown stores, but said he would return shortly.

U. S. Suspends Weirton Inquiry Pending Vote

The Department of Justice announced yesterday it had suspended its investigation of the Weirton Steel Co. case pending election of labor representatives under supervision of the Labor Board, according to the United Press.

Attorney General Cummings said: "All our activities in this dispute are suspended temporarily. I understand the elections will be held soon and we are awaiting it before resuming our activities."

4 Officials, 4 Gangsters Indicted in Scandal

Newark, N. J., Feb. 8 (AP).—Eleven persons, including Police Commissioner August L. Lacombe, Police Chief Andrew Coleman, two police lieutenants and a patrolman, were indicted by the Essex grand jury today, following its three weeks' investigation into the Irvington slot machine scandal.

The true bills named, in addition to the Irvington officials, four alleged gangsters. Several of the accused were "John Does."

Insull Receivership Collusion Admitted

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP).—Despite the preference of Calvin Fentress to be sole receiver for Insull Utility Investments, Inc., Samuel Insull dictated the appointment of one of his attorneys as coreceiver, it was stated today in the "town meeting" discussion of Insull receiverships in Federal court.

Abner Stillwell, vice president of the Continental Illinois National Bank, retold on the witness stand his testimony in a previous investigation which resulted in a Federal judge upholding charges of collusion in the selection of receivers.

France Moves To Hold Gold; Fund Planned

Barter Loan With Britain Expected to Halt Trade War.

Paris, Feb. 8 (U.P.).—France today took steps to check the outflow of gold that has been gathering momentum since the United States devalued its dollar and threw franc parity below the dollar level.

The Bank of France raised its rediscount rate from 2½ to 3 per cent, presumably in cooperation with the Federal Reserve System, in the hope it would prevent the exodus of gold and check French investment in Wall street.

A second step toward keeping the franc up to stop gold shipments was a reported negotiation with Great Britain for a loan to provide a franc equalization fund. It was believed the French would obtain the loan through barter with Britain, in return restoring the quota cuts on British goods and thus terminating the Franco-British trade war.

Flood Continues.

Meantime, gold continued to leave France by ship and airplane. The Bank of France weekly statement showed a decline of 194,534,608 francs ($12,489,121), to 76,850,361 ($4,934,441). Further losses were anticipated in the next statement and the losses were expected to continue until the franc reached 15.12 to the dollar. Above that level the gold flow might be reversed. The franc closed today at 15.57 to the dollar (6.423 cents a franc), the firmer price brought on by the favorable reception to Doumergue's accession to the premiership.

The S. S. President Harding sailed today from Havre carrying 175,000,000 francs ($11,235,000) in gold for the United States. Airplanes took 80,000,000 francs ($5,136,000) gold to London. Another 60,000,000 francs in gold arrived in London from Holland and Switzerland.

17 Liners to Sail.

Seventeen liners carrying gold estimated at a billion francs ($64,200,000) will sail for the United States in the next few days. Meanwhile, special airplanes and trains are rushing gold to London, since many traders desire an immediate profit on the gold which is obtained through deals on the London gold market.

Gold at London was priced at 136 shillings 9 pence today. At the closing rate for the pound in London—$5.01¼—the American equivalent worked out at $34.27 per ounce, a discount of 2.13 per cent from the $35 American rate. That would make the dollar in gold $1.0213, against $1.0282 yesterday.

asked regarding reports that a Government official had been involved in the Army motorization case, replied that the question was "difficult to answer without being misunderstood."

The investigation broadened to include airplane purchases as well as automobiles. The House Military Committee summoned before it Assistant Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, who, committee members said, would be asked regarding the manner of airplane purchases for the War Department. The committee, however, explained it had no reports of irregularities in aircraft purchases.

Woodring went before the grand jury to testify in the initial phases of the Army motorization inquiry.

Regis Noel, president of the District Bar Association; and William A. Roberts, president of the Federal Bar Association.

Policeman Wins Race With Suspect

Loot From Jewelry Store Is Thrown Into Snow.

Captured after a foot race with a policeman, Wesley Smith, 44, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was arraigned in Police Court yesterday and after pleading not guilty to housebreaking was held for the grand jury under $5,000 bond.

It was alleged that Smith smashed a window of Paul's Watch Shop, 1112 G street northwest and pocketed jewelry, but in a subsequent pursuit by police he tossed watches, rings and pins into snow banks near Eleventh and G streets northwest.

Policeman Elmer G. Smith heard the window smash. He started in pursuit of a fleeing figure and captured Smith several blocks away, he said. The loot was recovered after hours of digging in the snow.

Firm Realized 90% Profit On Army Order

1929 through the first four months of 1933, profit 1.4 per cent; Douglas Aircraft Co., total sales $9,740,480 from 1930 through the first eight months of 1933, profit 19 per cent; Bendix Stromberg Co., total carburetor sales, $80,610 from 1930 through six months of 1933, profit 68 per cent.

The Wright Aeronautical Co., Pratt-Whitney's biggest competitor in the engine field, was listed as having total Army sales of $19,020,710 from 1927 through the first two months of 1933, but as having suffered a .3 per cent loss on them.

Boeing's average 32 per cent Army profit was calculated from these figures: 1929, sales $374,884, profit 7 per cent; 1930, sales $1,207,371, profit 17 per cent; nine months of 1931, sales $1,805,891, profit 55 per cent; three months of 1931 and eight months of 1932, sales $284,439, profit 90 per cent; four months of 1932 and eight months of 1933, sales $846,025 and profit 14 per cent.

Douglas suffered a 2.3 per cent loss in eight months of 1933, but in 1932, its profit was 9 per cent; in 1931, it was 33 per cent, and in 1929-1930, 22 per cent.

Some other firms besides Wright were shown to have suffered losses. One of these was the Consolidated Aircraft Co., whose Army sales were $1,897,585 for 1931, 1932 and four months of 1933, with a loss of 5 per cent.

Military Figures Contrasted.

The audit showed that where Pratt-Whitney made 23 per cent on Army sales, its Navy profit on $21,299,887 was 36 per cent; Curtiss' 1.4 per cent profit on Army sales contrasted with a .6 loss on Navy contracts; Consolidated lost 5 per cent on Army business, but made 2.8 per cent on the Navy's; Douglas' Army profit was 19 per cent, its Navy profit 21 per cent; Boeing's Army profit was 32 per cent, its Navy profit 21 per cent; Wright's Army loss of .3 per cent compared with a Navy profit of 5 per cent, and Bendix made 48 per cent on Navy business, against 68 per cent on Army contracts.

But in many cases commercial profits were much higher than those made on either of the two services. Pratt-Whitney's commercial business was shown to have netted 72 per cent in 1927, 50 per cent in 1928, 100 per cent in 1929, 33 per cent in 1930, 42 per cent in 1931, 55 per cent in 1932, and 43 per cent in the first four months of 1933.

Virginia Liquor Producing Plan Made Optional

Mandatory Distillery Operation Dropped by Senate.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Feb. 8.—Reversing its original approval of mandatory State liquor manufacture, the Senate finance committee today prepared to favorably report tomorrow a whisky dispensary system bill.

Already passed by the House, debate on the measure will begin next week in the Senate. Leaders will urge prompt action in a move for legal liquor sales by March 1.

As finally amended, the bill would empower the control board to operate distilleries if conditions warranted. The compulsory clause was stricken out, 10 to 7, over the violent protest of its author, Senator John J. Wicker, jr., Richmond.

The vote came after former Senator James Barron, Norfolk, told the committee private capital would be unable to successfully compete with the State. He insisted a mandatory provision would prevent new Virginia distillery investments totalling millions of dollars.

Would Not Eliminate U. S. Tax.

The witnesses contended passage of the mandatory clause would not prevent the State from paying Federal gallonage taxes as claimed by its proponents. He charged private enterprise would be stifled and the State would lose thousands of dollars in distillery license fees.

Mr. Wicker declared the State would be better off financially by compulsory manufacture irrespective of court tax rulings.

"Unless the State makes its own whisky," he shouted, "the bootlegger will reap a golden harvest. So will the liquor monopoly. The State—and in turn the consumer—will be forced to pay exorbitant prices for its whisky."

Mr. Barron failed in an attempt to force reconsideration of an amendment under which gubernatorial appointments to the three-man Liquor Control Board would be subject to Assembly confirmation.

Senator Aubrey C. Weaver, Front Royal, won committee indorsement of an amendment to fix the tax on strong beer at $1 a barrel instead of $2.75. He announced plans to ask a similar reduction in the levy on the 3.2 beer.

"A reasonable tax," he predicted, "would bring back the nickel glass of beer. At any rate we should encourage the drinking of beer instead of whisky."

Farmers Would Benefit.

The committee unanimously sanctioned an amendment by Senator J. B. Woodson, Lowesville, to legalize sale to the liquor board or authorized dealers of brandy made in State distilleries from waste apples. Growers would be required to convert their crop into cider before delivery to manufacturing plants.

"Farmers aren't getting much for cull apples," Mr. Woodson declared. "This amendment will save them $1,000,000 a year."

Another committee change would give judges discretionary authority in ordering amnesty for prohibition defendants.

Earlier Delegate R. F. McMurran, Portsmouth, introduced in the House a resolution for amendment of the State constitution to effect salary economies by reducing the number of Commonwealth attorneys from 100 to 33. He proposed one such for each judicial district.

A bill designed to give political subdivisions 50 per cent of the profit from operation of liquor stores was advanced by Delegate George W. Herring, Woodbridge.

Private employers would be required to pay their workers at least semi-monthly under a proposal offered by Delegate J. Fred Birrell, Alexandria.

Peery Appoints 27 To Personal Staff

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—Gov. Peery Thursday announced his personal staff of 27 members from all sections of Virginia, together with two ex-officio members, Adjutant Gen. S. G. Waller, chief of staff, and Col. John S. Williams, clerk of the House of Delegates, personal aid.

They Favor Virginia as Distiller

Foster Studio, Richmond.

Thirsty Virginians are not only going to be allowed to drink whisky and other alcoholic beverages with the consent of the Old Dominion, but there is a good chance that their highballs will actually be manufactured by the State. A State manufacture amendment to the liquor control bill introduced by State Senator John J. Wicker, jr., of Richmond (left), has been adopted by the Senate finance committee, and has a more than fair chance of being approved by the Assembly. Meanwhile former State Senator C. O'Conor Goolrick (right), of Fredericksburg, has asserted that Virginia can not escape the Federal tax by going into the distilling business. Mr. Goolrick, a member of the commission which recommended the dispensary liquor bill now under consideration, said, "I have no objection to a provision to permit the State to manufacture liquor, but I do not think it should be made mandatory and there is no chance of escaping the Federal tax by such manufacture."

Girls' Hi-Y Clubs Will Meet Tonight

Annual Virginia Sessions at Martinsville.

Martinsville, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). The annual Virginia conference of Girls' Hi-Y and Girls' Reserves Clubs will begin here tomorrow night and continue until Sunday, with 125 representatives present. The local Hi-Y Girls' Club members are hostesses. Miss Gene Brittle, of Emporia, State president, will be in charge. The principal topic will be "Traveling Hi-Y Highways."

The opening session tomorrow will include an address of welcome by W. R. Broadus, jr., with Miss Yonnie Pannill, president of the local Hi-Y Club, presiding. A social hour will follow.

Following the business session Saturday, a tea will be given at the home of Miss Pannill, to be followed by the State Hi-Y banquet at 6:30.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Nurses Better; Malady Probed

Stomach Contents Tested After Sudden Illness in Winchester.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—The contents of the stomachs of two nurses at Winchester Memorial Hospital who became ill last night have been sent to the State chemist at Richmond for analysis.

The nurses, Miss Noda Ryston, of Boyce, Va., and Miss Madeline Miller, of Martinsburg, W. Va., were improved this afternoon but are still under physicians' care.

The hospital staff refused to discuss the illness of the two nurses, both graduate members of the staff, except to say they became ill within a few moments of each other late last night. Reports that a third nurse also was ill were denied.

It was first believed the nurses' illness was due to tainted candy, but this theory was discarded when it was learned that other nurses had eaten the same candy.

Relatives of the two nurses were called to their bedside today, but this afternoon it was declared that both were recovering.

Banks Take Bonds Of West Virginia

Halsey, Stuart Syndicate Buys $2,500,000 Worth.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). A syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart Co., Inc., of New York, has taken over the $2,500,000 of West Virginia State deficit funding bonds.

It was the low bidder with an offer to take $1,625,000 at a rate of 4½ per cent and the remaining $875,000 at a 4 per cent rate. This makes the average interest rate 4.2 per cent.

The bonds represented the second block of $5,000,000 authorized by the Legislature for funding the State deficit.

Browning Ward's Honeymoon Interrupted by Auto Crash

Bride Is Slightly Injured as Car Runs Into Truck.

Elkton, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—The honeymoon of Mrs. Clarence B. Hood, a ward of Edward (Daddy) Browning and foster sister of "Peaches" Browning, jolted to a sudden stop near here last night when the expensive automobile in which she and her husband were riding hit a parked truck.

Two other men, a chauffeur and Henry D. Hood, a brother of the bridegroom, also were passengers in the car, but the bride was the only one injured and her injuries were minor.

Married in the Little Church Around the Corner in New York Tuesday, the Hoods were driving to Annapolis when the accident occurred. They said two trucks were parked side by side before a garage near Cedar Hill and they found it impossible to avoid hitting one of them.

The party spent the night at a hotel here and expected to resume their journey to Annapolis tomorrow, where the bridegroom attended school. His home is in Dunn, N. C.

"Peaches" Browning, whom "Daddy" also adopted and later married and whose marital difficulties were aired in the courts, is playing on a Baltimore burlesque stage this week.

In a popularity contest at Margaret Brent High School, sponsored by the school magazine, The Spinster's Mirror, Howard Lee, of Leonardtown, was voted the most popular boy, Miss Louise Buckler, of Mechanicsville, the most popular girl, and Arthur Deckelman, of Leonardtown, the best all-around athlete in the school, which consists of 210 students.

Veterans' Program Estimate Assailed

Hines' Figures Are Called "Inaccurate."

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—Declaring the American Legion will continue its efforts to obtain relief for service-connected disabled veterans, Edward A. Haynes, National commander, termed as "palpably inaccurate" the estimate of Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veteran affairs, for the cost of the organization's four-point program.

Haynes spoke last night at a meeting here of Maryland posts, telling the legionnaires that Hines' statement in advance of hearings on the proposed legislation "does the unfair thing of projecting the estimate over a five-year period."

The administrator's cost estimate ended with a "total, $603,000,000," which, Haynes said, "nine people out of ten" would guess it was for one year, whereas it is a five-year total of a $113,200,000 annual estimate." He said the legion's estimate does not exceed $80,000,000 a year.

Virginia Racing Bill Approved

House Committee Passes Pari-Mutuels; Auto Tax Cut Advances.

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—A favorable report by the House Finance Committee on bills legalizing pari-mutuel betting and setting up a commission to regulate horse racing in the Old Dominion was the high light in today's legislative program.

Both houses held short sessions. The Senate Finance Committee worked virtually the entire day on the dispensary liquor control bill previously passed by the House.

The bill reducing the automobile license tax rate from 70 to 40 cents per 100 pounds was advanced to third reading in the House after adoption of an amendment lowering the minimum tag tax from $10 to $8 and lowering motorcycle licenses.

Also advanced was the Neff bill abolishing the 5 per cent delinquent tax penalty on each December 5, and substituting a graduated penalty of 2 per cent December 1, 2 per cent March 1 and 1 per cent July 1.

The Senate Education Committee reported by unanimous vote the Cather-Lykman bill on the minimum education program. The Senate passed a long list of uncontested bills and adjourned in the midst of a debate on the education bill to transfer from the courts to the State corporation commission supervision of State bank receiverships.

Diphtheria Clinic Opens.

Clifton Forge, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). A two-day diphtheria clinic opened here today for the purpose of immunizing every child under 10 years of age in this community. Clifton Forge a year ago was rated last in the State in diphtheria immunization with only 135 children immunized out of 985.

Coast Guard Boat Breaks Ice Channel

Bay Fishermen Hemmed In by Heavy Floes.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Coast Guard patrol boat CG-195 returned today from an ice-breaking cruise in Chesapeake Bay. She spent two days off the eastern side of the bay breaking out channels so fish boats hemmed in by ice could get out.

Commander A. A. Abell, Coast Guard Base 8, said the CG-195 liberated about 20 fish boats which had been unable to get out at Crisfield and other points. The fishermen were eager to arrive at the fishing grounds off the Virginia Capes and appealed to the Coast Guard for assistance.

The CG-195 was equipped to cut her way through the ice. The commanding officers reported heavy floes in the bay.

Solving the SHOPPING problem

Shopping need no longer be a walking expedition over town, with nothing more than weary feet and frayed nerves at the end of a long day.

How often have you gone home from such a trip disappointed because you didn't have time to find what you wanted at the right price, although there were other stores you might have visited.

How different it all becomes when you carry a Capital Transit Weekly Pass. Then you can shop from store to store quickly and in comfort—ride a block or a mile if you wish, without a cent of extra cost.

Some of our patrons who use passes have found it easy to save more than a pass costs each week by hunting down bargains at their leisure. They feel their transportation for seven days really costs them nothing.

Capital Transit is selling two kinds of passes. The one sold for $1.00 is good on all street car lines in the District and on most Company bus lines. The other, sold for $1.25, is good where the $1.00 pass is honored and also in the District on all Company bus lines charging ten cents or less.

Buy a pass and you'll wonder how you ever got along without one. Street car conductors and bus operators sell them—or you may purchase passes at our special bus office, 1416 F Street, Northwest.

Politics Blamed At Middletown In CWA Delays

Brunswick Workers Also Need "Pull" for Jobs, It Is Charged.

Middletown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Charges of partisan politics, favoritism and unfairness with regard to CWA work are growing in this section, with names being quoted freely in the charges and investigation from Washington being suggested.

Frederick County CWA officials have indicated they will approve as a CWA project the proposed $8,000 reservoir of 2,000,000-gallon capacity near the present one. But many town residents are contending that other CWA projects for here are being delayed by various persons in Frederick because Middletown officials have declined to "play politics" with the county seat, as they claim other county districts have done. Town officials here have just closed negotiations for purchasing necessary land for the reservoir from Jefferson Patterson, of Washington.

Although officials here have been assured frequently that their projects would be allowed, not a single project has been started yet in the entire Middletown district, although residents here pay more taxes than any other county district except Frederick.

In Brunswick, in the southern section of Middletown Valley, more than 130 men have been given employment under the CWA, but it is openly charged there that only men with a "political pull" are being employed.

One Brunswick resident, who claims he is badly in need of work, says he has applied for work several times, in vain. He insists the fact that he "is not financially indebted to the powers that be" is the reason.

Stories are being told openly concerning certain Democratic officials of Brunswick in giving out CWA jobs. Some Brunswick business men admitted that politics is being "played to the limit" in handling CWA affairs in that town, pointing out that at least 50 more men than the quota for the town have been given employment.

Bureau Criticized.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—The operation of the Federal Transient Bureau here was criticized by Mayor Elmer F. Munshower at the meeting of the board of aldermen last night.

The mayor also said that two Frederick boys had left for California by way of the "Transient Bureau route," saying the trip would be a nice vacation and that food and clothing would be provided at the various bureaus.

Airport Work Starting.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Cumberland will start work tomorrow on its new airport, and 50 men will be employed. The project is in charge of J. Milton Patterson, Allegany County CWA administrator, and will cost $31,090.90 for labor and material.

The 200-acre airport is to be located at Mexico Farms on the Uhl highway, near North Branch, about 6 miles below this city, an old Army landing field.

Dr. N. L. Englehart, of Columbia Teachers College, is conducting a survey of public schools of Allegany County. With Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools, he visited several proposed sites for the new central Allegany high school building.

Offices of the Allegany County CWA staff were moved yesterday from the courthouse to the building across the street formerly used as a jail.

Old Dams to Go.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). An allotment of $150,000 for the removal of obsolete dams in the Kanawha River has been made by the PWA in Washington. The dams are to be replaced with new high roller-gate dams in a program calling for an increase in the river stage to permit vessels from the lower Mississippi to ply the Kanawha.

New D. A. R. Envoy At Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Delegates to the annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to be held in Washington April 16 to 20, have been chosen by the Bee Line Chapter.

The official delegate will be Mrs. F. L. Bushong, regent. Alternates are Mrs. Theo Brown, vice regent; Mrs. Jessie [illegible], Mrs. Wright Denny, Mrs. Veh Wilson, Mrs. Augustin J. Todd, Miss Eleanor Conklin, Mrs. David Fulton, Mrs. Adrian G. Wynkoop, Mrs. D. W. Border and Mrs. George Bell Shoover.

Mrs. D. B. Bushong was admitted to membership.

Bristol Police School Opens Another Class

Bristol, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Another class in the local police school being conducted by Officer Van J. Payne, of the local police department, will be held at the courthouse Monday evening.

Thirty-two officers from Bristol, Abingdon, Damascus and Gate City, in Virginia, and Bristol, Kingsport and Bluff City, in Tennessee, are enrolled.

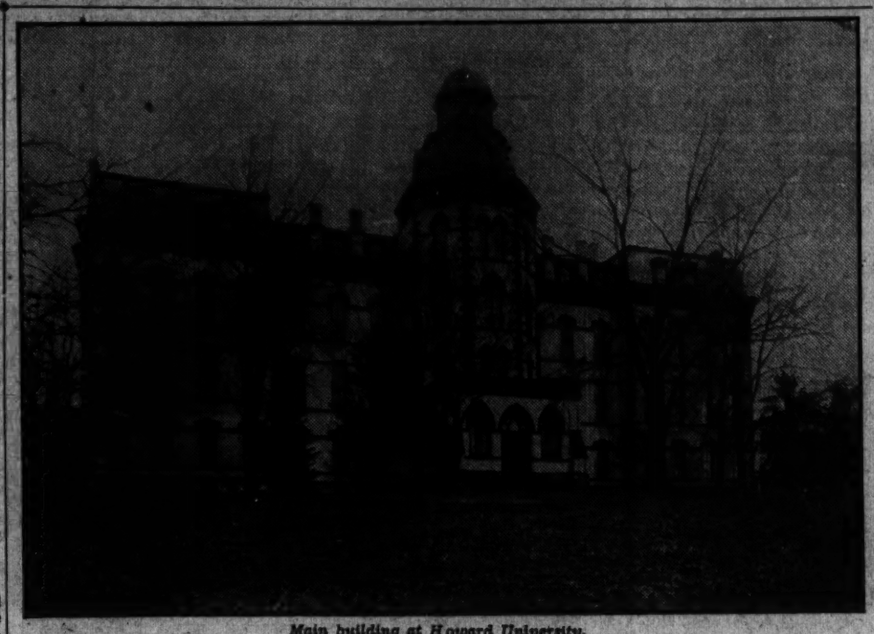
High Scholastic Standing Draws Students From Every State.

Four great centers of learning, stationed on campus heights that overlook the Nation's Capital, have offered, through The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, tuition scholarships for young men and women, to study the arts and sciences at their several vantage points . . . within observation range of a vast Government machinery that daily shapes world events.

Each of these institutions bears its insignia of individuality, to meet different demands of a complex society. Together they join hands with The Post to encourage the pursuit of higher learning in the light of today's momentous political developments.

This is the last of a series of four articles in which The Post describes the four universities contributing these scholarships — American, the Catholic University of America, Georgetown and Howard Universities.



Main building at Howard University.

Under supervision of the United States Office of Education and the direct administration of Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president, and his trustees board of prominent educators — Howard University stands today unique among American institutions, the only complete university of its kind ministering directly to colored students.

Since its establishment in 1866 by Gen. Oliver O. Howard, originally for the "training of an intelligent religious leadership for the freedmen who flocked into the Nation's Capital at the close of the Civil War," and subsequently chartered by Congress as a "university for the education of youth in the liberal arts and sciences," Howard has maintained a high scholastic standing in all of its branches, which now extend to the Colleges of Liberal Arts, Education and Applied Sciences, the Schools of Music, Religion, Law and Medicine and the Graduate College.

The university's faculty members number 270 and its normal enrollment is 2,600 men and women, who come here from every State and many foreign lands. Its graduates are now serving their race and communities in all sections of the country, as architects, engineers, artists, writers, dietitians, social workers, clergymen, missionaries, school teachers and officials, hospital superintendents, surgeons, physicians, lawyers, judges, legislators and magistrates.

Covers 55 Acres.

Howard's modern plant of 22 buildings, with the exception of two downtown law and medical schools, occupies a fine 55-acre plot on one of the highest points in Washington's northwest section. Under an enterprising 20-year plan inaugurated by President Johnson, three of these buildings, two dormitories and a gymnasium were recently completed, a stadium seating 8,500 has been built, concrete tunnels for heat, light and power have been installed, the campus beautified, and appropriations approved by Congress for new chemistry, educational and library buildings, as well as a power plant.

The campus commands a fine view of Washington and borders on the Reservoir Lake, the National Soldiers' Home Park and the 11-acre tract of Freedmen's Hospital.

The undergraduate college, which by the next term will consolidate the colleges of liberal arts, applied sciences and education, has offered a one-year tuition scholarship to the young man or woman winning campus finals in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, to be followed by three annual tuition scholarships as the winner rates promotion.

Seventeen Major Courses Offered.

The college of liberal arts administers the work of various classes of students, providing either a liberal education with or without reference to future professional training, or background for specialization in various fields, such as medicine, law or religion, or for careers in business or social service. Major courses are arranged in English, German, Latin, Romance languages, botany, chemistry, mathematics, physics, psychology, zoology, commerce, economics, history, philosophy, physical education, political science and sociology.

Combination programs which generally require more than four years of study have been established for liberal arts in connection with music, law, medicine, dentistry or nursing.

The College of Education has in charge the training of students who desire to become teachers and specializes for the teaching of English, history, languages, sciences, mathematics, public school art, domestic art, home economics or physical education. It also trains for supervisory offices in the public service or for instruction work at normal schools.

An appointment bureau, of which the dean of the College of Education is chairman, recommends qualified graduates for teaching positions, giving preference to those who, in addition to good scholarship, have given evidence of personal qualities desirable in the teaching profession.

Many Student Activities.

The College of Applied Science prepares students for professional work in architecture, art, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering and home economics. It provides its students with general development and guides their start in the more specialized fields which they choose. Graduates of this college are engaged in work covering a broad scope of activities. They are architects, artists, engineers, dietitians in hospitals, managers of cafeterias, instructors in leading educational institutions and operators in highway, building and subway construction, public utilities, industrial enterprises and allied fields of business.

Howard has a number of student organizations which, through exercises, debates, oratorical contests and dramas, provide a training of great importance. These include fraternities and sororities, language clubs, the Classical Club, the Women's League, the Mathematics-Physics Club, the University Choir, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

Contest Open to All.

The Washington Post Scholarship Competition is open to any bona-fide undergraduate student in the fourth-year class of a public, private or parochial school within the following area; The District of Columbia; in Maryland, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia, Alexandria and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

The competition calls for the writing of preliminary essays on stipulated Governmental subjects, the principal of each participating school to present to the competition director by April 9, 1934, the essay adjudged best within his school. Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15, for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Principals should send enrollments for competition promptly to Louise Proctor Engle, director, The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, The Post, Washington, D. C.

Crash Injuries Claim Second Virginia Man

South-Bound Woman Hurt After Leaving Hospital; Auto Fire Fatal.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). William F. Stevens, 27, was dead here today the second victim of a truck collision last Thursday.

William J. White, 47, of Ashland, was killed, and two men in the truck that collided with White's, were injured.

Funeral services for Stevens, survived by his mother, Mrs. Maggie S. Stevens, were held at 2:30 p. m. today, by the Rev. E. V. Peyton, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Reed.

Boy Sledder Injured

Injuries to one of his kidneys and his spinal column were sustained by Leroy Wymbs, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Wymbs, while the youth was sledding near here.

An emergency operation was performed last night.

Shortly after leaving the Fairfield Hospital yesterday after an emergency operation, Mrs. Agnes Hein sustained severe head injuries when an automobile in which she and her husband were motoring to Florida was forced from the Richmond-Washington highway by another machine. She was treated at a hospital here.

Auto Fire Is Fatal.

Saluda, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Elmer S. Davis, Middlesex farmer, was burned to death early yesterday when his automobile caught fire and was destroyed.

Davis, who lived near Stormont, was trapped in the car when it slipped into a ditch. He is survived by his widow, four sons and a daughter.

$21,612 Collected For Park Tracts

Front Royal, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Seventeen owners of Warren County land condemned for the Shenandoah National Park have had their claims approved by Judge Philip Williams, of the Warren County Circuit Court.

The awards for these tracts, which have been paid, aggregate $21,612.44.

On February 24, Judge Williams will enter judgment against 17 additional tracts for which the park appraisal commissioners awarded $13,873. Some of the latter tracts are under exception, or have been referred to the park arbitration board. A considerable number of owners have not yet filed claims.

Large Fish Caught By Baltimorean

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Feb. 8 (AP).—A marlin swordfish, weighing 169½ pounds and measuring 8 feet 6 inches in length, said to be one of the largest ever landed in this vicinity, was caught here by J. D. Steele, of Baltimore.

The fish was landed after a battle lasting more than two and one-half hours, on a 42-pound test line.

L. B. Towers Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Obsequies for G. O. P. Leader to Be Held at Denton, Md.

Denton, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Homage will be paid to Lawrence B. Towers, former State senator from Caroline County and former comptroller of customs at the port of Baltimore, when funeral services are held Saturday at his home here.

Towers died Tuesday. He was 61.

The Rev. Melton Andrews, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church here, will officiate at the funeral services, assisted by the Rev. E. C. Hallman, district superintendent of the Wilmington district, and the Rev. Melvin W. Wheatley, both of Middletown, Del.

Prominent in the Republican party on the Eastern Shore, Towers was clerk of the circuit court from 1915 to 1921 and a member of the State Senate from 1921 to 1923. He was defeated for Congress and in 1931 was named comptroller of customs at Baltimore, serving until last year.

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—State Senator William Earle Withgott, 48, of Talbot County, died of paralysis in the Union Memorial Hospital here today.

Dry Violators Release Urged In West Virginia

House of Delegates Bill Would Reduce Bonds of Sheriffs.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). With a change eliminating those who have no other criminal records, the House of Delegates today approved a resolution, apparently defeated by it yesterday, recommending release from Federal prisons of persons serving sentences for violation of the National prohibition laws. The original resolution recommended release of all persons sentenced under the eighteenth amendment.

Final legislative approval was given by the House of a bill recommended by Federal officials, bringing State laws into conformity with Federal farm loan regulations and crop liens.

Final approval also was accorded a bill providing for a reduction in the bonds of sheriffs from $40,000 to $25,000, and fixing bonds of county court members from $5,000 to $10,000, at the discretion of the circuit court.

The House also approved bills permitting the Mingo County Court to borrow Federal funds for remodeling the Mingo County Courthouse and authorizing Mercer County to borrow Federal funds for a Negro high school near Bramwell.

The Senate passed the Huntington charter bill with a number of alterations made by a conference committee.

A group of farm-home relief bills apparently was killed by the Senate Judiciary Committee, but on motion of Senator Louis A. Henderson (Democrat), Doddridge, action was deferred for further consideration. The bills, already have been approved by the House. They include a moratorium on foreclosures patterned after the Minnesota moratorium.

Dickinson Will Address Graduates at Hopkins

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—John Sharpe Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and executive secretary of the National Industrial Recovery Administration, will deliver the principal address at the commencement day exercises February 22 at Johns Hopkins University.

Program at School.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.). A memorial musical and debating program of the Jackson and Lee Literary Society of Charlotte Hall High School will be held Saturday at the school. McCubbin Owens will be master of ceremonies, and a dance will follow.

45 Wedding and Other Gowns Dating Back to 1834 Shown

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Forty-five gowns, 30 of which have been worn as wedding dresses here since 1858, were displayed before more than 300 persons in the high school auditorium tonight at the second presentation of the "Brides' Pageant."

The 20 additions to the pageant include 15 gowns of interest because of their age and historical importance. Five new wedding gowns were by Miss Ellen Knox, Miss Sarah Hunter, Miss Ann Timberlake, Miss Lulu Lee Llewellyn and Miss Henrietta Pratt.

The dress worn by Mrs. Robert Edward Lee shortly after her marriage to the Confederate leader in 1831, presented by Miss Mary Hansford Wallace, was the oldest gown shown.

Mrs. Chester B. Goolrick, Miss Marian Karsten, Miss Virginia Cassiday, Miss Alma Lancaster and Miss Katherine Wallace.

W. & M. Has 241st Birthday

D. C. Alumni Group Among Many Joining in Celebration.

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—William and Mary College, the Nation's second oldest institution of higher learning, today celebrated its 241st birthday.

Alumni groups throughout Virginia and in scattered parts of the United States joined the celebration with special programs arranged at Richmond, Baltimore, Washington, New York, Newport News and other cities.

Former Gov. Pollard accepted an invitation to address the Washington meeting. Other speakers included Dr. J. A. C. Chandler, president of the college, at Newport News, and Ashton Dovell, floor leader in the House of Delegates, at Richmond.

The college was founded on February 8, 1693, by royal charter from the then reigning monarchs, William and Mary. The original charter, under which the college still operates, provided that the college should be known forever as "the College of William and Mary in Virginia."

Baltimore Strikes Tie Up Two Ships

Police Called to Guard Against Rioting.

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—A strike among seamen that has held one freighter in port past its sailing schedule spread today to another ship after a detail of almost 100 police was called out as a precaution against rioting.

The strike was called on the S. S. Munsoma, of the Munson Line.

The crew of the S. S. Greylock, which was preparing to sail for Gulf ports, also went on strike. A disagreement over the pay scale caused both strikes.

Miss Eliza Hill, Aged 92, Dead

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Burial rites will be held here Saturday for Miss Eliza Virginia Hill, 92 this city's oldest woman resident, who died at the home of a niece here yesterday of a heart attack.

She was born in Martinsburg when it was only a village, the daughter of Samuel and Evelyn Hill, and was one of 10 children, of whom the only survivor is Miss Amanda Hill. She was a member of United Daughters of Confederacy here. Two of her brothers fought in the Civil War.

Services will be held here tomorrow for Miss Georgia Anna Pitzer, 77, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George I. Pitzer, who died here yesterday at the home of a cousin, former Prosecuting Attorney Allen B. Noll, at whose home she had lived 30 years. She leaves no immediate survivors.

Skyline Drive School Planned For Engineers

Experience in Mountain Work Offered; Scenic Routes Argued.

Luray, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—A training school for engineers who will work on the Skyline drive from Front Royal to the Great Smokies was being established here today, and offices have been leased.

Many of the engineers lack practical experience in mountain trail building, it was explained. This training they will receive by working with surveying parties on location and in the Luray office.

Eighty engineers and their helpers are ready to undertake the task, which is expected to begin soon after the route to be taken by the scenic highway has been determined.

Several men have been sent to Waynesboro and others will be dispatched to other points. Offices probably will be established at 50-mile intervals, with several main headquarters, probably one at Roanoke.

W. M. Austin, in charge of Skyline drive construction, is chief of the Bureau of Public Roads here.

Air Surveys Near.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Aerial trips over proposed routes for the 500-mile Federal scenic highway connecting the Shenandoah and Great Smoky Mountains National Parks will be made within two or three weeks, John D. Lincoln, of Marion, said here yesterday.

Federal landscape architects at Baltimore have accepted Mr. Lincoln's offer to furnish planes for an inspection trip of both routes in his efforts to convince them that the western route is the only one possible, he said.

The western route, which would pass through Pulaski, Bland, Wythe, Smyth and Grayson Counties in southwest Virginia, would enter Tennessee from Grayson County. Mr. Lincoln said he hoped Tennessee's officials would help clinch southwest Virginia's argument for the western route. The southern route, favored by North Carolina, would not touch Tennessee at all, he declared.

Work on Links Pressed.

Norton, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Good roads enthusiasts from three States went to Richmond in the interests of Federal highway No. 23, a straight-line route from the Great Lakes to Florida, passing through or near Bristol.

Thirty men from North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Virginia planned to request the Virginia State highway department to complete work on the only two unfinished links in the road as soon as possible.

Other States have finished their portions of Route 23, but unimproved stretches of 10 miles east from Gate City and 18 miles north from Norton now prevent promotion of the highway as a first-rate overland route, the meeting was told.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—The southern route for the proposed scenic highway, by way of Roanoke, is being urged by the newly organized Virginia Heights-Raleigh Court Civic League.

W. L. Andrews is president. Vice presidents are Mrs. M. M. Caldwell, M. W. Turner, W. B. Carter and W. W. Wood. Mrs. Hubert A. Nance is secretary, Mrs. G. W. Bittle assistant secretary, and W. N. Walters treasurer.

Neely's Charge Branded False By West Virginia CWA Chief

Beehler Declares Quiz Failed to Reveal Favoritism.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—More gunfire was heard along the CWA battlefront in West Virginia today.

William N. Beehler, State CWA administrator, opened the fray with a statement that an inquiry in several counties had thus far shown charges of political preference, made by United States Senator M. M. Neely, to be "false and untrue."

In Logan County, designated by Neely as being with Tucker County "the worst for political discrimination," Beehler said that of 58 persons employed on the administrative staff, 39 are Democrats, while of 90 in better-paid jobs, 65 are Democrats. Previously, Beehler had stated that the Tucker inquiry showed a majority of Democrats employed on non-Federal projects, and no basis for the general allegation of political discrimination.

The next shot came from Senator A. C. Harold (Democrat), Braxton, chairman of the Joint Legislative CWA Investigating Committee, who asserted that Beehler, "as past president of the Family Welfare Society in the small city of Lexington, Ky., could not be expected to know" political ramifications in West Virginia counties.

As for Tucker County, he said charges of discrimination came from citizens who have long lived there and are thoroughly familiar with existing conditions. "When they tell this committee," he said, "that two stores get practically all the direct relief orders, and that these stores are operated by Republicans; when they say that shrewd Republican politicians are pulling the strings behind the CWA they are in position to know whereof they speak."

Disabled Vessel In Tow of Cutter

Rescue Boat Has Trouble Moving Toward Port.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—The Coast Guard cutter Mendota this morning picked up the disabled schooner Purnell T. White 200 miles east of the Cape Fear River, off the North Carolina coast, and is towing her to Norfolk.

Rough weather prevails off the coast tonight and the Mendota is having difficulty with her helpless charge. She is not expected to reach port until tomorrow, if then, her progress depending on weather conditions.

The schooner, with a crew of eight, owned by C. C. Paul, of Baltimore, is 12 days out of Charleston, S. C., bound for New York with a cargo of lumber. She was sighted yesterday by the steamer Maiden Creek, which sent a message to Coast Guard headquarters requesting aid be sent the vessel. Her sails were gone, according to the message from the steamer.

N. D. McElfresh Is Found Dead

Heart Attack Blamed by Investigators.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Nigel Dorsey McElfresh, 66, near Park Mills, was found dead in bed today.

Following an investigation by Magistrate Sherman P. Bowers, acting coroner, Sheriff W. Crum and State's Attorney Walter E. Sinn, death was laid to a heart attack. Mr. Bowers deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Mr. McElfresh is survived by three sisters and three brothers.

200 Phones Silenced By Barber Shop Fire

Danville, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Communications were restored here today after an interruption caused by the burning of two cables operated by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

A fire in a barber shop, started by a gasoline stove explosion, melted the cables above the shop. Two hundred telephones were temporarily out of service.

Bureau Helps 321 Transients

Cumberland Project Has 104 Now Enrolled and at Work.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—The transient bureau, established several weeks ago here, is gradually becoming a well-equipped and organized institution.

During January, 321 men were cared for and registered at the bureau. At present there are 104 accommodated, about the average number at one time. Miss Catherine Sponseller and Miss Mary Elizabeth Reid have charge of the institution.

Every individual has a definite job to do in the bureau. At least 14 hours' work each week is required, for which lodging, food, clothing and the use of the recreation center are provided. In addition to the 24 hours' work, each man may work an additional three hours per week, for which he is paid 30 cents per hour.

There are two gangs of workers, with 25 laborers in each group, who are employed in brushing roadsides and clearing highways of brush and refuse.

One of the men, experienced in athletics, has formed a basket ball team and is organizing athletics. The State Armory basketball court has been placed at the disposal of the team. They expect to challenge local independent teams. Others interested in dramatics, music or other forms of recreation are also organizing. At the present time, tournaments in checkers and cards are being played.

Socialists to Ask Poll Tax Repeal

Delegation Will Appear at Richmond Tuesday.

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—David G. George, State organizer for the Socialist party, said today that a large delegation, "representing many organizations," will appear before the House of Delegates privileges and elections committee Tuesday to urge abolition of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting.

He said the bill introduced by Delegate Edgar B. English of Richmond would receive the "vigorous" support of the Socialist party.

George said he had been assured that the Fitzhugh Lee Camp, Spanish-American War Veterans, would support the measure in its present form and that other war veterans would support it at least insofar as it applies to them.

Chapter of D. A. R. Picks Delegates

Maj. William Thomas Unit to Meet Here Feb. 24.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—At a meeting of the Maj. William Thomas Chapter, D. A. R., of Baltimore, Washington and St. Marys County, held at the home of Mrs. Roland Thomas, in Baltimore, State and National delegates were elected to represent the chapter at the meeting to be held in Baltimore March 15 and 16.

A bronze tablet to be placed in the memorial porch at Ye Olde Cool Springs, Charlotte Hall, in honor of the founders of Charlotte Hall School, will be unveiled during "June Week" at the school.

The next chapter meeting will be held February 24 at the Hotel Raleigh, Washington. Mrs. S. West Russell, vice regent, will be hostess.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—John Robinson Swinerton, 93, vice president of First National Bank of Newport News and a resident of this city for 51 years, died at his home today after an illness of several weeks.

Born in Milton, N. H., Mr. Swinerton came to Newport News from New York, and was manager of the Warwick Hotel for 17 years.

He was a charter member of the First National Bank and was elected vice president in 1895.

Council Grants Funds to Open Relief Office

Cost at Fredericksburg May Run $80,000 for Two Years.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Establishment here of a branch of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration last night was unanimously approved by the city council, which made available $1,500, operating cost portion to be paid by the city.

From $3,500 to $4,000 monthly in direct relief to Fredericksburg will be distributed by the FERA. Food, clothing, medical attention, nursing service, fuel, and employment for women unable to earn a livelihood are specific types of relief to be furnished.

The council also approved a resolution offered by Cecil L. Reid asking the Virginia FERA to allot $7,850 to Fredericksburg relief during February and March.

A trained social service worker will be assigned here. Office space will be provided in the community nurse's office. A stenographer and clerk will be hired. Government funds will be placed in the hands of Clarence R. Howard, city treasurer, as soon as the office is established.

Cost to Run Heavy.

Maintenance of the FERA here for two years with relief and welfare expenditures of $80,000 to $100,000 was indicated by the health and charities report.

Five local men named to serve on a transient advisory bureau selected by Adrian C. Anderson, director of the local transient bureau, include Levin J. Houston, jr., city manager; Councilman Benjamin T. Pitts and George L. Hunter, jr.; the Rev. Dudley Boogher, rector of St. George's Episcopal Church, and Julian J. Garner, prominent business man.

CWA Probe Set.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—A public hearing has been set for Monday at Louisa, Va., to hear charges of irregularities in administration of the CWA in Louisa County, brought by residents of the county. Frank Hartman, deputy administrator in Charlottesville, set the hearing.

Sidney B. Adair, executive assistant administrator for the State, said reports of dissatisfaction over the administration and job-giving practices of the CWA continue to be received.

Power Meeting Set.

Danville, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Proponents of Danville's power expansion program have called a mass meeting for tomorrow night in the city auditorium, when Jay Johns, chairman of the State advisory board of the Public Works Administration, and James A. Anderson, engineer of the board, will speak in support of the plan.

Danville is to finance the undertaking with PWA funds, and the engineering data came before the advisory board before it was passed along to the Federal board.

Dr. Arthur Bevan, State geologist, also will speak. The opposition, headed by Thomas S. Williamson, called a meeting Monday. Danville will hold a referendum February 26.

The venture will cost nearly $3,000,000, to be paid back over a period of 30 years.

Valley Survey Started.

Bristol, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Five offices have been rented in the Dominion National Bank Building for U. S. Geological Survey headquarters in mapping the headwaters area of the Tennessee River for the Tennessee Valley Authority. The offices probably will be occupied next week.

Ground survey crews are already at work and aerial photography of the 22,000 square miles in the Tennessee River basin is scheduled to begin next week, under contract to the Aero Service Corporation of Philadelphia.

Virginia Board Urges Koiner's Reappointment

Proposed Bills Criticized by Agriculture Group.

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—Resolutions indorsing the administration of George W. Koiner as State Commissioner of Agriculture were adopted today by the State Board of Agriculture and copies ordered sent to Gov. Peery.

Mr. Koiner has not been reappointed.

Bills pending in the General Assembly prohibiting the sale of goods produced or mined by convict labor were criticized on the ground that they would prevent the sale of ground limestone produced at State plants to Virginia farmers, with the resultant closing of the plants. Sponsors were asked to amend the measure to exempt the lime plants.

Another resolution opposed the passage of bills prohibiting the use of State-owned automobiles by employes and providing for the sale of all pleasure-type automobiles owned by the State.

A committee authorized to oppose certain amendments to the department appropriations relating to apple examination and the examination of other farm commodities for arsenic and lead spray residue was named.

Another resolution, opposing changes in the present law relating to gas tax refunds to farmers and advocating the grading of tobacco by the Secretary of Agriculture, was adopted.

Attending the meeting were Julian A. Burruss, of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, president; Larence A. Washington, of Westmoreland County; Stuart M. Nuchols, of Goochland; E. D. Nininger, of Roanoke; John T. Ramey, of Fauquier; W. J. Gillespie, of Tazewell, and W. W. Sproul, of Augusta.

$35,000 Damage Actions Settled

Washington Couple Had Sued for Hurts.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Two suits for $35,000 damages brought by Mrs. Clarissa S. Ludlum and her husband, Samuel S. Ludlum, Washington, against Fay C. Brown, Bethesda, Md., scheduled to be tried in the circut court today were settled out of court. Terms were not disclosed.

Mrs. Ludlum sued for $25,000 and Mr. Ludlum sought $10,000 for an automobile accident September 27, 1932, on Wisconsin avenue, Washington. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendant was driving on the wrong side of the highway and ran into their car.

Mr. Ludlum sued for the loss of companionship of his wife and expenses. The cases originated in Montgomery County, but were removed to this county by the defendant, who declared a fair and impartial trial could not be secured in that jurisdiction.

Man Found Slain Victim of "Ride"

Falconi Believed Taken to Killing Scene in Car.

Baltimore, Feb. 8 (AP).—Nazarine Falconi, whose body was found yesterday lying in the snow along a road near Essex, Baltimore County, was believed today to have been "taken for a ride."

Dr. Walter Carmine said the man had been murdered and would hold no inquest. Falconi had been struck on the head, then shot.

Police said Falconi probably had been taken in an automobile to the spot and was shot as he stepped from the machine.

Finnan to Address Citizens.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, will give an illustrated address on the park system at a special meeting of the Brightwood Citizens Association tonight in Paul Junior High School. Two sound pictures on the present and future park systems for Washington and environs will be shown.

Memorial Mass Tomorrow.

A memorial mass for Capt. Jean Rigal, former naval attache at the French Embassy here, who died in Paris last month, will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Red Cross memorial chapel at Walter Reed Hospital.

Speaking Of Winter.

It was Josh Billings, Artemus Ward, Mark Hopkins, or some other great mind of the pre-Brain Trust era who observed, "The world do move." Nobody expects it not to; for change is the law of life.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, for instance, used to write poetry at college. See how that gentle indulgence has evolved! Napoleon brought the excesses of the French revolution to an end in Paris with a "whiff of grapeshot." Yesterday, France, eschewing further use of force, called to the premiership a kindly old man who typifies gentleness and abjuration of coercion of any sort.

Since everything else changes, it seemed perfectly reasonable to believe those who have been telling us that the weather had changed, too. They have been saying that the Gulf Stream or the Tropic of Cancer or something has shifted its influences to the Potomac. And they could prove it, too, with elaborate wind-curve charts and graphs and whatnot. Washington, we have been assured, has been particularly favored of the God of Nature and henceforth and forever was going to have a hermaphroditic winter.

On this balmy morning, the ninth or tenth in lineal succession, it becomes pertinent to hope that all who have spoken of climatic amelioration and all who have longed for the frost-bitten "good old days," are down in their basements surveying the fuel supply.

Too Many Churchills.

Winston Churchill, who was First Lord of the British Admiralty at the outbreak of the World War, said last November: "I have been described as a war monger. It is a lie. I labored for peace before the war, and if the naval holiday I advised had been accepted by Germany the course of history might have been different."

Despite that tribute to the doctrine of limitation, Mr. Churchill demanded Wednesday, in the House of Commons, that England denounce the Treaty of London and leave herself free to build any type of ship she wants. Mr. Churchill explained his position by asserting that the failure to secure an arms agreement from Berlin had marked the breakdown of the last attempt to limit arms by international agreement.

The present attitude of the former Chancellor of the Exchequer is representative of a great body of sentiment throughout the world. There are Churchills in every country, demanding the abandonment of all limitations, even though most are willing to admit that the absence of any form of limitation made initiation of war in 1914 easier.

Against efforts to restore the old doctrine of unrestricted competition, far-sighted minds in every country will rise in opposition. It is one thing to feel that armament up to treaty limitations is desirable and quite another to maintain that all limitations should be removed. The world is now too much of a tinder box to encourage such additional sources of friction as new naval races would provide. The principle of limitation by international agreement, even though only partially successful, is the strongest bulwark yet set up against repetition of the disaster of 1914.

The Uses Of CWA Art.

Paintings by CWA artists are to be selected by the committee on buildings and grounds of the Board of Education for exhibition in Washington schools. After an inspection of CWA paintings at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, Superintendent Ballou decided that some of them are quite appropriate for school use.

Whether Dr. Ballou's time might have been more profitably employed in making the promised survey of the Grant School, which he does not think should be replaced at present, is another question. However, it is obvious that deficiencies in local school equipment would not be overcome by refusal to have CWA paintings. In some places they might even be used to cover structural deficiencies.

In a recent address Edward Bruce, secretary to the Treasury's advisory committee on fine arts, declared that the CWA pay rolls "contain the names of a large body of the leading painters and sculptors of this country." Efforts have been made to choose artists on the basis of their experience and artistic ability. Because of diminished demand for works of art during the depression, nationally-known artists are found in the ranks of the CWA. The Board of Education may profitably take the advantage offered by this sad situation.

Indeed, decoration of schools and other public buildings through the use of Federal funds may prove to be the most constructive feature of the public works of art project. It is said that some CWA artists are being used to paint scenes of the CCC in action and other public improvements financed from the Federal Treasury. Plans are being worked out to exhibit these views throughout the country. This undertaking smacks of propaganda rather than art. Art for the sake of politics is an outcome which the PWAP should sedulously refuse to sponsor.

Fettering The Commissioners.

In serving as a city council for Washington, Congress is becoming more and more inclined to rely upon the judgment and advice of the District Commissioners. All bills pertaining to the District and its welfare are referred to them. Both the Senate and House District Committees attach much more significance to the reports of local officials than used to be the case. If a measure can not obtain approval at the District Building, rough sledding may be expected for it in Congress.

Washingtonians are naturally pleased with this deference to local officials. There is a feeling, also, that the present Commissioners are making a diligent effort to carry out the will of voteless Washington so far as it can be ascertained. The net result of the influence of the people upon the Commissioners, and the influence of the Commissioners upon Congress, should be more satisfactory legislation on local problems.

But these commendable efforts toward cooperation are partially frustrated by an arrangement which makes it impossible for the Commissioners to use their own judgment in making recommendations to Congress. The District budget estimates do not represent the views of the Commissioners as to funds necessary to support the municipal government. The Commissioners are required to follow instructions from the Federal Budget Bureau and their estimates may be drastically revised before they reach Congress.

A still more irritating handicap is placed on the Commissioners when they consider local legislation involving the expenditure of money. For example, the House District Committee asked the Commissioners for advice on the old-age pension bill. But the Commissioners are not allowed to indorse legislative proposals that may involve the expenditure of money, unless the Budget Bureau states that the proposed expenditure is in accord with the financial policy of the Administration. This means that the Commissioners are forbidden in such cases to use their own discretion. The actual recommendations which go to Congress in response to its requests for advice are formulated in the Budget Bureau, a Federal agency having no direct contact with District problems.

With all due respect to the efforts of the Budget Bureau to guard against extravagance, this is a situation difficult to defend. There seems no danger that Congress will sanction any departure from the sound fiscal policy followed in the District. And there is no indication that the Commissioners have any desire to run the Capital City into debt. Existing restraint upon the Commissioners in their relations with Congress can not be justified on the pretext that it is necessary to hold expenditures in check.

If District measures are to be considered on their own merits, in the light of local conditions and requirements, it will be necessary to relieve the Budget Bureau of its custodial relationship to the Commissioners' conscience.

Reflation And Debts.

President Roosevelt is said to feel sympathetic toward a policy involving widespread reduction of interest rates and reorganization of existing debt structures. He indicates that certain classes of debt charges are unduly high and could be lowered with general creditor support if greater security were thus afforded. No concrete proposals for effecting the recommended debt scaling are suggested in what is apparently a feeler to obtain the general reaction.

The immense volume of public and private indebtedness created in this country during the boom years was a major cause of the over-rapid capital expansion and excessive speculation that culminated in the collapse of 1929. Interest rates on a large proportion of outstanding obligations undoubtedly had been raised to an abnormally high level, judged by former standards, and debt charges often became unbearable as these heavy fixed charges absorbed a rapidly increasing percentage of the declining incomes of debtor groups.

Efforts of debtors to meet current obligations resulted in increased pressure to lower wages, salaries and other production costs in order to provide a margin for covering such fixed charges. Given time, the obstacles in the way of comprehensive debt scaling might have been overcome. However, the present Administration undertook to relieve the debtor classes by reversing the deflationary process and attempting to raise prices. It was hoped by such means to bring needed relief in ways less painful than those necessitated by a continuance of deflation.

These hopes have been disappointed. In the first place, prices have not risen to the level aimed at and, if they had, there is no reason to suppose that the benefits of the rise would be providentially distributed in such wise as to restore the debt-paying capacity of insolvent individuals and corporations. In case of public borrowers, such as municipalities, optimism is decidedly out of place. Government borrowers confronted by shrinking revenues, with a large volume of nonproductive debt and demands for emergency relief to finance, obviously must seek debt relief in many cases by resort to some kind of debt scaling.

Thus it appears that the price-raising program of the Administration, although originally heralded as a constructive move to restore debtors' ability to pay, has not obviated the necessity of proceeding with a program of debt reduction. And the President's interest in such plans is significant as a semiofficial admission that he does not expect higher prices to solve the problems presented by certain categories of debts.

Doles For Cattle Interests.

A bill authorizing the appropriation of $200,000,000 for the benefit of the cattle and dairy industries slipped through the House of Representatives almost unnoticed on Monday. That body has become accustomed to approving the expenditure of enormous sums in the most casual manner. But extravagance is not the only issue involved in this particular measure.

On its face this bill is innocent enough. It would make cattle a basic commodity within the meaning of the agricultural adjustment act. Ordinarily this would simply give the Secretary of Agriculture power to levy processing taxes on beef and to pay benefits to cattle producers. But, according to Representative Kleberg, of Texas, who presented this measure to the House, "it is practically impossible to levy a processing tax on those two industries (dairying and beef production) while in their present condition." Consequently, the House decided that they should have a $200,000,000 subsidy directly out of the Treasury.

Secretary Wallace has also indorsed the bill, although evidently with much reluctance. "The appropriation," he said in a recent address, "will enable advance payments to reach the farmers by the time a substantial tax is felt." From these remarks and even more outspoken admissions on the floor of the House it is apparent that the AAA intends to pay benefits now and trust to good fortune for better times during which processing taxes on beef may be levied.

Instead of merely adding cattle to the list of so-called basic commodities, this bill therefore involves an important change of policy. When the adjustment law was enacted last spring the cattle interests did not want its provisions extended to their industry. Since the consumption of meat tends to decrease when prices are raised, it was feared that a processing tax on beef would be passed on to the producers. Conversely, if the tax should be paid by the consumers, the market for beef might be contracted. But some one hit upon the happy idea of letting Uncle Sam furnish the money and the House as well as the cattle producers are delighted to fall into line.

The theory behind the agricultural adjustment act is thus further distorted, and our farm policy moves one step nearer to that of direct dole. Members of the House apparently are not concerned about the matter so long as the initial cost is "only" $200,000,000.

French Foreign Trade.

The French political crisis cannot be explained as the outcome of any single cause of popular dissatisfaction. On the contrary, a complexity of causes, economic and political, have accentuated the growth of unrest. But among the developments which have given rise to anxiety regarding the economic future of the country and the stability of the currency is one which has not received the attention that it deserves. That is the unbalanced condition of foreign trade.

With exports reduced more than 60 per cent in gold value below the totals of 1929, the unfavorable merchandise balance for 1933 was even higher than in the former year, amounting to 9,992,000,000 francs as compared with 8,212,000,000 francs in 1929. Furthermore, invisible receipts such as returns from tourist trade, interest on foreign investments, and similar items with which France normally would offset her unfavorable merchandise account have been drastically cut by the depression and by exchange disturbances.

It is evident that the position of the franc is intrinsically weak, although that fact has been concealed by the inflow of foreign capital seeking refuge from the depreciation and devaluation experiments of other countries. So long as confidence in the stability of the currency existed, the country's unbalanced trade position could be minimized if not ignored. But it has long been a source of anxiety to far-sighted observers. To exporting industries, moreover, the shrinkage of foreign trade is a cause of profound dissatisfaction apart from any solicitude for the stability of the currency.

The French policy of applying high protective duties and import quotas to foreign goods doubtless has prevented the trade balance from becoming even more unfavorable than it now is, but such devices have induced retaliation and caused exports to shrink along with imports. The trouble of the franc can not be resolved, therefore, simply through monetary agreements or monetary manipulation. They call for a reform of commercial policies which, like monetary reforms, require international discussion and agreement.

Mile Posts

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

SECRETARY OF WAR GARRISON and Gen. Crozier warned that the country was unprepared for war. If it were necessary to meet an enemy of equivalent force, they said, ammunition was "woefully insufficient."

A DISPATCH from Berlin said that because of her high-handed ways, Prussia was becomingly increasingly unpopular with the rest of Germany.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

LOUISE LAWSON was strangled to death in her apartment in another crime in the series which included the Elwell and Dot King cases.

THE HOUSE defeated a proposal for a Constitutional amendment to prohibit tax exempt securities. The proposal lacked seven votes of the requisite two-thirds vote.

F. G. BONFILS, Denver publisher, told the Senate Public Lands Committee that Harry Sinclair paid him and his associates $1,000,000 for a claim—which Senator Walsh said they did not have—in the Teapot Dome field, after Bonfils had sent a reporter to Fall's ranch in New Mexico to investigate.

Maryland Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anyone with good common horsesense knows that Senator Tydings is not going to let the ever busy politicians fool him in becoming a candidate for governor. In the first place Senator Tydings is one of the smartest Senators ever sent to the Senate from Maryland and has done more for his native State than any other Senator, and has still more to accomplish and has the pluck and courage to carry on. In the second place, neither Senator Tydings nor any other Senator—not even our distinguished Senator from St. Marys—would want to be Governor of Maryland. Who would want to hold an empty bag? Who would want to lease a farm where every ounce of fertility had been extracted from the soil and a mountainous mortgage was ready to engulf it into a landslide? There is no one that wants or will be the Democratic nominee for governor but Albert C. Ritchie. How in the world are you going to beat him in the primaries? They say Ritchie can not be allowed to succeed himself. Who is going to stop him? They say the Republicans and Independents will form a combination to do it. Where are the Independents? In the last primaries four years ago, where were they? Ritchie pulled a string and it was like the "Tom tom of India." The humble organization officeholders flocked to his cause like flies to a bunghole of a molasses barrel. Where are the Republicans? They are scattered so far apart that each and every one is afraid to trust the other. In fact, they have no organization, no leaders.

In the Seventh District there are only two outstanding Republicans. The rest who call themselves Republicans have practically been under the influence of the Democratic organization all their lives and I venture to predict are ready to do business with them again this fall. You can not find enough Republicans in Maryland or St. Marys to even make up a ticket without taking on men who migrated from other States.

When they buried the Hon. Washington Wilkinson, they buried the Republican party of St. Marys. I may be wrong, but I will venture to predict right now that Albert C. Ritchie will be our nominee for governor and will rule serenely the good old Commonwealth of Maryland for the next four years.

GABRIEL.

Abell, Md., Feb. 4.

The Buy-at-Home Movement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those who reason like the writer of "A Little Fellow," are invited to read our side of the story. And to make it more impressive, I want to say, that I wish America had been democratic enough to give me the kind of chance Joseph had in Egypt: I would have tried to convince the people five years ago of the necessity of lowering the purchasing power of the dollar, and it should have prevented the present calamities.

"Let us look at a few facts" with Mr. Mosher.

A sartorial artist, specially trained in the fine art of producing apparels to fit each lady's figure, and to please their fancy, opens up an "atelier." Ladies are told: "He is trained in Paris." "They all flock in. Soon our artisan is in need of a dozen or more girls; thus employment is already created. And this experience may be duplicated in thousands of instances. All at once, large shipping interests advertise and advocate travel. Most all the moneyed ladies, like spirits, vanish almost overnight, for that season. Gone, gone, gone. To England, to Italy, to France, mostly to France. The mighty purchasing power of the dollar has made them all purchase enough apparel to last them "for the next four years." When they do come back, they only think of their former artist or dressmaker when they happen to have some old remodeling done, and even that seems unwise, because they could have things made "so much cheaper abroad." What do you suppose became of the thousands of artisans formerly serving these late sojourners? They hung their heads in utter disgust. Some of them committed suicide. Hence my suggestion: encourage your local dressmaker and tailor, they need your patronage and will not fuss about the "purchasing power of the dollar." It is one of the ways to prevent kidnaping and banditry.

Senator Copeland's Record.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Yesterday in the press there was a statement to the effect that certain members of the Democratic party are anxious to replace Senator Royal S. Copeland as our representative in the United States Senate. However, these gentlemen will find out in a most decisive manner that the Democratic voters of this State do not want to change.

Senator Copeland's record in the United States Senate is an enviable one; it is marked with a degree of intellectual integrity which makes him so necessary in that important governmental body.

If the Democratic party of this State, under the so-called new leadership, wants merely an office boy to do their bidding, then certainly they want to elect another man, but if the people of the State of New York want an honest representative, one free from political alliances and with intellectual and moral courage to express his honest convictions, then Royal S. Copeland will remain as a senior Senator from the State of New York.

Solving the Parking Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every time I read one of your papers I see an article about the fight against the poor little starlings. I expect to read any day of some one being killed, and it won't be the starlings either.

During the big snowstorm one of your writers went forth in it to gloat over the hardships of these poor starlings slipping and sliding off roofs of buildings trying to find a place to roost through the cold winter night.

What is more beautiful than the flight of birds against a sunset sky? This writer loves to watch the poor little starlings fluttering and darting about in the sunset glow as he goes home from work nightly. Why can't all this silly chatter and war against the starlings be dropped? Let these poor starlings go back to their trees on the avenue. The Traffic Bureau would do well to enlist the starlings to roost in all downtown trees and help stop that all-night parking curse in the downtown streets.

But get that reporter off the starlings, for they are really doing no harm, and it only makes enemies for your paper.

Traffic Lights, Birth Control.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial page for Sunday (February 4), is the most unexceptionally commendable I have seen in any paper. The Post included, for a long time.

Among the letters one might find some slight exception, as in suggesting to G. R. S. that stop lights may be an occasion for speeding when a driver is trying to catch up with them. The average driver is more likely to drive safely if not distracted by the lights. Reckless driving, moreover, should be judged, not by speed, but by stopping distance relative to traffic conditions. Why should not speed regulation be drawn in this way?

Turning to another letter, would the proud "mother of eight" not agree that quality as well as quantity in human infants is of critical importance to society? Certainly, unless birth control and sterilization laws are productive of eugenic effects they will become suicidal; and in this, quantity, indeed, can not be ignored. We would do well to devote more of our gratuitous leisure to more infants — of the right kind.

As Others See It

A Dickens Manuscript.

The family of Sir Henry Fielding Dickens, who died recently, has decided to publish the little manuscript in which his father, Charles Dickens, embodied what he described as "a children's New Testament." Written exclusively for his own children, Dickens regarded the 60 pages and 13 chapters of the manuscript as a family possession and desired that it should never be published. Sir Henry Fielding Dickens, the last survivor of his children, had the manuscript in his keeping for many years, and so long as he lived respected his father's wish. But in his will he gave the manuscript to his wife with a provision that it might be published if his family so decided by a majority vote.

In John Forster's "Life of Dickens" there are two brief references to this manuscript. The first appears in a letter written by Dickens on June 28, 1846, from Lausanne. In this letter he says: "I have not been idle since I have been here . . . I had a good deal to write for Lord John (Russell) about the Ragged schools. I set to work and did that. A good deal for Miss Coutts, in reference to her charitable projects. I set to work and did that. Half of the children's New Testament to write. I set to work and did that." In a note on this letter Forster writes: "This (the children's New Testament) was an abstract in plain language for the use of his children of the narrative of the Four Gospels. Allusion was made shortly after his death to the existence of such a manuscript, with expression of a wish that it might be published, but nothing would have shocked himself so much as any suggestion of that kind. The little piece was of a peculiarly private character, written for his children and exclusively and strictly for their use only."

When Dickens' youngest son, Edward Bulwer Lytton Dickens, emigrated to Australia in 1868, his father gave him a farewell letter full of good advice. "I put a New Testament among your books," he said, "for the very same reasons, and with the very same hopes, that made me write an easy account of it for you when you were a little child. Because it is the best book that ever was, or will be, known in the world; and because it teaches you the best lessons by which any human creature who tries to be truthful and faithful to duty can possibly be guided."

Dickens simplified and condensed history for children in "A Child's History of England," which first appeared serially in "Household Words" in 1851, 1852 and 1853. It was moderately successful when he published it in 1854 in three-volume form, with a dedication to his own children. But apart from the dedication the work had no peculiar family interest. "The Life of Our Lord" he jealously guarded while he lived as the property of himself and his family. Sixty-four years after his death and 88 years after he wrote it his wishes concerning it are to be set aside by virtue of a decision which most lovers of Dickens will consider to be wise.

Carlisle Bargeron

SENATOR ARTHUR ROBINSON is not one whom I would ordinarily hold up as an example to his Republican colleagues but there is one quality that can not be denied him, and that is the ability to get re-elected whenever he comes up. For that reason the course he is pursuing now, in such high contrast to that of his colleagues in the same predicament as he, is worthy of comment.

BARGERON.

Either the Senator is wrong or those of his associates who, too, must face their constituents this fall, err in their conception of what to do. They can't both be right.

• • • •

The Senator is following a course of attack, of losing no opportunity to denounce the Administration, of sounding off in disagreement and diatribe upon the slightest provocation. He has not, in fact, pulled his punches one whit. Robinson in action today is the Robinson in action when there was no Roosevelt popularity. He is the same as in the campaign of 1932. If Mr. Roosevelt's tremendous hold on the country has feazed that gentleman in the slightest it does not show on his face or in any diminishing of his voice.

To say that he is an unusual figure, indeed, an extraordinary one, at the Capitol these days is but to state a simple truth. Nowhere else in the Senate or at the other end of the Capitol, in the House, is there quite his like.

• • • •

Other Republican Senators and members of the House faced with campaigns this year are experiencing sleepless nights. They do not know what course to pursue and, not knowing, figure that their best bet is to keep their mouths shut, ir not try to outdo the Democrats in their support of the President.

Maybe a grateful electorate will overlook their being Republicans and return them to office, they hope. Will they not have shown that as upholders of the President's hands they were just as good as the Democrats?

Then maybe their constituents will not look at it this way at all; maybe with the President's great popularity still prevailing, the voters will want to give him more Democrats, will want to just shower him with them, in fact, as a mark of their affection and esteem. It makes for a quandary, it does.

• • • •

It doesn't make for any quandary for Arthur, though. Right or wrong, that gentleman apparently figures that the best way to insure his return next fall is to create a definite place for himself. In Indiana the question before the voters will not be whether they should replace a Roosevelt Republican with a Roosevelt Democrat. The question will be very plainly whether they want a Roosevelt critic or another supporter.

In short, Robinson is plugging along day after day for an issue against the Administration. The others don't want any issues, or rather they are too timid to try to create any. They hope they will slip in again by virtue of their having kept quiet.

• • • •

I don't know who is right, Robinson or they. It is a fact, though, that no one knows his politics better than Arthur, and there is no question that he considers he is playing the best game now.

There is also this, he appears most confident. There is about him none of the harassed look of his associates. The birthday celebration in honor of the President didn't cause him to lose a wink of sleep. He was up early the next day reading the papers and thinking up new schemes for attack.

Arthur doesn't intend to sit around and wait for the Administration to crack-up in popular favor. He intends to crack it up now. If there is any need for an opposition party, he would seem to be right.

INDIANS CLAY PIPE MAKING.

A collection of rust-eaten relics of Capt. John Smith's 1607 colony on Jamestown Island, the first permanent English-speaking colony in the New World, has just been received by the Smithsonian Institution.

Among the relics are tobacco pipes of the so-called "church deacon" design with the small bowl almost continuous with the stem, like a cigar holder with the end tilted slightly upward. Some in the collection were clearly of Indian workmanship, while others had been made in England, according to the Smithsonian Institution Bulletin.

But the English had missed the trick of pipe making, although their products were superficially indistinguishable from those of the aborigines. The Indian practice was to mold the clay stem around a hollow reed, with the result that there was a large, clear channel for the smoke. The English pushed a small wire through the wet clay to form the channel, resulting in a small hole which must constantly have become clogged. The pipes afford a curious instance of the overlapping of two cultures—the borrowing of an idea by one people from another and the return of the borrowed idea to its original home.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

For President JohnSmith.

The strangest feature of the New Deal, to the reviewer looking out from under a pile of books, is the fact that every man appears to be in training for the Presidency. Not merely unabated but increasing is the public appetite (or the publishers' conception of it) for books on foreign policy, the gold standard, settlement of war debts, state capitalism versus rugged individualism, what to do with the farmer, and so on to infinity. If any problem confronting the President has not already been exposed and settled in book-form—patience! It will appear tomorrow.

Even more numerous than books on the theory are those on the practice—combined narrative and explanation of all that is going on in the "Roosevelt Revolution." But I think it a happy and salutary thing that the man on the street wants to know not only the meaning of what the Government has done but also the implication of the questions it faces. Here are a few books which deal with both.

* * * *

In 1928 and 1929 Wall street called Roger W. Babson a "Jeremiah." He refused to see that the exuberant finance of the moment constituted a permanent New Era. The ability to distrust common stocks at 650 may not have bestowed upon Mr. Babson the rank of No. 1 Seer, but in many of us it has since induced a faith in the sanity of the gentleman from Wellesley Hills, Mass. The book in hand bears us out.

"Washington and the Revolutionists" (Harper, $2.50) is the fourth of Mr. Babson's books about Washington and its ways. Ever since he was war-time director of information for the Labor Administration, he has kept a close eye on the workings of the National Government and a close acquaintance with many of its members. In this volume he discusses the purposes of the "revolutionists" (with whom at first he did not agree, with whom he now finds a ready sympathy), and describes the personalities of the leading New Dealers. The volume is intended especially as a guide to the business man who comes to Washington to do business with the Government. Not only does Mr. Babson list bureau heads, describe the mechanics of an interview with the President or other officers, and attempt in general to assist a stranger to find his feet in governmental labyrinths, but his arguments for present policies are aimed at the point of view of the business class.

He characterizes the whole New Deal in these words: "These people in the Roosevelt Administration feel that they are appointed by God to redistribute wealth. They are not acting from a political angle, or any other selfish angle. They conscientiously believe that the great majority of people in this country are not getting a square deal, and have not for many years." And he adds, very soundly, "We should impress upon the President and his advisers that there needs to be a redistribution of something besides property and income. There needs to be a redistribution of energy, education, intelligence and judgment * * * of initiative, self-control, courage and a willingness to sacrifice."

Believing that the Anglo-Saxon race undergoes something of a revolution every 150 years or so (for which he cites instances), Mr. Babson sees that we are on the threshhold of a genuine New Era, brought about by the conflict over the redistribution of wealth. This, he says, "is being crystallized by the immediate conflict between capital and labor, between private and Government ownership." He feels that neither group will be victorious, that the middle class will rise up and "take charge of the situation with a temporary dictatorship. Then will follow a Constitutional Convention. Today I forecast such a depression in Democracy."

Mr. Babson has written a thoroughly interesting and forthright book. His characterizations of leading figures are sprightly and keen, his views of the New Deal are gratifyingly sound. "Washington and the Revolutionists" stands among the very few books on the subject eminently worth reading.

"Kemmerer on Money" (Winston, $1.50) is the work of a man called "the money doctor of the world." Edwin Walter Kemmerer, now professor at Princeton, has been some time financial adviser to 12 foreign countries, and oddly enough, though he is a proponent in no uncertain terms of the gold standard, every one of these countries has since fallen off it. In other words, there seems to be a slight discrepancy between Prof. Kemmerer's exact theories and the possibility of their applying in a workaday world.

The book is a clear academic exposition of the theories of money, and little more. He discusses the rate of flow of money and its effect on prosperity, but he does not state why our flow has stagnated. He wants a 100-cent dollar, but is willing to accept a 66 2-3-cent dollar for reasons he leaves in the word "political." Moreover, he is somewhat inconsistent in predicting with mathematical accuracy the results of this abased dollar just after he has stigmatized the commodity dollar for its like assumption of results.

But as far as it goes, the book is a clear exposition on a puzzling matter. Once we know these things, however, the question remains where it was as to what we are to do with them.

Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes has written a little book entitled "Money Changers and the New Deal" (Long & Smith, $1). It reviews once again the history of money, summarizes the theories of inflation, refiation, and deflation, and mentions most of the plans which have been offered to get our monetary system working again. After Prof. Kemmerer, the writing seems a little foggy. At the same time it is the gainer in color from Dr. Barnes' journalistic experience. And it is considerably closer than the book above to a sense of human possibility. For a quick review of the subject the volume is excellent.

"The Public Debt: 1919-1930" (privately printed at the Mineoform Press, Washington) is the work of Dr. Henry George Hendricks. In very great detail and scholarly completeness it presents the history of an indebtedness which in 1919 amounted to 26 billions, in 1930 to 16. The book is cool and statistical, and not for the lay reader. But one fact gave me a peculiar jolt and repercussion—that the Great War cost so much that foreign nations will still be owing the United States $2,000,000 in 1988. In 1988—54 years in the future!

Text of Sugar Message

President Believes Both Domestic, Foreign Producers Can Be Benefited Without Extra Cost to Consumer by Foregoing Temporary Gains.

Following is the text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress yesterday proposing that sugar be made a basic commodity in order to cut production and place imports on a quota system:

To the Congress:

Steadily increasing sugar production in the continental United States and in insular regions has created a price and marketing situation prejudicial to virtually everyone interested. Farmers in many areas are threatened with low prices for their beets and cane, and Cuban purchases of our goods have dwindled steadily as her shipments of sugar to this country have declined.

There is a school of thought which believes that sugar ought to be on the free list. This belief is based on the high cost of sugar to the American consuming public.

The annual gross value of the sugar crop to American beet and cane growers is approximately $60,000,000. Those who believe in the free importation of sugar say that the two cents a pound tariff is levied mostly to protect this $60,000,000 crop and that it costs our consuming public every year more than $200,000,000 to afford this protection.

Does Not Urge Free List.

I do not at this time recommend placing sugar on the free list. I feel that we ought first to try out a system of quotas with the threefold object of keeping down the price of sugar to consumers, of providing for the retention of beet and cane farming within our continental limits, and also to provide against further expansion of this necessarily expensive industry.

Consumers have not benefited from the disorganized state of sugar production here and in the insular regions. Both the import tariff and cost of distribution, which together account for the major portion of the consumers' price for sugar, have remained relatively constant during the past three years.

This situation clearly calls for remedial action. I believe that we can increase the returns to our farmers, contribute to the economic rehabilitation of Cuba, provide adequate quotas for the Philippines, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, and at the same time prevent higher prices to our own consumers.

Problem Can Be Solved.

The problem is difficult but can be solved if it is met squarely and if small temporary gains are sacrificed to ultimate general advantage.

The object may be attained most readily through amendment of existing legislation. The agricultural adjustment act should be amended to make sugar beets and sugar cane basic agricultural commodities. It then will be possible to collect a processing tax on sugar, the proceeds of which will be used to compensate farmers for holding their production to the quota level. A tax of less than one-half cent per pound would provide sufficient funds.

Consumers need not and should not bear this tax. It is already within the Executive power to reduce the sugar tariff by an amount equal to the tax. In order to make certain that American consumers shall not bear an increased price due to this tax, Congress should provide that the rate of the processing tax shall in no event exceed the amount by which the tariff on sugar is reduced below the present rate of import duty.

Would License Industry.

By further amendment to the agricultural adjustment act, the Secretary of Agriculture should be given authority to license refiners, importers and handlers to buy and sell sugar from the various producing areas only in the proportion which recent marketings of such areas bear to total United States consumption. The average marketings of the past three years provide on the whole an equitable base, but the base period should be flexible enough to allow slight adjustments as between certain producing areas.

The use of such a base would allow approximately the following preliminary and temporary quotas:

	Short tons
Continental beets	1,450,000
Louisiana and Florida	260,000
Hawaii	935,000
Puerto Rico	821,000
Philippine Islands	1,037,000
Cuba	1,944,000
Virgin Islands	5,000
Total	6,452,000

The application of such quotas would immediately adjust market supplies to consumption, and would provide a basis for reduction of production to the needs of the United States market.

Furthermore in the negotiations for a new treaty between the United States and Cuba to replace the existing commercial convention, which negotiations are to be resumed immediately, favorable consideration will be given to an increase in the existing preferential on Cuban sugars, to an extent compatible with the joint interests of the two countries.

In addition to action made possible by such legislative and treaty changes, the Secretary of Agriculture already has authority to enter into codes and marketing agreements with manufacturers which would permit savings in manufacturing and distributing costs. If any agreements or codes are entered into, they should be in such form as to assume that producers and consumers share in the resulting savings.

President Calls For Quota Plan To Rule Sugar

ida cane, 260,000; Hawaii, 935,000; Puerto Rico, 821,000 Philippine Islands, 1,037,000; Cuba, 1,944,000; Virgin Islands, 5,000; total, 6,452,000.

"The application of such quotas," he said, "would immediately adjust market supplies to consumption, and would provide a basis for reduction of production to the needs of the United States market.

"Furthermore, in the negotiations for a new treaty between the United States and Cuba to replace the existing commercial convention, which negotiations are to be resumed immediately, favorable consideration will be given to an increase in the existing preferential on Cuban sugars, to an extent compatible with the joint interests of the two countries."

Free List Mentioned.

While, in effect, the President's proposal would stabilize both the production and importation of sugar, and pay benefits for domestic crop reduction, thus contributing to the well-being of American cane and beet growers, he spoke darkly of "a school of thought" that believes sugar should be on the free list.

He did not "at this time" recommend doing this, but he took occasion to point out such advocates argue that the American consumer is paying $200,000,000 more for sugar, with its tariff, in order to protect an annual $60,000,000 crop. What he did favor was depressing the price to consumers while curbing further expansion domestically of "this necessarily expensive industry."

The President suggested a processing tax of less than half a cent a pound, which would be compensated by a corresponding reduction in the sugar tariff. This would not add to the consumers' burden, but rather ultimately would be paid by a reduction in Treasury revenue from the tariff.

Would License Industry.

By further amendment to the agriculture act, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace would be empowered to license refiners, importers and handlers, thus by codes obtaining the authority to allot quotas. This principle, already established as to liquor importing, has become firmly an Administration policy.

Asked at a subsequent press conference if the sugar reduction campaign might mean an increase in price, Mr. Wallace said he thought sugar would go up since all prices are now rising. Questioned as to putting sugar on the free list, he said:

"When you have a vested interest of this kind, especially when a large number of people are affected, you would not want to put sugar on the free list without doing something to tide them over."

He admitted "there are prominent people in the Administration who are free listers," but it was indicated that this politically potent idea would not get far in Congress and thus was considered futile. The Secretary further said his powers of controlling distributors under the AAA, in an effort to lower prices, were limited.

Apply to Raw Sugar.

The quota set up by Mr. Roosevelt, which would apply to raw sugar and the 1934 crop, total about 500,000 tons less than the stabilization agreement argued about and rejected by Secretary Wallace last summer. The amount is somewhat more than the 6,338,500-ton consumption last year, and considerably less than the 7,605,000-ton production.

In comparison with Department of Agriculture figures for 1933, consumption of American beet sugar would be raised from 1,373,000 to 1,450,000 tons and Cuban sugar from 1,609,000 to 1,944,000 tons. Others cut from last year would be the Philippines, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, in varying amounts, although the President's quotas were based on the last three-year average.

Immediate reaction in Congress appeared favorable. Senators Edward P. Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, and Pat Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, applauded the message. Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, differed in that he favors encouraging, not restricting, the domestic industry.

Would Help Cuba.

That the Roosevelt Administration contemplates giving Cuba a better market, which the President pointed out would mean increased purchases from these shores, has been obvious ever since the Mendieta government was recognized. A reduction of half a cent in the 2-cent tariff against Cuban sugar has been proposed by the Federal Tariff Commission and a concession close to that figure apparently is favored by the President.

Senator John H. Bankhead and his brother, Representative William B. Bankhead, Democrats, disclosed the President gave his approval to their compulsory cotton control plan after they had reported questionnaires sent Southern growers showed sentiment 98 per cent favorable. Production that last year reached 13,000,000 bales would be cut to 9,000,000 under the program in an effort to lower the present carryover of 11,000,000 bales.

The Senate Agriculture Committee already has favorably reported the bill and Representative Bankhead said hearings on it would be begun by the corresponding House committee at 10 a. m., Monday. In general, the bill provides that growers obtain permits from county administrators to show they are not exceeding production, with the tax on any excess collectable at the "bottleneck at the gin."

Move "From Producers."

"This movement," Secretary Wallace said, "comes from the producers themselves. We sent 40,000 questionnaires to find out sentiment and they came back indicating 98 per cent in favor, along with estimates that about 85 per cent of the people in their sections favor compulsory control."

But for this expression of the South, Mr. Wallace made plain, he would not favor Government compulsion. Among fears of agricultural leaders are that farmers, producing more than their allotment, might patronize "bootleg cotton gins," operating at night, or find other means to circumvent the purpose of the program.

"I have said from the first," he went on, "that if it were clear the producers wanted compulsion we would not deprive them of the centralizing power of the Federal Government. * * * I had hoped we would not get in the field of Government compulsion; I preferred education, but if the cotton South is a unit for it, we are not going to hold it up."

Food Bill Altered.

Senator Copeland announced he had obtained Presidential approval of the new pure food and drug bill, which is understood to omit many provisions of the original measure against which manufacturers had complained during the Senate Commerce sub-committee hearing. The final text of the bill will be submitted to the full committee at once, he said.

The most controversial feature of the earlier measure—placing arbitrary power in the Secretary of Agriculture—has been altered to provide for the appointment of two boards of appeal, one to hear food complaints, the other for drugs and cosmetics. Truthful advertising previsions of the bill place the burden of proof on the manufacturer, not the publication, he added.

"Sugar Bowl" Greets Plan With Uncertainty

Denver, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Western "sugar bowl of the Nation" received President Roosevelt's message to Congress on sugar with mixed feelings today.

A larger beet quota had been sought.

However, the 1,450,000 short ton limit drew from J. D. Pancake, secretary of the National Beet Growers Association, the comment that "a half loaf is better than none."

"While I am disappointed in the quota," Pancake said, "I am intensely gratified that some action has been taken to bring the industry out of chaos."

The beet quota, he said, is under the 1933 crop, which is estimated at 1,700,000 short tons of raw sugar. It represents a fair average, however, of the crops of the last five years.

The processing tax provision will be pleasing to producers, he said, except that most companies have an excise tax provision in their contracts by which the net price of sugar sets the net price of beets. Under such contracts, he believes, the processing tax would be deducted by the refiners from the price paid for their beets.

U. S. Files Answer To Humphrey Suit

President's Right to Oust Trade Official Upheld.

The Department of Justice filed a brief in the Court of Claims yesterday in the case of William E. Humphrey, former Federal Trade Commissioner, who is resisting President Roosevelt's order of October 7, removing him from office.

Humphrey, in a test case, is seeking recovery of $1,200 in back salary, which he contends is due him through unlawful removal from office. The case is expected to be tried next month.

The Department of Justice brief contends the President may remove a trade commissioner for inefficiency, malfeasance or other cause and that any statute prohibiting removal would be an unconstitutional limitation on the President's powers.

An Intimate Sonnet.

Just as there is a certain charm about persons who have no mask or pose, but are natural, unaffected, and informal in their manner, so sermons, public addresses, and literature that are intimate and almost confidential in style—provided always they have an innate and unpretentious dignity—are always more effective than those which are conventional and formal. Even in stage acting this is true; in former times the actors spouted their lines like a set firework; so that when an actor appeared who spoke easily and naturally, the effect was almost startling.

Well, even in poetry this is often true. Some poets in Elizabethan times wrote in a highly formal manner, so that no matter how smooth and melodious their style, it usually affected the ear more than the heart. Their poetry was respectable, but it lacked the final eloquence of simplicity. In the midst of all these stately measures, in the year 1594 Michael Drayton produced a sonnet whose sincere and forthright passion made a tremendous impression. We feel today its impact.

Love's Farewell.

Since there's no help, come let us kiss and part—
Nay, I have done, you get no more of me;
And I am glad, yea glad with all my heart,
That thus so cleanly I myself can free;
Shake hands for ever, cancel all our vows,
And when we meet at any time again,
Be it not seen in either of our brows
That we one jot of former love retain.
Now at the last gasp of love's latest breath,
When his pluse failing, passion speechless lies,
And innocence is closing up his eyes,
—Now if thou would'st, when all have given him over,
From death to life thou might'st him yet recover!

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE CRIME KING'S ARREST.

Prosecutor: What prisoner?

Policeman: Machine Gun Wippinger, slayer of three police officers, two bank cashiers, a hotel clerk, one or two judges and an undetermined number of women and children. Shall we lock him up now?

Prosecutor: Machine Gun Wippinger, the most vicious gunman of our times, the scourge of a dozen States, the heartless perpetrator of unspeakable crimes! Lock him up now? Are you crazy? You know the routine?

Policeman: You mean the . . .

Prosecutor: Phone for the newsreel men at once. Ask them to be here at 1 p. m. That will give me time to shave and get into that new suit I look so well in.

* * * *

Policeman: They're on the way. The new lady sheriff sent for them as soon as she heard the crime king was caught.

Prosecutor (quite annoyed): She would. Where is she now?

Policeman: I think she's over at the beauty parlor getting a finger wave. She wants the pictures delayed until 2 o'clock so she can get a becoming hat.

* * * *

Prosecutor (severely): I want you to notify me first hereafter when any especially vicious desperadoes are captured. The last time we landed a big criminal I didn't have time to slick up.

Machine Gun Wippinger: Hey, cut the gab and lock me up! I'm sick of all this baloney.

Prosecutor (very affably): Now, Wippie, you know you'll have to wait for the usual group photographs. The city and State officials have been counting on getting their pictures taken with you for weeks. You wouldn't want to disappoint them.

Machine Gun Wippinger: I know my rights. I don't have to be photographed with you guys.

* * * *

Prosecutor: Now, be a good fellow. If you were an ordinary criminal it would be different, but you're one of the worst in the history of the country. You have outraged the Nation's sense of decency, you have behaved like a wild animal, your crimes have shocked people everywhere. Therefore you've got to be considerate and let us be photographed with you.

Machine Gun Wippinger: What for?

Prosecutor: For the newspapers and the movie houses. Think of what it will mean to me! Think what it will mean to the sheriff! Think what it will mean to my assistants! Don't be a hog, Wippie. You don't want to grab all the publicity, do you?

Machine Gun Wippinger: But I'm getting sick of it. The last time they pinched me—it was after I killed those detectives—the governor, the mayor and seven magistrates made me pose for pictures with 'em, too. It's getting to be a strain on my nerves.

Prosecutor: But lissen, Wippie, do it once more from me, will you?

Machine Gun Wippinger: Now look here . . .

Prosecutor: Aw, I got a new blue suit for it and everything. And I promised my wife she and the baby could be photographed with you, too, for the movies.

in the riots; the Rue Royale, a leading "battlefield" in the demonstrations, and the ministry of marine, whose first floor mobs sacked Tuesday.

Heavy forces of mounted guards and police, armed with rifles, had little to do.

12 Former Premiers Available.

"The urgency of the hour does not permit me to form any sort of ministry other than one of a political truce, composed of eminent men well versed in statecraft," he said.

A dozen former premiers are available for posts in the new cabinet, a successor to that of Edouard Daladier which was wrecked on the rocks of suspicion, growing out of the $40,000,000 Bayonne pawnshop fiasco, and economic maladjustments.

Tardieu and Joseph Paul-Boncour, foreign affairs; Herriot, education; Pierre Etienne Flandin and Joseph Caillaux, finance; Pierre Laval, interior; Louis Barthou and Alexandre Millerand, justice, and Jules Steeg and Albert Sarraut, colonies.

Many deputies expressed belief that Daladier and Chautemps would not be called, for they headed cabinets that fell on charges of corruption.

Gen. Maxime Weygand was spoken of as a possible minister of war.

It was understood, meanwhile, that Doumergue demanded the dissolution of Parliament and the right to rule by decree, if necessary.

"If the Chamber itself asks the chiefs of each big party and the former premiers to meet and declare a truce," Doumergue insisted, "order will quickly return."

It was learned today that one factor forcing the resignation of Daladier's ministry was his demand that martial law be declared to curb the rioting.

Veterans Were Unarmed.

President Lebrun refused. Later National Union veterans told M. Lebrun they were unarmed in their antipolice demonstrations Tuesday, when ten were fatally wounded by gunfire, but proposed to riot, with arms, Wednesday.

M Doumergue was given quarters in the foreign office once occupied by the late Aristide Briand, many times French premier. Without delay, he started the cabinet-forming task.

From a conference with M. Lebrun he went to pay traditional calls on the presidents of the Chamber and Senate. His route became a triumphal march; everywhere he was enthusiastically acclaimed.

"Vive la France!" was the cry that came time after time.

In becoming premier, Doumergue gives up the directorship—to which he was appointed a year ago—of the Suez Canal, a position with a salary reputed to be between $12,000 and $24,000 annually. He is not rich, and the change means a sacrifice.

Peace Is Relinquished.

He relinquishes, too, the peace and rest he enjoyed at his country home in southern France after spending more than half his 71 years in the service of his country.

There will be compensations—the honor of being chosen the "savior" of France and the pleasure of enjoying this distinction with his wife, whom he married immediately on the expiration of his presidential term in 1931, at the age of 68.

When he entered the presidency in 1925, he was the only bachelor and Protestant in French history to occupy that office.

As President, he was an individualist—once he created a sensation by attending a formal afternoon function wearing yellow gloves and no spats—and so kind-hearted that he caused opposition criticism by commuting many death sentences. He hates war; he was one of the first to approve the Kellogg pact.

There was talk, generally discredited, that Doumergue might reinstate Jean Chiappe, former prefect of Paris police, whose dismissal by Daladier was another factor in popular unrest.

Ickes Studies Sale of Bonds Held by PWA

Right to Reject All Offers on Municipal Issues Would Be Retained.

The Public Works Administration is considering sale of municipal bonds it has purchased in financing Public Works projects of municipalities, Secretary Ickes announced yesterday.

The administrator said he has directed his staff to investigate the possibility of selling certain of the municipal bonds it acquired. The bonds represent approximately 70 per cent of the total non-Federal allotments made to public bodies and municipalities.

The Public Works Administration holds local general obligation and revenue bonds purchased in blocks or entire issues in financing public works. The Public Works section of the National industrial recovery act gives the Administration the right "to sell any security acquired."

PWA bid par and accrued interest at interest rates of 4 per cent. Ordinarily they are acquired in small blocks with actual purchase consummated and funds transferred as needed to continue construction work, under terms of a bond purchase contract signed by the borrower.

"Sales of these bonds to the highest qualified bidders, provided the bid and responsibility of bidders are satisfactory, is being given serious thought," Ickes said. "If proper bids are not forthcoming and it does not seem advantageous to sell, the matter will not be pushed at present because the Government is receiving interest on its investment in such bonds while it holds them.

"The right will be reserved in all circumstances to reject all and any bids," he added. "It does not appear advisable in embarking on such a plan to seek to dispose of any large blocks of securities until satisfactory selling procedure is perfected."

Details of procedure will be announced if decision to sell some of the bonds is reached, it was stated.

President Will Urge Boy Scout Mobilization

President Roosevelt will issue a National call for mobilization of the Boy Scouts in a brief talk over the air at about noon tomorrow, according to the Associated Press. Definite arrangements have not been completed.

Military Aids Are Received By President

Army, Navy and Marine Corps Fete Held at White House.

Last State Reception of Season Glitters With Bright Uniforms.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

All the splendor of the military service was on display last evening at the White House when the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at the last state reception of the season in honor of the officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps stationed in and near Washington.

This reception, which is always the last one on the official program for the season, is rivaled in brilliancy only by the diplomatic reception. Last evening high ranking officers were present with their wives and families, as well as the officers of junior grade, all wearing full dress uniform. The Marine Band in scarlet uniforms, and the White House aids resplendent with gold braid blended into an array of regalia from all branches of the service.

Last evening a larger number of guests were present than at the previous functions this year, and many stayed late into the evening dancing in the east room. Promptly at 9 o'clock the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, preceded by the corps of military and naval aids, and followed by the members of the Cabinet and their wives, proceeded from the state dining room into the blue room where they received their guests before a screen of smilax and ferns. The Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, headed the long line, and was followed closely by the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William H. Standley, and the ranking officers of the service.

Guests gathered in animated groups in the state dining room, where they conversed and partook of the grape juice punch and light refreshments laid on the beautifully decorated buffet, an innovation of Mrs. Roosevelt, who is the First Lady in several years to serve refreshments at the state receptions. Flowers in handsome vases added a home-like touch to the formal rooms of the Executive Mansion.

Envoy's Wife Rejoices At Gallantry in Crises Of Hungarian Women

Mme. Pelenyi, American Born, Tells How Even Girls of Nobility Have Grappled Bravely With Post-War Adversity; Her Own Romance With Diplomat Was Interrupted by World Conflagration.

Noble women since the time of Ruth have experienced the growth of an individual loyalty into a national and racial loyalty. Which proves that to know and to understand another people is to find in them the same qualities possessed by one's own. Many women in the Diplomatic Corps represent countries which are theirs by adoption, rather than by birth.

By Elizabeth Young.

The gallantry of spirit displayed by Hungarian women in meeting changed circumstances brought about by post-war political and financial chaos has made an indelible impression on Mme. Pelenyi.

Since the first years after the war, this American-born wife of the new Minister from Hungary has watched the women of every class in her adopted country facing a strange new life with steadily mounting courage and resourcefulness.

"It is the fine spirit with which sheltered young girls, especially of the nobility, brought up just to be charming hostesses and heads of households, have gone into business that makes their achievement seem so remarkable," said Mme. Pelenyi.

"Some members of the nobility are making and selling hats. Many of them have gone into shops. Some can do shorthand in three languages, and even so, it is hard for them to find positions. That was one of the biggest problems they had to face, apart from their lack of technical training. They had to create their own place and then fill it. Their courage and ingenuity has been magnificent. They have accepted their changed fortune with such good grace.

Saved by Sense of Humor.

"Among the most tragic cases of the formerly well-to-do are those of young girls isloated on country estates, without funds to travel. Their lives must be lonely from the social point of view, but if so, they are finding consolation by taking an interest in modern methods of agriculture. Some of them have pedigreed stock farms.

"Hungarian women have a keen sense of humor. Their reaction in every situation is so much that of the modern American women that I never had a sense of being with a foreign group.

"In the towns they seem to be enjoying very much the new, freer life post-war conditions have brought about. The old-fashioned system of strict chaperonage has been considerably relaxed, and they follow what we in America consider the normal social pattern."

Traditional Hospitality.

"They are overwhelmingly hospitable, warm-hearted and friendly. This is a traditional national characteristic of Hungarians. In stage-coach days, guests had to announce their departure a week in advance, or they might not be permitted to leave. And even then, when the day for departure arrived, they might find the wheels of their coaches on a roof top, or in the branches of a tree. Or the axles might be greased with wolf fat to make the horses shy and refuse to be harnessed. The same spirit prevails today, although, of course, one's host does not conceal one's car wheels in the tree tops."

Neither history nor fiction has recorded a more pleasing romance than that which united the sweet, violet-eyed former Miss Sue Wade Harman, of Cleveland, and John Pelenyi, distinguished and popular Hungarian diplomat.

They met in Cleveland in 1912, when Mr. Pelenyi was in the Hungarian consular service. In 1913 they became engaged. Then the war broke out. And in the face of the hazardous future, and to enable each of them to serve his own country, the engagement was dissolved by mutual consent. Nor did they communicate for three years.

Engages in War Work.

"But then, of course, we were more engaged than ever," Mme. Pelenyi remarked, with one of her delightful smiles.

In 1917 Mr. Pelenyi was recalled to Hungary. In the meantime, Miss Harman continued her work with the Junior League and among social agencies in Cleveland, and did a great deal of war work besides. She was vice president of the Visiting Nurses Association, chairman of the Perkins Day Nursery and head of the Cleveland Red Cross garment inspection committee. She was also a graduate of nurses' aid and civilian relief classes.

In 1918 she went abroad with a commission sent to Italy to do research work in tuberculosis control and to exchange ideas with the Italian Red Cross in this field, as well as in the field of public health in general. After a year's work with the Red Cross in Italy, she was decorated by both the Italian Red Cross and by the Italian government.

By this time, Mr. Pelenyi was in Holland, working through the churches to obtain aid for war-torn Transylvania. They communicated by telegram, but did not meet.

Romance Is Renewed.

Her work for tuberculosis control concluded, the young American was sent into "the Abruzzi"—the primitive mountain section of Italy—visiting families whose sons were serving in the American Army, and to check on whether they were receiving proper allowance, since many of them had lost communication with their sons.

"That was one of the most interesting and picturesque experiences of my life," Mme. Pelenyi recalled. "I went into that region alone. It was just like living in the fifteenth century. I would make an overnight stop at some picturesque ancient village, and work out from there the following day."

In 1919 Miss Harman returned to Cleveland, and it was not long before Mr. Pelenyi was sent to this country. He was the first Hungarian admitted in this country after the war.

It was not until 1920 that they met again. This time, illness in Miss Harman's family, delayed their marriage for another three years. In 1923, ten years after they became engaged, they were married. And to see the Minister and Mrs. Pelenyi together is to realize that theirs is a rare and true love match.

Always a student, Mme. Pelenyi since her marriage has been completely engrossed in absorbing the history, tradition and culture of the Hungarian people.

"The peasant art of Hungary is fascinating, because it is so spontaneous and unsophisticated," she said. "The seigneurial art of the country shows unmistakably Italian, Turkish and German influence. But the art of the peasantry is typically Hungarian.

"It reflects their love of flowers and all growing things. One finds this love in their old flower songs, their poetry of the wheatfields and the vineyards, and in their beautiful potteries and embroideries. There is always reference to the tulip, the rose, the rosemary and the pomegranate."

After her marriage to the Hungarian diplomat, Mme. Pelenyi lived in Washington for seven years, where her husband was counselor of the Legation, before he was accredited to Geneva in 1930 as Minister to the League of Nations.

But each year they managed to visit Hungary, and Mme. Pelenyi seized each visit as an opportunity for learning more about her adopted country, which she dearly loves.

Hungarian Achievements.

"To know the Hungarian people is to love them," she said. "One respects the spirit which has impelled them to fight so nobly through the centuries to preserve their independence. And they are such a gifted race. Not only in music and the arts, but in science and inventions. They have contributed much to civilization. They were the first people to have a constitution on the continent and the first to recognize religious equality. Some of their centuries-old laws regarding women are almost modern in spirit."

Mme. Pelenyi is assembling special data on Hungary's contributions to civilization, which she hopes to make available to some gifted writer whose talents may bring it to the attention of the public.

"There has been so little written in English about Hungary," she lamented. She herself does little writing in Hungarian, although she has a growing grasp of the language, and an even broader knowledge of its literature.

Jewish Women Study to Combat Anti-Semitism

Schools in 200 Cities Will Train Them to Refute Propaganda.

A Nation-wide course of study to train Jewish women leaders in combating anti-Semitism propaganda in the United States will begin early in March under the direction of the National Council of Jewish Women. Announcement of the study course was made yesterday by Mrs. Arthur Brin, of Minneapolis, president of the council.

The "school," which will have branches in 200 cities, including Washington, will be under the direct supervision of a committee of one thousand, now in the process of formation. Mrs. Leonard B. Schloss and Mrs. Alexander Wolf, of Washington, have been asked to join the committee and to serve as National directors of the project.

"We are awaiting instructions from Mrs. Alexander Kohut, of New York, chairman of the committee of one thousand, before we make definite plans for the course of study here," said Mrs. Scholss yesterday. "According to information we have already received the course will be built upon the racial history of the Jews and will teach what anthropologists, economists, sociologists and psychologists have to say of our contribution to the progress of the United States."

Mrs. Brin, president of the council, is making plans to have literature distributed to libraries and to arrange community lectures through the 200 branch "schools."

"Since Germany is placing the reason for persecuting Jews on a pseudo-scientific basis with definitely formulated racial theories, we must refute those theories by sound, scientific facts," explained Mrs. Brin in describing the course of study for Jewish women.

Children's Matinee Will Aid Hospital

A matinee for children, with two Walt Disney films and a feature film on the program, will be given in Red Cross House at Walter Reed Hospital tomorrow at 3:30 o'clock as a benefit for the Memorial Chapel, sponsored by the Gray Ladies of the Red Cross Volunteer Service.

Chef of Union Station's Savarin Discerns Changes In Demands of American Public About Its Food

Chef Mottaz is not even mildly disturbed when his culinary creations come back untasted to the kitchen at Union Station's Savarin Restaurant. It is too bad people have to hurry, but that is the fate of railroad station diners. One of the cooks examines the depths of the huge stock pot in the Savarin's kitchen. Chef Mottaz, right, tells you of a new way to prepare string beans, and gives you a meat recipe which he has found to be popular.

Mottaz, Who Feeds Hurrying Hordes Daily, Relates Trends

Patrons Fussier Than They Used to Be; Want Substantial Meals Devoid of Side Dishes; Chef Evolves Recipes and Divulges One for Mignonette of Beef.

Whether one gobbles a ham sandwich with one eye on the clock, or lingers luxuriously over the demi-tasse when time is nothing, the food should be good.

People of all classes sift through a railroad station restaurant, and the classes must be satisfied. This means a complex program for the chef—food for the hurried, for the leisurely, for the pockets of the rich, for the pennies of the poor.

By Susan Mills.

Trains come wheezing into Union Station and empty their loads of hurried people. There are cries of "Here, porter," "Where's my luggage?" and "We've just time enough to eat something between trains."

Some glance at their watches as they pour into the waiting room, bustle into the Savarin lunch room and bawl their orders, adding a sharp "Make it snappy, I've only 10 minutes!"

Chef Mottaz, of the Savarin, manages to feed an average of 1,200 persons a day, and the varied tastes don't ruffle him in the slightest.

"We catch people from every class," he said. "People who pay money for high-class food, and who are used to good hotel menus. Then there are people who eat always in middle-class restaurants, and those who never eat anywhere but in a lunchroom. We have to give them their ham and cabbage, or frogs' legs, anything.

"And people are in such a hurry, one eye on the clock, the other on their plate, and they can't enjoy the food I plan. But it doesn't bother me. It would be hard if it did, to see all the good things come back untasted.

"But Americans are more fussy about what they eat now than they used to be. They want to know what is in the food. I guess it is because they haven't so much money to spend and they want to get their money's worth!" He laughed.

"Then, too, people don't seem to want any more side dishes—they like their food substantial. I used to put on the menu side dishes, but no more. People want steaks, and roasts, and stews, now.

"One big difference in this country and the other side, is that in France people eat more fresh vegetables. Here, the housewife grabs a can-opener, and dinner is ready! It is a bad habit. But maybe American housewives are lazy, no?

Fascination of Cooking.

"Yet I think some vegetables are better canned than fresh. Asparagus, for instance. But I can't eat canned spaghetti, "he wrinkled his nose," it is terrible!

"Yes, I have cooked a long time. I started when I was a little boy, only 12 years old. I was apprentice three years.

"Then I cooked in kitchens in France—I am French—and Switzerland; then I came to this country. When I came I had learned all about cooking, pastry and everything. In this country an apprentice learns only how to peel potatoes and wash pans.

"I once was at the old Waldorf in New York. I have been in Washington's Savarin 13 years.

"No, I don't get tired of cooking. I always find somthing new. Sometimes it is hard, but to me cooking is interesting. Maybe some people lose their appetites when they cook all the time, but I have no regular meals, I pick 'em up as I go along!

Better String Beans.

"Look, I will show you something new." He led the way into the kitchen's big ice house, and took a kettle off the shelf.

"Look, string beans. Not prepared long like the usual way, but chopped up fine. I take a handful, and chop them with a knife into pieces about a quarter inch wide. It is good when beans have many strings, and when they are big. It looks pretty, too, don't you think?

"That is a simple thing, but people like to eat what looks pretty, and it is easy to make things look pretty."

He led the way back through the kitchen. One of the cooks was preparing a big pan of shrimps. Chef Mottaz gave an order in French that was answered in the same language.

"You know," he said, "the big kitchens are a little world all their own. They are like the old country. We all speak French here, as in most kitchens. I have in this kitchen French, Spanish and Swiss cooks.

Chefs' Changing Status.

"In Europe the chef was a real big gentleman. He made big money, and the people, looked up to him. It is like that in this country now, since the war, but before that the chefs were treated like servants. But people have traveled in Europe, they have tasted European food, they come back and they think the chef is a smart man, yes?

"My favorite dish? I don't know. I like mos' things. And I like to cook mos' things, too. No, I don't have strong tastes.

"A recipe? Yes, I give you one which will be easy for a housewife to prepare—it very good, too."

Mignonette of Beef.

Roll 1 pound of hamburger into four or five little cakes (cork shape), wrap each one in a slice of bacon, flatten same, and cook in shallow pan with butter until well browned. Serve on slice of toast. Garnish with sliced tomato and French fried potatoes.

1,000 Panhellenic Members To Hear First Lady Tomorrow

Reception Will Precede Sorority Women's Luncheon.

The Washington Panhellenic luncheon, to be held at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow at 1 o'clock, will be attended by 1,000 sorority women. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who is to be the guest of honor and only speaker, will talk on "Subsistence Farms." Preceding Mrs. Roosevelt's talk the George Washington University Glee Clubs will give a program.

A brief reception will be held at 1 o'clock in the dining room. The doors to the ballroom will be opened at 1:15 o'clock for the luncheon.

Sorority women who have been asked to serve as hostess will meet with Miss Josephine Ranson at 12:45 o'clock in the east foyer. Additional persons serving as hostesses are: Mrs. Lester Boykin, Mrs. Eugene Burgess, Miss Elinor Burt, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. D. W. Davis, Miss Beryl Edmiston, Mrs. Charles Ekles, Mrs. William Elliott 3d, Miss Betty Eidhammer, Mrs. Ralph Erkskine, Mrs. Margaret Fuller, Miss Mary Alice Gibson, Miss Maxine Girt, Mrs. Alan Gray, Miss Inez Howard, Mrs. James T. Jardine, Miss Elva Keplinger, Mrs. William E. Lee, Mrs. Willard D. Miller, Miss Dorothy Perkins, Miss Northa Porter, Miss Virginia Rand, Miss Vivian Robb, Mrs. Leland Sutherland, Miss Viva Tinker, and Mrs. Richard Wick.

Guests of honor who will sit at the speaker's table with Mrs. Roosevelt are Miss Helen Dyer, president of the Washington Panhellenic Association, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Judge Anabel Matthews, Miss Grace Abbott, Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, Mrs. William John Cooper, Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. Mary Machia Gardner, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Harvey Wiley, Miss Charl Williams, Mrs. Maxine Davis Getty, Mrs. Margaretta Oren Lindsay, Mrs. Joseph B. Hubbard, Dean Marie Mount, Miss Bess Goodykoontz, Dean Mary Louise Brown, Mrs. Helen Bunting Brown, Miss Josephine Ransom, Mrs. J. Dinner to Honor Chancellor Gray

Faculty Women Will Be Hostesses Tomorrow.

The Faculty Woman's Club of the Graduate School of American University will give a dinner tomorrow evening at the Army and Navy Club, in honor of Chancellor and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray. Mrs. Lucius C. Clark, wife of the dean of the graduate school, will preside.

Members of the committee arranging the dinner are Mrs. Frederick L. Benton, Mrs. Frank W. Collier, Mrs. George S. Duncan and Miss Hazel H. Feagans.

Dr. Gray, former pastor of Central Methodist Church in Detroit, arrived in Washington last month and is now residing with his family on the college campus. He and Mrs. Gray have been guests of honor at a number of teas and dinners to meet the faculties of the various branches of the college. Their daughter, Betty, has registered at the College of Liberal Arts for the second semester's work.

Egyptian Lecture Guests Announced

Legation Secretary Will Be Host February 15.

The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, the Minister of Venezuela and Senora de Areaya, Dr. Nicholas A. Lely, First Secretary, Legation of Greece; Miss Nella Veverka, Senorita Almenar, Senorita Urrutia, Mr. and Mrs. Francis M. Savage, Dr. and Mrs. Oakley Totten are among the guests, who have accepted invitations to attend a musicale and a lecture on Egyptian art and music to be given at the District League of American Pen Women clubrooms February 15 by Mr. Andre Cottani, Secretary of the Egyptian Legation. The program has been arranged by Elena de Sayn, chairman of music of the league.

Commander and Mrs. Lybrand Smith will entertain at dinner at the Shoreham tomorrow evening in honor of their daughter, Miss Damaris Smith, a student at the Corcoran School of Art, whose debut will take the form of a tea at the residence of her parents, 3312 Thirty-fifth street northwest, Saturday afternoon.

Capt. and Mr. Wilhelm L. Friedell have issued invitations for a dance in honor of their daughter, Miss Lucie Van Der Veer Friedell, to be given on February 21, in the Sail Loft at the Navy Yard.

Paris Riots Fail To Halt Fashions

Afternoon Instead of Night Display Only Concession to Mobs.

By Adelaide Kerr.

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP).—A sculptured silhouette designed with fullness in front and seeming to "float" behind was launched today as the latest note in spring fashions.

It was presented by Lelong, who because of political disturbances, canceled a gala night show and rushed an afternoon display. Afterward, buyers generally hurried to hotels and remained indoors to avoid trouble.

They frequently had front bodice bows and rever effects caught with diamond arrows and stars. They were worn with waist-length capes trimmed with shimmering sequins or a short, iridescent fringe.

There were numerous tailored evening gowns of white and mauve crepes and dark lame taffetas, designed with the same tendency to fullness in front.

Sports clothes stressed trim suits of light brown and gray wools and were designed with tailored or semifitted jackets. White washable or colored wool blouses were worn with them.

Mrs. Ickes to Lecture Tonight at St. Thomas'

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heads the list of patronesses for a lecture to be given by Mrs. Harold I. Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, at 8:30 o'clock tonight in St. Thomas' Episcopal parish hall on the subject, "The Indians of the Southwest."

The patronesses, in addition to Mrs. Roosevelt, are Mrs. H. M. Clabaugh, Mrs. Walter E. Edge, Mrs. Benjamin Helen, Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, Mrs. Benjamin Pilson, Mrs. Joseph E. Washington and Mrs. Alfred A. Wheat. Mrs. Gilbert Ritter has charge of arrangements, assisted by Miss Frances Smith, Mrs. Charles F. McGuire, Mrs. J. Slater Davidson, Mrs. R. H. A. Carter, Mrs. Kossuth Niles, Mrs. Harry Taylor, Mrs. Herbert Howell, Mrs. H. F. Ault, Mrs. James W. Reilly and Mrs. W. C. Prentiss.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney H. Reizenstein, whose marriage took place on Monday, are at the Mayflower Hotel for an indefinite stay. Mrs. Reizenstein was formerly Mrs. Edna Newman, of New York.

'Suitcase Living' Fits Ma Sunday

Evangelist's Wife Says She Couldn't Bear to Just Stay at Home.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—After spending most of 45 years on the road, Mrs. Billy Sunday, wife of the evangelist, said today she "would die if I had to stay at home and just rest." "Ma" Sunday lives in a suitcase and enjoys it.

"I wouldn't know how to live any other way," said the tall, animated woman, whose hair at 65 is hardly gray. "Even when I'm at home, I keep my things in a suitcase. I'm like a magician we met one time, who said he never could find anything in a bureau drawer.

"It would be rather dull just staying home and keeping house and cooking. I can cook, but I don't like to."

Billy Sunday disapproves of careers for married women, his wife said, but "Ma" Sunday has managed to have one along with his. She exhorts gatherings of women while her husband is holding men's meetings, and she also presides at prayer meetings.

With all this, she has reared four children, more or less in a suitcase, too, for she said she had never spent more than six or eight years of her whole married life at home.

She is still a prohibitionist, but a tolerant one.

"Personally, I wouldn't care if everyone else in the world were wet, I wouldn't be," she asserted. "But this is a democracy, and the majority rules. I just say, 'You folks won. Go ahead and have it.' Of course, there were abuses under prohibition. There are always abuses."

First Trees Planted In Honor of President

Sixteen tree plantings, the first in honor of President Roosevelt to be registered on the National honor roll of the American Tree Association, were reported today by Mrs. Ted Cottrell, conservation chairman of the third district of the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs, Birmingham.

The planting, reported to Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, was done by clubs in the federation on the President's birthday. Registrations from other States are to be made by various clubs.

Address on Lincoln Today.

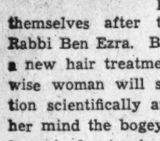
Sunset Colors Glow in Nail Polish; Mexican Trend in Merchandise.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

The stealthy tread of age is often first detected by the advent of gray hair. That horrible feeling that youth is retreating and that we are caught in an avalanche of increasing years hovers over us from the time we see the first silvery strands. Some women scamper off to have their hair dyed. Others, more philosophic, comfort themselves after the manner of Rabbi Ben Ezra. But, according to a new hair treatment concern, the wise woman will study the situation scientifically and banish from her mind the bogey that gray hair is part of nature's great scheme of things and therefore can not be remedied. She will learn that changes in the shade of her hair are due to functioning changes of the blood vessels in the scalp, and secondarily to the action of the sebaceous or sweat glands that are appendages of every hair follicle. When proper functioning of scalp processes is hindered by neglect or become atrophied by age, naturally the blood vessels are affected adversely. Hair follicles become clogged with unremoved debris from sweat glands, and the natural scalp processes become lethargic in their action or cease altogether. When this happens the hair loses its color and often begins to fall out.



When she has learned these facts she may well ask herself if with proper and scientific treatment the condition can not be remedied. For it can the company insists.

The firm announces the discovery of a remedial liquid guaranteed to restore gray hair to its original color and to transform faded hair back to its natural color. The company will accept no payment for treatments until the customer is satisfied. In most cases it takes from 10 to 14 treatments, each lasting only a few minutes. The beautician will either call at the customer's home, or the customer may arrange the place of meeting. In some cases when a person prefers buying the tonic and administering the treatments herself, the purchase is accompanied by a guarantee that if the results are not entirely satisfactory the money will be refunded.

One of Washington's most prominent analytical and consulting chemists says that in a recent survey of hair tonics and hair restorers found on the shelves of stores handling such commodities 22 were examined, all of which are sold nationally. Of these were found to be dyestuffs, five were dye products carrying a salt of silver, three were perfumed massage compounds, and the balance had none of the same ingredients which appear in the formula for this tonic.

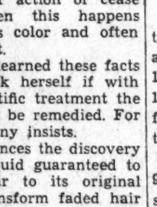
18-Carat Fingernails.

A nail polish that combines brilliant sunset colors with burnished gold and mother-of-pearl causes a sensation wherever it appears. For daytime wear it's really beyond the pale, but for evening, on the proper person, with the proper frock, it adds a delightfully colorful finish. In most cases, however, it should be worn by a person with beautiful, tapering nails. It should be worn in combination with a vivid contrasting dress. And, if possible, should be matched up by the slippers or bag. It's distinctly a polish for the woman who dares.



Master of Manicuring.

Just what shade of polish should be worn, when and where? What shaped nails are suited to the individual hand? Any facts regarding manicure will be put right at our fingertips if we consult a local expert. He realizes how essential trim hands are to the well-dressed woman, and for that reason has made a study on the whats and whys of hand culture.

From Below Rio Grande.

There's scarcely a shop in Washington that isn't showing the mid-season Mexican influence. In some instances it's blouses, in others jewelry, and in an F street shop it's bags. Strangely enough, although typically Mexican, they tend to the deep sunburn shades rather than the vivid reds, blues and greens.

They're made of a coarse fabric and covered with odd designs in maroon, dark blue and beige. Some are long and narrow, others pouch-shaped, and some the usual oblong style.

Carriage Lamps Glow Again.

Antique statuettes for the garden, artistic tiles for the hearth, wrought iron candelabra for the mantelpiece, and many other interesting novelties never fail to call forth the "oh's" and "ah's" of customers in an M street shop.

Some old English "carriage lamps" are among the most interesting items on display. These will give atmosphere wherever, they're used. Some people like them for porch lights, others find them most effective in the hall. Let's look around and see what bare nook we can change into an artistic corner if we turn our efforts toward it.

Dashing and Colorful Are New Spring Hats

Models by Nicole de Paris. Photos by Associated Press.

Brims turn up and brims turn down on the newest hats for spring. Crowns have received just as interesting treatment as brims in most instances. Some are creased, some are pulled tight over the head and some are softly rounded.

Upper left: Curled quills in brilliant green, flaming orange and black swoop down one side of a chartreuse felt hat. The striking feathers are kept in their proper place by a black grosgrain ribbon and bow which also hold the sides of the sweeping brim to the crown.

Right: The newest variation of the omnipresent beret is a mere pancake perched jauntily on one side of the head, revealing a generous amount of hair on the other. The material is white alpaca straw and the satin ribbons are chartreuse and brown.

What Today Means

"Aquarius"

If February 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:20 to 8:20 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 9 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m. from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m.

If you were born on February 9, be careful you do not allow yourself to become an egotist. Your capability might be instrumental in your getting an exaggerated opinion of your importance to others. It is a mighty good idea to remember there are always people available to fill any position. It is also advisable to bear in mind that abruptness borders dangerously near being rudeness, which is at no time justifiable. Everybody appreciates courtesy and consideration. The more friends you can make, the easier your life will be.

The child born on February 9, when old enough to walk and talk, will prove very precocious. A wise parent will discourage anything in the way of conduct that approaches pertness. Too many fathers and mothers, on the plea that a child's personality suffers if the slightest restraint is imposed or, as they say, its natural impulses are repressed, allow it to grow up without the proper discipline. This is unfair to the child and people that have to suffer from its lack of correct training.

The woman born on February 9 is rather an athletic type. As a rule tennis, horseback riding, and water sports are her ruling passions. Possibly it would be well to remember a truly feminine type of woman appeals far more to men than one who affects masculine manners and dress. If this is your natal day, you are endowed with a personality that attracts men. Providing you do not allow anyone, or fashion, make you assume an affected manner, aping the supposedly ultra fashionables, as depicted in sensational news columns, your delightful naturalness will be your passport to popularity.

The man born on February 9 has the happy faculty of making friends. People instinctively trust him, and have confidence in his advice. The woman he marries will have in him a devoted champion and companion, and she in return will daily manifest her love and appreciation. If you were born on February 9 you keenly appreciate places and things that have an old-time or foreign atmosphere. It is the unusual that appeals to you.

People born on February 9 are very cosmopolitan. They can adjust themselves to any clime or country. Generous almost to a fault, they believe in the saying: "He gives twice who gives quickly," and they are considerate enough not to brag about their kind deeds. People whose natal day is this date are impulsive in their likes and dislikes, and it might be advisable to control this characteristic.

Successful People Born on February 9:

William Bartram, botanist.
William King, first governor of Maine.
William H. Harrison, ninth President of United States.
Samuel J. Tilden, former governor of New York.
James Parton, author.
Addison E. Verrill, zoologist.

College Paper Demands End Of Darkened Dance Necking

Kingston, Ontario, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Queen's University Journal shed a little light on the campus "necking" situation today and said even more illumination should be provided.

The publication took its stand in an editorial on "Formal Necking." (A formal is a college social function). It said:

"The science formal with its attendant celebrations looms in the immediate offing. For the past few years at all faculty formals, by the time the dances get well under way lights are doused, the room is in total darkness and smoking reigns supreme, punctuated by glowing cigarettes.

"We of Queen's pride ouselves on our ability to acquire knowledge—yet we indulge in childlike lovemaking which is not only promiscuous, but is distinctly poor taste at an important college function.

"It reflects unfavorably on ourselves and adds nothing to our reputation among outsiders. The science formal committee would do well to inaugurate a 'new deal' by seeing that the lights in the 'dark room' are kept burning."

Men's Spring Flannel Suits Will Be Striped and Checked

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Feb. 8.—Of the men who'll buy suits this month, many will buy one particular kind . . . warm enough to keep them comfortable on the chill early days of spring but with enough lightness and coolness to be thoroughly wearable later.

The flannel suit is one that says yes to this description. It can also say yes to many other demands. One of them is looks.

You'll have difficulty thinking of a suit fabric that looks better when worn than flannel. Because it drapes more easily over a man's curves and angles.

Another flannel suit point is fit. A flannel suit (that's been properly cut in the first place) not only fits the first day you wear it, but through long months of hard use. Being a soft-fabric suit, it gets more used to your body as time goes on.

They're picking this spring's flannel suits in three types of pattern. The first of these is the still-most-popular plain shade flannel. Especially in medium and light shades of gray. Though more men than used to are picking blue, blue-gray and brown flannels now.

The second of these is chalk-striped flannels. Stripes that are well-set-apart, with about a half-inch between them. And not only the popular white stripes on darker grounds. You'll see them often in richer two-color combinations. A deep rich blue stripe on a gray-blue ground is a good example. And a red stripe on a brown ground is another.

The third flannel group you'll see is checked flannels. Mostly of the neat-check kind. Ask for a hound's tooth check flannel suit, and almost any men's store or department will show you as gay and likable a pattern as you'll want.

There's more to a flannel than either its fit of its appearance. It's something you find out by owning and wearing one. And the feel of the firm-but-soft cloth has a lot to do with it.

If you're one of the thousands of American men still suffering from the I-can't-wear-a-double-breasted complex, a spring flannel suit will be your big chance to get over it. Because more men are wearing their flannels double-breasted than ever before. And they can't accuse you of vanity if you like yourself better when you see yourself in one.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Salt in the Diet.

Salt is in rather bad repute among physicians. The evidence is convincing that certain diseases are made worse by its overuse. In all conditions where fluid tends to accumulate in the tissues it is well to decrease the daily intake of salt. For instance, in ascites, or accumulation of fluid in the abdominal cavity; and in anasarca, or accumulation of fluid in the tissues, a condition commonly known as dropsy, the sick person will have less trouble if he uses very little salt. In heart disease and in those forms of Bright's in which there is a tendency to dropsy a low salt diet is advisable.

On the other hand there are disorders which are due to a deficiency of salt. The evidence indicates that the body does best when it is about "so salty." When on that level the cells pick up nourishment and water, do their work, and throw off wastes as well as they can. Either too little salt or too much interferes with these processes.

Among the disorders due to too little salt are heat cramps. This trouble is prevented by drinking a weak salt solution instead of plain water. As a result of excessive vomiting the body may suffer from salt deficiency. Four Baltimore physicians think salt deficiency is responsible for the shock stages of Addison's disease. To prevent a person with Addison's from getting into this shock stage they give him very considerable doses of salt—as much as 90 grains a day in some cases and 15 grains in the usual case. The amount of salt given as a medicine is kept below the level where diarrhea or nausea is caused and below the level where swelling of the ankles is induced. This means a daily average dose of about 20 grains.

In addition the diet should be rather rich in salt. Among the saltier foods are: Sauerkraut, mackerel and other salted fish, salt pork and other preserved meats, salted nuts, melons and celery (as we usually prepare them for eating).

These physicians use salt as the regular routine remedy for Addison's disease. Cortin, the new extract of the adrenal gland now coming into use in the treatment of this disease, they reserve for the treatment of the shock and collapse stage.

Lincoln's Birthday Orators Selected

Army and Navy Officers on Breakfast Program.

Brig. Gen. Perry L. Miles, U. S. A., and Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, U. S. N., will be guest speakers at the annual breakfast to be held by the District Society of the Dames of the Loyal Legion on Monday in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel in honor of the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. Mrs. Miles and Mrs. Woodward also will be guests.

Dr. and Mrs. George F. Dudley will be guests, Dr. Dudley representing the District Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which he is chaplain. The soloist will be Miss Ruth Kobbe, accompanied by Miss Helen Eddy. Mrs. Maud Stanton Western will have with her as guests Mrs. Rex Rhodes, Mrs. Ashton Embry, Mrs. E T. Andrus, Mrs. Carlton Andrus, Mrs. Roth Griswold, Mrs. Taylor and Miss Jane Elizabeth Goldman, and Mrs. T. V. Walker will have as guests Mrs. Mary T. Shannahan, department president of the American War Mothers, and Mrs. Edythe M. O'Connor, department president of the American Auxiliary.

The place cards for the breakfast are miniature photographs of Abraham Lincoln, said by the late Robert Todd Lincoln to be the most satisfactory picture of his father. The photograph was taken by Brady at Washington February 9, 1864, and copies have been presented for this occasion by Dr. Louis A. Warren, of Fort Wayne, Ind., lecturer and author of "Lincoln's Parentage and Childhood."

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Refusing all pleas to grant a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, condemned to die the next morning on the gallows for murdering Gervase Benham, friend of his actress wife, Sir Humphrey Rossiter, England's young Home Secretary, leaves the estate of Lord Edward Keynsham and drives toward London in a rented automobile. On the way he is seized by a masked gang, taken to a mysterious house and placed upon a gallows. He is told he will be hanged unless he grants Brandt a reprieve. He refuses. As the trap is about to be sprung a messenger arrives with word that Mrs. Brandt is at Rossiter's London home with new evidence.

He is released. Mrs. Brandt convinces him there were extenuating circumstances. He promises to grant a reprieve. She departs and Sir Humphrey collapses in a deep faint. When he revives he is told Brandt has been hanged. Subsequently Mrs. Brandt vanishes while on her way to have dinner with Sir Humphrey. He summons Scotland Yard detectives. When they arrive at his home they learn he has disappeared.

Young Detective Pank goes to Norwich in search of the mysterious house of the "hideous" hangman. Subsequently he learns that Humble, an ugly-looking man, painted a scenic set resembling a prison in a film studio. A man named Edwards owned the studio. Edwards admits to Pank that Humble acted as hangman and that Lord Edward Keynsham paid him 1,000 pounds for the use of the studio. Lord Edward is in France. Pank, promoted to inspector, learns at Wandsworth Prison that Lord Edward had sought in vain to visit Brandt shortly before the hanging.

"Just at that moment, sir," he confided, "I was wondering whether we had not better try to collect some further evidence as to the identity of the men who helped Lord Edward in that assault upon Sir Humphrey Rossiter."

Col. Matterson was unimpressed. "Seems to me a little off the line," he declared.

"I'm not so sure," was the apologetic reply. "The identity of any one of them might bridge over that gulf which existed at the moment between Keynsham and Brandt. If you can't see clues sometimes you have to stumble for them. It seems to me to be like that in this case. I have their three names here," he went on, drawing a piece of paper from his pocket, "all obviously assumed, and they all gave their address as the Savoy Hotel. This is the sheet cut out of the Royal Hotel visitors' book at Norwich."

"I wonder whether anything occurs to you with regard to those names, sir," Pank ventured.

Signed for Three.

"One of them," the subcommissioner observed, "evidently signed for the three. They are all in the same handwriting. There's another thing—they all sign in the American fashion, with a Christian name first, then an initial and then the surname."

Pank smiled.

"That was what I meant, sir," he confided. "They also gave their address as the Savoy Hotel, where a good many Americans are supposed to stay."

You've made inquiries, I conclude?" Matterson asked.

Pank assented.

"I took the sheet to a friend of mine in the reception bureau of the Savoy the moment I returned from Norwich. He knew nothing about any one of them."

Col. Matterson frowned.

"It seems to me," he said, "that we shall have to put Lord Edward through a pretty severe cross-examination."

"And that," Pank said dolefully, "may not be quite so soon as we think. I ought perhaps to have told you before. Lord Edward is not at Monte Carlo and hasn't been there. The invitations for the luncheon party were canceled at the last moment."

Chapter XVI.

The conference seemed doomed to an indefinite prolongation. Even as Pank was speaking there was a knock at the door and the orderly presented himself.

"Sir Henry Topps to see you, sir," he announced.

"Show him in," Matterson enjoined. "Now we shall see, Pank, whether there is any truth in that amazing statement of yours."

"Who is Sir Henry Topps?" Inspector Smithers asked.

"Senior partner in Lord Edward's firm," was the brief reply.

Sir Henry Topps was duly ushered in. He was a very personable, rather elderly gentleman of military appearance, wearing an eyeglass, a fob and a four-in-hand tie with the distinction of one to whom such things are part of their everyday life. He was warmly welcomed by Col. Matterson, with whom he had some slight acquaintance, introduced to Smithers and Pank, whose presence he seemed to realize with mild surprise, and invited to seat himself in the easy chair reserved for visitors of distinction.

"May I?" he inquired, drawing a thin platinum and gold cigarette case from his pocket. "I see that you gentlemen have been indulging."

"Certainly," Matterson acquiesced courteously. "I would offer you my box, but I am quite sure that yours are better."

Perfume of Tobacco.

Sir Henry waived the point, and presently the perfume of fine Turkish tobacco was mingled with the odor of very ordinary gaspers.

"Delighted to pay a visit to Scotland Yard," Sir Henry observed, looking around him with interest. "First time I've ever had the pleasure, although Gen. Moore has invited me more than once. What can I do for you, colonel? A summons to police headquarters is somewhat a shock in my quiet life. Is it a poison case? Not an arrest for selling bad stuff or anything of that sort?"

"No, nor ever likely to be, so far as my experience goes," was the smiling reply. "Such small things don't come under your notice, I suppose, but you stocked my poor cellar, such as it is, and I never want better stuff. * * * It isn't a serious matter at all, naturally, Sir Henry, but a slight complication has cropped up, and we would be awfully obliged if you would put us in touch with Lord Edward. We made inquiries, but we can't seem to learn anything definite about his whereabouts."

"Well, that's quaint," Sir Henry declared. "That's very quaint, indeed. I can tell you one thing right away," he went on, after a moment's pause; "he's not exactly where he's supposed to be."

There was a little murmur of interest. Sir Henry looked at his cigarette for a moment or two and appeared to develop a new surprise.

Hard to Explain.

"The queerest thing of all," he observed, "is why you should want to know. There are at least a hundred people in the City of London who, I am quite sure, would give a great deal for the information you are asking for, but where the mischief do the police come in? These two gentlemen, too," he added, indicating Smithers and Pank. "What have they got to do with it?"

"It isn't exactly easy to explain for the moment," Col. Matterson acknowledged. "If you can just let us know where to get hold of Lord Edward the whole thing will fall into shape at once."

Sir Henry nodded.

"Well," he said, "I don't think Scotland Yard is going into the wine trade just yet, and in any case we have always to make a clean sweep of it to the police. Lord Edward left with some friends in his yacht for Monaco, but we sent him a wireless which he probably got somewhere near Gibraltar, and he slipped off to Marseilles. The yacht went on to Monaco without him, and I am afraid he had to cancel that luncheon party you may have read about in the Times."

"At Marseilles," the subcommissioner repeated thoughtfully. "Would it be trespassing too much on your good nature, Sir Henry, if I asked you the reason for Lord Edward's change of plans?"

"Not a bit, my dear fellow," Sir Henry assured him. "We received a long dispatch from our agent in Bordeaux only a day or two after Keynsham had started off for his holiday. Here I can't mention any names, but it would not interest you anyhow. Seven of the biggest growers of wine in the Bordeaux district are badly in need of cash. They have enormous stocks owing to the wonderful vintages of the last few years, and naturally they don't want to throw them upon the market.

Richest Wine Merchants.

"We—I think I may say it without boasting—are probably the richest firm of wine merchants in the world. That sounds a little egotistical, but you have only to go to Stubbs and I think they will confirm what I tell you. To support the market, for our own sake as well as theirs, this syndicate wants us to do an enormous deal in clarets and brandies, and they begged for a member of the firm to see them at once. Well, there's the story. Keynsham left his yacht, like the good fellow he is, at Marseilles, and he has gone to Bordeaux to see them."

Col. Matterson leaned back in his chair.

"Sounds quite like a romance," he remarked pleasantly. "It means, I suppose, that we shall have some cheap wine soon."

"Not necessarily," Sir Henry assured him. "That's how we have made one money—having the capital to put down and hold on. We are going to keep that wine, if we buy it, just as long as we should if it were an ordinary purchase, and we are going to sell it at just the same price as we should if we had bought it in the ordinary way. * * * A case or two to a friend, perhaps, colonel," he added, with a smile, "but in return you must keep what I have told you secret. If the deal comes off we want to make our profit."

"Well, that's all very interesting," the subcommissioner acknowledged. "So Lord Edward is at Bordeaux at the present moment? Would you know where to communicate with him?"

"Certainly," Sir Henry replied. "Care of our agents there. He may not be actually in the town. He may be at the chateau of any one of the syndicate or they may have moved up to Paris to complete the deal after the wines have been tasted. Any letters would be forwarded, of course, but the point is this: We want it thought that Keynsham is on the Riviera holiday-making, so, naturally, there is not much doing in the way of correspondence."

Sir Henry Surprised.

Rather to Sir Henry's surprise, the smaller and more insignificant-looking of the two men, whose presence in the room had been puzzling him all the time, rose respectfully in his place.

"Might I ask, Sir Henry," he inquired, "whether you have had any communication from Lord Edward Keynsham during the last few days?"

"Not a line," was the emphatic reply; "neither do we wish for it. His is a secret mission."

"You are sure that Lord Edward really undertook it?" the subcommissioner asked.

"As sure as any one can be humanly sure of anything," was the somewhat surprised answer.

But you have heard nothing whatever from him?" Pank repeated.

Wednesday, February 28—7:15 p. m., "Principles of Scoutmastership," 1018 Vermont avenue (basement).

Everything is in readiness for the gathering of 4,000 Scouts tomorrow at the Washington Auditorium. From 10 o'clock on the streets in the neighborhood of the Auditorium will be crowded with Scouts prepared to take part in the history-making mobilization. The lines will start moving at 11 o'clock and shortly thereafter the Auditorium will be filled with Scouts, Scout parents and friends participating in one of more than a thousand mobilizations being held simultaneously in all parts of the country.

Where Scouts Report.

All Scouts from the fourth, tenth, thirteenth and Maryland divisions are to report on H street at Nineteenth street northwest. Troops from divisions 1, 5, 14 and 15, as well as all cub groups, will assemble on E street, just south of the State, War and Navy Building. Troops from the seventh, eleventh and twelfth and Virginia divisions will assemble on Constitution avenue just south of Nineteenth street. Troops from the second, third, eighth and ninth divisions will assemble on Twenty-fourth street, just north of E street.

Full Program Scheduled.

Following the arrival of the Scouts at the Auditorium the program will begin at 11:30 with band music and singing led by William R. Schmucker, accompanied on the Auditorium organ by Paul Gable. President Roosevelt's message will come direct from the White House and President Walter Head and Chief Scout Executive James E. West will be present in person and will speak. The Scouts also will be greeted by George E. Allen, Commissioner of the District of Columbia. Band music will be furnished by the McKinley High School Cadet Band, the Central High School Cadet Band, the Elks' Boys' Band and Troop 49 Drum and Bugle Corps. Every Scout in Washington is expected to be present.

This mobilization is a history-making event which will loom large in the memory of the high spots of scouting. Never before has there been a mobilization of this kind and there probably will be no such gathering again during the Scout life of most boys now in the movement.

All active Eagle Scouts in the District of Columbia are invited to report to Scout headquarters this afternoon for competitive inspection. From this group a small delegation will be selected to go to the White House to be present with President Roosevelt during the broadcast.

Public Invited to Attend.

"Several hundred balcony seats are available for parents for the Scout mobilization at the Auditorium tomorrow," Commodore W. E. Longfellow, chairman of the mobilization committee, said all spectators, however, should arrive not later than 11:30, as the doors will close soon after.

From 9 to 10:30 Scouts will be moving to assembly points a few blocks from the Auditorium, and at 10:30 the roll call will begin. By 11 a. m. Scouts will be on their way to the Auditorium led by bands and followed by trucks piled high with clothing for the needy brought in by the Scouts.

At the Auditorium the Scouts will be greeted by District Commissioner George E. Allen, and the clothing gathered will be presented to the relief agencies of the Community Chest.

At 11:45 the doors will close and at 12 o'clock a special Scout radio program will come from the White House, at which time President Roosevelt will speak to all the Scouts of America. Greetings also will be extended by Walter W. Head, president of Boy Scouts of America, and by Chief Scout Executive James E. West.

Roosevelt Awards for 24.

The President Roosevelt Award, honor ribbon to be awarded to troops with small turnovers in membership, will be presented to a score of troops at the court of awards February 17.

Church Service Planned.

The Holy Comforter Episcopal Chapel, 5714 Georgia avenue, will hold a Boy Scout service for their recently organized troop, No. 636, at 11 a. m. Sunday.

Eagle Awards to Be Given.

Several hundred parents and friends of Scouts will gather at the Powell Junior High School February 17, at 7:30 p. m., to witness the award of life, star and eagle badges to Scouts.

The eagle award, symbol of scouting's highest rank, will be awarded to Robert Gottlieb, of Troop 73; George O. Kephart, R. W. Pailthorp, John McNary, William Steiner and Warren Steiner, of Troop 33; Stanley Whalen, of Troop 51; Richard Logan, of Troop 56; John Kimball, of Troop 21; John J. Amante and Billy Crockett, of Troop 100; Jo V. Morgan, jr., of Troop 211; William Jefferies, of Troop 126, Alexandria, Va., and W. Bruce Davis, Troop 209, of Silver Spring, Md.

Troop 33 Holds Inspection.

The meeting of Troop 33 was participated in by Warren Steiner and Bond Smith. Merit badges were awarded to Bob Pailthorpe, Edson Gardner, Bill Thompson and Bond Smith. Walter MacPeek spoke. The semiannual inspection was made by L. W. Kephart and Walter MacPeek.

Boy Scout Press Club.

The Boy Scout Press Club of the District of Columbia Boy Scout Council, which has been inactive for the past several months, is to be reorganized at headquarters tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Keystone Troop.

Additional entertainment on the ninth anniversary meeting, Parents' Night, February 23, will be a Baron Munchaussen contest, a musical comedy by Scout Davis and Bob Robert's radio program.

Training Course Under Way.

A total of 31 men attended the opening session of the "Principles of Scoutmastership" held at 1018 Vermont avenue and greatly enjoyed the presentation on the topic "The Nature of the Boy." There is still room in the course for the enrollment of three more men.

Those already enrolled are L. F. Nickel, A. C. Johnson, John H. Pryor, John E. Lecraw, Joseph N. Glover, George W. Toberman, L. W. Kephart, L. A. Barr, R. S. Albee, T. L. Grear, S. J. Melick, Armistead Coleman, James Gates, H. C. Phillips, George Palmer, H. E. Allanson, Raymond Powers, Emory Firman, H. T. Converse, Elbert Miller, Edmund Fraser, John Bayless, R. H. Lecraw, R. A. Saunders, Frederick Tilp, H. T. Converse, jr., H. F. Parr, J. E. Reitch and Alden Whitney.

Troop 27 Wins Contest.

Troop 27 was the victor in the Twelfth Division at the first aid contest. This makes Troop 27 eligible to participate in the Council-wide First Aid Rally to be held early in March. James C. Duffy is scoutmaster.

Scouts Address Clubs.

Among the representatives of the Boy Scouts of America who addressed Service Clubs this week were Richard Miller, Eagle Scout of Troop 54, speaking to the Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower Hotel; Eagle Scout Houston Buchanan, speaking to the Monarch Club at the Ambassador; Eagle Scout Harry Barnett speaking to the American Business Club at the Hay-Adams House, and Eagle Scout Marvin Towne, speaking to the Y Men's Club at the Y. M. C. A. Eagle Scout Frederick Waite will speak to the Lions Club, at the Mayflower Hotel February 21.

Troop 56 Publishes Paper.

Drake to Speak.

Scout Executive Linn C. Drake will speak at the Scout Service at the National Baptist Memorial Church Sunday, at 7:30 p. m. The service is in charge of Troop 43, L. B. Grening scoutmaster.

Troop 28 Boys Pass Test.

Persian Scout on Visit.

Yadullah Mobasser, Persian Scout, was taken sightseeing Sunday by Daniel J. Tyrrell and Scout John J. Amante, of Troop 100. Mobasser left Persia two years ago, financed by his government, to travel and to attend an agricultural college in New York State. He has a prized collection of autographs, which include President Roosevelt, Al Smith, King of Irak and Rabindranath of Tagore. He is writing a book.

A Silly Psychic.

Contract Bridge bidding has its fads and fashions. A few years ago psychic bids, so called, were extremely popular. Recently they have fallen into comparative disuse, although some very fine players still find the right type of psychic bid effective. A psychic or bluff bid has, of course, as its purpose preventing opponents from reaching a game or Slam contract, or, failing that, making it difficult for them to select the right suit in which to play the hand. Generally speaking, a psychic, to be effective, must have as a basis an escape suit which, though it may be deficient in honors, is sufficiently long to guarantee the making of enough tricks so that the penalty which may follow if the bid is doubled will not exceed the value of the score that the opponents may make.

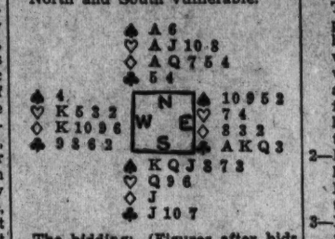
East, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1♠(1)	Dbl.(2)
3♠(3)	Dbl.(4)	3NT(5)	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A very bad psychic. While West is right in fearing that the opponents may bid and make a game in spades, he should consider what he will do if doubled. The objection to this type of psychic is that inasmuch as the bidder has a singleton, he may well expec. to find his partner with adequate trump support, and if, in addition, there are a few high cards in the partner's hand, then trouble is almost certain to follow.

2—North is well prepared for a heart or diamond response. Hence the Takeout Double is entirely sound.

3—East, of course, is unaware of the nature of his partner's bid. He decides to make it difficult for the vulnerable opponents to get together.

4—The psychic nature of West's Opening bid is, of course, apparent to South. He therefore joyfully doubles, as he feels quite sure that West can not find a safe out.

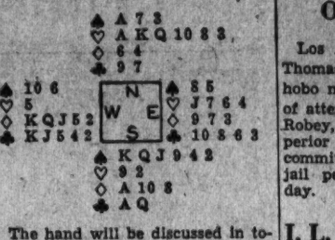
5—West vainly seeks a safer place to play the contract.

In the play North, who now realized that West's hand must be well nigh trickless, laid down the Ace of spades in view of the fact that his partner has doubled East's spade bid at the range of three. A small spade was continued and West was in great trouble with his discards. The result was that North and South succeeded in taking 12 tricks, netting West 4,500 points.

Tomorrow's Hand.

What should be the final contract reached by North and South on the hand below?

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

The Advance Printing of

"The NEW DEALERS"

. . beginning in The Washington Post next Sunday . . marks the first occasion Simon and Schuster, publishers of fine books, have ever given permission to a newspaper to print the text of a "best seller" before the book itself has been made available to the public through book stores.

Simon and Schuster have published such outstanding successes as "Trader Horn," "Story of Philosophy," by Will Durant; "Art of Thinking," by Abbe Dimnet; Van Loon's Geography and the famous Cross Word Puzzle Books.

Readers of The Post will be reading, discussing and thoroughly enjoying this delightfully styled "low-down on the up-and-ups in this wild political free-for-all at Washington" (as the author describes "The New Dealers") weeks in advance of book publication.

It is particularly fitting and proper that in Washington The Washington Post . . Washington's fastest-growing newspaper . . should bring to residents of the Nation's Capital the newest, smartest, most vividly interesting material yet to be published on fifty-odd New Deal personalities.*

Indian Is Hero Of Melodrama On Met Screen

'Moulin Rouge' Held Over; Other Programs Opening Today and Friday.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

"MASSACRE." First National picturization of a story by Robert Gessner, adapted to the screen by Ralph Block and Sheridan Gibney, starring Richard Barthelmess, with Ann Dvorak, Claire Dodd, Dudley Digges, Sidney Toler, Arthur Hohl, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barratt, Clarence Muse and William V. Mong. Directed by Alan Crosland. Reviewed Wednesday morning.

By Nelson B. Bell.

If "Massacre" could be viewed dispassionately as an adventurous bit of melodramatic romance, completely divorced from the crusading spirit that evidently prompted its writing, it would take rank as an action-drama of the first water, safely above the average even of the perfected present-day "Western" screen subject. But "Massacre" is so direct in its charges, so bitter in its partisanship and so drastic in its method that its dramatic and dramaturgic merits are largely lost in an inevitable consciousness that it is primarily propaganda on behalf of the remnants of a once noble race of red men whose present predicament may or may not be as desperate as the picture would have us believe.

The play's revelations of the evil practices to which the Indian has been subjected under the ostensible protectorate of the Great White Father are not softened by the nebulous imputations of a remote antiquity, but are definitely dated as of today by the time and locale of the drama's introductory sequences.

Begins at Chicago Fair.

"Massacre" opens at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, where Chief Joe Thunder Horse, of the Sioux Tribe, is the star performer in a Wild West show. Evading the ominous advances of a flippant and blase young society girl, Joe leaves for a two weeks' vacation on his tribe's reservation, where he has been informed his father is dying. Arrived at the boyhood home he has not visited for many years, he finds his people the helpless victims of a group of corrupt Federal agents, who prey upon their charges at every opportunity — stealing their inheritances by a seeming application of the "law;" refusing them adequate medical attendance, grafting on funeral costs, ravaging the young girls of the tribe; cheating, lying, falsifying, browbeating and inflicting physical cruelty upon a cowed and helpless people.

As a result of his self-appointed administration of a little frontier justice, Joe is arrested, given a dummy trial, at which his prosecutors are virtually judge and jury as well, and thrown into prison. Lydia, a Haskell graduate-clerk in the office of Indian Agent Quissenberry, helps him to escape and bring his case before the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in Washington, an old friend.

Through his disclosures before a Senate investigating committee and the testimony of his outraged little sister, who has been kidnaped in the meantime to suppress her evidence, the whole sinister mess is cleaned up, Joe is made an assistant to the Commissioner in Washington and Lydia decides to share his future responsibilities with him.

Rich in Dramatic Material.

Such is the major movement of a story that is not without its moments of excitement and thrills, occasional touches of comedy, a reasonable leavening of romance and a picturesqueness of personnel and treatment that stamp it as well apart from the conventional run of screen entertainment.

Richard Barthelmess, in the role of young Thunder Horse, manages to convert his brunette coloring into a convincing semblance of a handsome young Sioux chieftain, but meets with less success in creating the impression of a crusader actuated by the promptings of a great heart rather than a vindictive resentment. Instead, he seems merely a tough young buck, endowed with the stoical bravery of his race and willing to apply remedies for the evils he encounters that are frequently as bad as, if not worse than, the abuses he seeks to correct. There can be no question, however, of the vigor, directness and dynamic zest of his performance.

Stellar Support.

The star is surrounded by a stellar group of players, led by Ann Dvorak, as Lydia, whose accents belie any Indian origin; Dudley Digges, dangerously near perfect as the corrupt U. S. agent in charge of the reservation; Clarence Muse, as Joe's colored "valet" from the show lot; Arthur Hohl, as a renegade doctor; Sidney Toler, the grafting undertaker; William V. Mong, a shyster lawyer; Robert Barratt, Charles Middleton, DeWitt Jennings, Agnes Narcha, Henry O'Neill, as the Washington Indian Commissioner, and many others of lesser consequence.

In the matter of authentic backgrounds, atmospheric accuracy, photography and direction, "Massacre"—and the title refers entirely to what is allegedly and figuratively being done to the Red Man—seems to be beyond serious criticism.

A new issue of the Paramount Sound News, in which the temporarily repatriated Emma Goldman reaffirms some of her convictions; a "Merrie Melody" cartoon comedy, "Pettin' in the Park," and a Ben Blue comedy, "Nervous Hands," are the auxiliaries of a feature that gains in entertainment value in direct proportion to the degree one doubts the more serious of its implications against the current administration of Indian affairs by our Government.

The considerable invited audience that attended the midnight trade showing of "Pabooka," at RKO-Keith's Tuesday night, were unanimous in their opinion that this Reliance production, released through United Artists, will prove one of the comedy hits of the year. Based on the comic strip appearing daily in this admirable family journal, this exciting, personal history of Joe Palooka and his adventures in the prize ring affords splendid roles for Jimmie Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin, Robert Armstrong, Marjorie Rambeau, "Bill" Cagney, brother of the more famous Jimmie; Mary Carlisle and numerous others. This is one you will want to see, as will be argued at greater length later.

Hit Is Held Over.

"Moulin Rouge," which this column deemed one of the season's more engaging entertainments, as will be observed elsewhere on this page, is being held over for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater. Constance Bennett appears in a dual role for the first time in her career, if memory serves, and in so doing registers her most interesting performance in this subject, in which, by the way, she sings three catchy and deservedly popular songs.

The continuance of "Moulin Rouge" at the Palace automatically defers the engagement of Greta Garbo and her distinguished supporting cast in "Queen Christina" until one week from tomorrow, thus doubling the pleasures of anticipation.

Novis Also Held.

So great has been his success as co-headliner of the vaudeville bill at the Earle Theater this week that Donald Novis, radio tenor, making his first appearance on a Washington stage, also will be held for a second week.

This extended booking was arranged with some difficulty by cooperative action on the part of Mr. Novis' agent, the Warner Booking Office and the Philadelphia theater, where he was to have appeared next week.

He will offer an entirely new program of songs, including many requests it has not been possible to comply with during his first week at the Earle.

More immediately to hand are the following:

Rogers Comedy Continues Run On New Screen

The hilarious "Mr. Skitch," which unites Will Rogers and ZaSu Pitts as cinema man and wife, and blends the comedy talents of a strong supporting cast, is being brought back to downtown Washington, opening tomorrow at Loew's Columbia Theater.

Harry Green, comic dialectician; Florence Desmond, clever mimic; Eugene Pallette, comedian, and Rochelle Hudson and Charles Starrett who provide the romance, comprise the versatile supporting cast.

Will Rogers is pictured as the head of a family of six, thrown out of their home penniless through a bank failure. Bundling his brood into a dilapadated car, he starts across the continent in search of work. The experiences and adventures of the Skitches en route provide patrons with a succession of laugh-provoking episodes.

Karloff in an Eerie Picture At the Rialto

Accepted as the greatest exponent of thrills and horror and things macabre, Boris Karloff, whose popularity has permitted him to become known simply as Karloff, returns to the Rialto Theater today in what is perhaps his greatest achievement in the field of the weird, "The Ghoul," written especially for him by Dr. Frank King and Leonard Hines.

The screen version was prepared by that well-known novelist, Roland Pertwee and John Hastings Turner, with T. Hayes Hunter as director.

Supporting Karloff in this new spine-tingler are Cedric Hardwicke, Ernest Thesiger, Dorothy Hyson, Anthony Bushall, Kathleen Harrison, Harold Huth, D. A. Clarke-Smith and Ralph Richardson. Excellent photography and superb lighting effects combine to make "The Ghoul" an excellent study in the bizarre.

Completing the program, the Rialto offers Graham McNamee as the Talking Reporter with the latest Universal News and a carefully selected list of shorter screen subjects.

A Tense Drama Of the Desert At RKO-Keith's

Last Man of twelve, he stood defiant, unconquered, daring his enemies to come and get him!

Beside him were the saber marked graves of some of his comrades. The implacable desert hid the fate of others. Around him was a ring of death.

It is in this drama-charged situation that Victor McLaglen is said to rise to the greatest heights of his acting career, as the iron-nerved, indomitable sergeant of the Radio picture, "The Lost Patrol," which is to be given a special world premiere today at RKO-Keith's.

Featured in this drama of heroism on the Mesopotamian desert are Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford, Reginald Denny, Alan Hale, Billy Bevan, Sammy Stein, Paul Hanson and Douglas Walton. The story centers in the plight of a detachment of British cavalrymen, lost on the desert without orders when their officer is slain by Arabs.

As an added feature Keith's will include in the coming program the second Meyer Davis production, "Bubbling Over," which stars Ethel Waters.

'Moulin Rouge' A Second Week At the Palace

Due to the popularity of Constance Bennett and Franchot Tone in "Moulin Rouge," the management of Loew's Palace Theater announces that this, claimed to be Miss Bennett's greatest vehicle, will be held over for a second week.

"Moulin Rouge" is a glamorous story of a vaudeville sister team, one of whom marries a song writer, while the other takes unto herself a French cabinet member and scores a success on the stage. Miss Bennett plays both roles.

The one who settles down, endeavors to convince her husband that she is an actress. Instead the producer signs the famous foreign star, who is the vaudeville sister. They exchange places, the foreign star taking a vacation with her lover, while the wife tries to find whether her husband really loves his real wife or the French star whom everyone thinks she is.

The cast of "Moulin Rouge" besides Miss Bennett and Mr. Tone, includes Tullio Carminati, Russ Columbo, the Boswell Sisters and the famous Moulin Rouge girls.

Short subjects added to the feature are a Betty Boop cartoon, a Thelma Tood-Patsy Kelly comedy and the Metrotone News.

Carroll Revue Major Feature At Loew's Fox

Embellished by new production scenes, new stars and comedy skits, the tenth edition of the "Vanities" retains all of the splendor, spectacle and chorus beauty of the revue that delighted Broadway.

In addition to Ray Bolger, the principals include the Collette Sisters, the Three Dancing Samuel Brothers and comic Jack Squires aand Jean Travers. Ted Kochler and Harold Arlen, author of "Stormy Weather," wrote the lyrics and music for the "Vanities." Staged in 20 scenes, this edition of the "Vanities" is a large and decorative show that embraces virtually every form of enjoyable entertainment.

"Six of a Kind," with a cast of the screen's foremost comedy exponents, is the screen feature that shares honors with the "Vanities."

Oriental Play And Four Acts Come to Earle

"Mandalay," latest vehicle of Warner Brothers for Kay Francis, is the screen feature at Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week starting tomorrow. The stage portion of the bill will be headed by Lulu McConnell, a veteran of the stage and a favorite of radio fans.

A tale of thrilling romance and colorful adventure is the Frist National picture, "Mandalay." It is set against the picturesque background of the Orient, in that section of Burma where the whites come in contact with the natives. The romance does not concern Orientals, however, though there are many of them appearing in the production.

The theme concerns a beautiful Russian girl, an exile from her own country, who is sold into virtual slavery to a resort keeper by her own lover. Her escape on a boat to Mandalay and her pursuit entails some of the most thrilling action in the picture. Colorful scenes take place in the night club resort, which is patronized by civil and army officers, travelers, or any of the whites who have the necessary money to spend, and aboard a boat on the Irawadi River, where the principal characters meet again in conflict and romance.

There is an unusually strong cast, which includes such supporting players as Ricardo Cortez, Warner Oland and Lyle Talbot in the featured roles; Ruth Donnelly, Reginald Owen, Hobart Cavanaugh, David Torrence, Rafaela Ottiano, Etienne Girardot, Lucien Littlefield, Bodil Rosing and Herman Bing.

Lulu McConnell, who has starred on the radio networks for the past few months, will headline the stage portion of the bill in "A Quiet Game," in which she is supported by Robert Hyman, Virginia Mann and Lawrence Simpson. Other acts will be a welcome return engagement of the Radio Rubes from Station "Rube;" King, King and King, world famous tap dancers, and Ching Ling Foo, jr., and her Chinese wonder workers.

Completing the program will be a Paramount song cartoon, "Let's All Sing Like the Birdies Sing," the Graham McNamee newsreel and the Earle Orchestral Prelude.

Corporation Counsel to Prosecute All Rum Trials.

Woman and Two Men Named; Additional Permits Listed.

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed the three assistant corporation counsel necessitated by the delegation of liquor prosecutions to that office. In naming the appointees, Commissioners again ignored the local Democratic organization.

The new assistants are Miss Mae Helm and Edward Curran, members of the District bar, and Andrew M. Howsley, of Texas. As now planned, Howsley will act as special counsel to the liquor board, Curran will be assigned to Police Court, and Miss Helm will be designated to handle juvenile cases.

Either Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward M. Welliver or Raymond Sparks will be brought from Police Court to assist the liquor board.

Bolling May Be Secretary.

The Commissioners are expected to announce today the appointment of a secretary to the board, and at least a portion of eight inspectors. There have been more than 1,000 applicants for these positions. R. W. Bolling, a brother of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, is being mentioned for the post of board secretary.

It is understood appointment of inspectors and clerical assistants to the Alcohol Beverage Control Board is delayed because of possible Civil Service requirements. In 1930, the Commissioners agreed with the Civil Service Commission that new District employes should be taken from Civil Service lists. It is understood the Commissioners will seek to have these appointments made exceptions to the agreement.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Curran is a native of Maine, and has practiced law in the District for eight years, while Miss Helm has been engaged in the law practice here for the past nine years. Both took oaths of office yesterday.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Howsley is reported to have had the backing of Representative Thomas Blanton. He is a former member of the Texas State Legislature, and was active in Texas politics. He is expected to arrive here Monday.

The liquor board yesterday gave preliminary approval to the following applications, which will be advertised today:

New Liquor Board Assistants Are Sworn In

Court Rejects Cases Under Old Dry Law

"Saving" Clause in Control Act Is Declared Inoperative.

An end to prosecution of liquor cases here arising under the old prohibition law was made in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue held that a "saving" clause in the District liquor control act was inoperative.

The clause was inserted so that any liquor offense committed prior to January 24 could be prosecuted just as though the repeal law had never been passed.

Under this clause, Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson yesterday sought to have padlocks placed on the premises at 222 Seventh street southeast and 433 Eleventh street northwest.

Justice O'Donoghue dismissed the Government's case with the observation that repeal here must be given the same effect that went to the States. He pointed out that "the mandate of the people on December 5 was so overwhelming that it should be made operative here in the same manner as in the States."

Defense attorneys stressed the recent Supreme Court decision outlawing liquor prosecutions which arose before repeal. They contended the same ruling applied to the District, despite the "saving" clause in the local measure.

18 Auto Accidents On Memorial Road

Park Police Compiling Crash Data.

Eighteen automobile accidents, several of them involving Memorial Circle and the numerous center parkings, occurred on Mount Vernon Memorial Highway in January, according to the monthly park police report. The office of National Capital Parks is now compiling data on driving conditions on the boulevard for consideration by the Bureau of Public Roads.

Eight persons were arrested for speeding, two for reckless driving and six for violation of traffic regulations. Fines and forfeitures totaled $148.

In the District proper, violation of traffic regulations led the arrest list with 161. There were 22 speeding cases, 26 drunkenness and five reckless driving cases. Thirty-one accidents were reported. A total of $900 was collected in fines and forfeitures.

Divorced Couple Will Remarry

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Thomas Grady Harrison, 23, and Mrs. Thelma Barracott Harrison, 21, were divorced a few months ago.

They just couldn't do without each other and yesterday they applied for a marriage license to wed the second time.

They said they intended to be married last night but so far as could be learned no minister in Norfolk performed the ceremony.

Cruelty Charge Made as Man Gets Life Term

Maryland Jury Convicts Collins, Virginian, of Manslaughter.

Charles Town, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Brutality by State police was charged in Circuit Court today by Dayton Sorrell, colored, just prior to pronouncement of a life sentence by Judge D. P. Rogers for highway robbery.

Sorrell was convicted two weeks ago of robbing Dorothy Hill, local theater cashier. The conviction marked his third offense and automatically carried life imprisonment. Asked if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, Sorrell claimed that a confession had been forced from him and that he had been beaten by State troopers.

Three troopers were cited earlier in the season to a grand jury for alleged third-degree methods against Sorrell, but true bill were not returned.

Hubert Hale, 22, also convicted of highway robbery, received the fixed penalty of five years' imprisonment. Hale was found guilty of assaulting Peter Painter and robbing him of $7.

An attempted robbery last night of the A. V. Garney grocery failed when police frightened the burglar. An unidentified man escaped just before officers surrounded the store. A sack of merchandise was abandoned.

Four colored men have been fined $25 apiece and sentenced to 30 days in the Jefferson County jail for starting fires in Baltimore & Ohio Railroad boxcars while stealing rides.

The men were arrested Monday night after warrants had been issued by Justice of the Peace L. D. Walker. They claimed residence in Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, W. Va.

Collins Guilty of Manslaughter.

Princess Anne, Md., Feb. 8 (AP).—Convicted of a crime of manslaughter, Earl Collins, 22-year-old Groton, Va., oyster shucker, today awaited sentence, probably tomorrow, for the slaying of Mrs. Norris Taylor at Crisfield early in December.

Collins was found guilty of the manslaughter charge by a Circuit Court jury last night.

Collins was alleged to have walked into the store of Mrs. Taylor's father and fired a revolver at her. She was instantly killed. Collins was captured the next day in Virginia.

Man Held for 1916 Murder.

Beckley, W. Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). A fugitive for almost a score of years, John H. Hite, 36, is a prisoner in the Raleigh County Jail here, having been returned from Logan to answer an indictment charging him with the murder of Thomas Wray September 1, 1916, at Raleigh.

Hite was serving a sentence of 20 days in the Logan jail when State police were informed that he was wanted in Raleigh.

The prisoner is accused of stabbing Wray with a knife in a fight near Hite's home. He denies the charge, saying he knew nothing of Wray's death until several months after he left Raleigh.

C. of C. Elects State Officers At Richmond

L. U. Noland, of Newport News, Succeeds Col. Hill as President.

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—L. U. Noland, of Newport News, today was elected president of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce at its tenth annual meeting here.

He succeeds Col. Julien H. Hill, of Richmond, who was chosen treasurer.

Directors Chosen.

Earlier the membership had elected the entire slate of candidates recommended by the nominating committee for directors of the State chamber. These directors are:

First Congressional District—L. U. Noland, of Newport News, to succeed himself for a term of three years. Third Congressional District—J. Scott Parrish, of Richmond, to succeed himself for a term of three years. Fifth Congressional District—A. B. Carrington, of Danville, to succeed himself for a term of three years. Seventh Congressional District—S. C. Gardner Waller, of Front Royal, to succeed himself for a term of three years. Ninth Congressional District—W. N. McAnge, of Bristol, to succeed Les Long, of Dante, for a term of three years.

State at large (all for terms of one year)—Richard Crane, of Westover, to succeed himself; Joseph E. Garland, of Farmville, to succeed himself; Ben T. Gunter, of Accomac, to succeed himself; W. D. Haden, of Charlottesville, to succeed A. Willis Robertson, of Staunton; Norman R. Hamilton, of Portsmouth, to succeed himself; R. C. Hopkins, of Fredericksburg, to succeed C. O'Conor Goolrick, of Fredericksburg; E. A. Hults, of Saltville, to succeed himself; John M. Miller, Jr., of Richmond, to succeed Julien H. Hill; John W. Mims, of Luray, to succeed W. N. McAnge, Jr., of Bristol; John B. Pinner, of Suffolk, to succeed the late John C. Eberwine, of Suffolk; Leon T. Seawell, of Norfolk, to succeed himself; E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, to succeed himself.

Resolutions adopted by the chamber favored the proposed establishment of a National park at Appomattox, for which Congress already has been asked to make an appropriation.

Tonight the membership gathered for its annual banquet at which Gov. Peery and members of the General Assembly were invited.

At the opening business session, President Hill, in giving an account of his stewardship for the year, said the State chamber holds a unique place among chambers of the various States in the Nation. "It combines in its program and set-up," he said, "those essentials required for the sound building of our State."

Greater Budget Urged.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—A new era in American prosperity, in which Virginia must have a place in the front rank of the States, was forecast here today by President Julien H. Hill, in presenting the annual report of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce to its membership.

Summarizing its work for the last decade, the retiring president pointed out for the organization even greater fields of usefulness in the future.

"I am convinced that Virginia business can just as easily maintain the activities of the State chamber on a $100,000 annual budget as under the $50,000 budget, as was the case in 1932. A lesser budget requires a neglect of the State's tourist opportunities which, Mr. Hill stated, "through an inadequately maintained State publicity and advertising program, is a loss through false economy and becomes a greater burden on the business interests of Virginia than the support of the State chamber's activities on a normal operating basis."

Unfavorable Report on 4c Gas Tax Due

Additional Revenue Not Needed, Carruthers Declares.

An unfavorable report on the Smith bill to raise the District gasoline tax from 2 to 4 cents is expected within the next few days from the fiscal relations sub-committee of the House District Committee, as the result of a hearing yesterday.

The proposal, sponsored by Representative Smith (Democrat), Virginia, was roundly denounced by delegations from several civic and trade associations. Only two witnesses spoke in its defense, Representative Smith and C. F. Joiner, jr., assistant motor vehicle commissioner for Virginia.

Chairman Clark (Democrat), North Carolina, indicated he is in sympathy with the District opponents to the bill when he questioned Smith regarding the anticipated surplus in the 1935 District budget.

Favors Larger Appropriation.

The Virginia Representative countered with the argument that he favored a low rate of taxation for the District and an increase in the lump sum contribution made by the Federal Government. He pointed out that he helped pave the way for the tax rate reduction last year from $1.70 to $1.50, and that his bill provided for elimination of the special property assessments for street improvements.

L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, was the principal spokesman against the bill. He declared there is no need for the additional revenue that would accrue from doubling the gasoline tax.

Streets Here Good.

Washington has but 800 miles of streets as compared with 50,000 miles of roads in Virginia, he said, and the Capital's streets are for the most part in good repair.

Others who spoke in opposition were Thomas J. Keefe, general manager of the American Motorists Association; T. F. Beihler, of the American Automobile Association, and Charles Upham, engineer director of the American Road Builders Association.

Seth Parker Sailor's Leg Broken in Fall

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Robert Payes, 18, a member of the crew of the radio broadcasting schooner Seth Parker, received a broken leg today when he fell over a coil of rope on deck.

The schooner was off Cape Henry, but came into Lynnhaven Roads, where the injured man was taken off by Coast Guard patrol boat CG-145. He was taken to the Marine Hospital.

Two Hurt in Car Crash.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.). W. Blair Kiser and Stella Virts, Keyser, W. Va., were injured when their automobile struck the truck of J. A. Cohill, Hancock, west of here. Kiser was charged with reckless driving. H. S. Manning, Hancock, driver of the truck, was unhurt.

Temperance Unit Formed.

A unit of the Loyal Temperance Legion has been organized in Hyattsvile, Md., with Emily Ballard as temporary president. A meeting to effect permanent organization will be held Sunday at 3 p. m. at the Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church. Young people from 6 to 14 years are eligible for membership.

Danville Poll Board Filled.

Danville, Va., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Judge Henry C. Leigh has named Grasty Crews, S. A. Shadrick and Henry Wiseman to be members of the city electoral board for the ensuing term.

Fugitive Extradited.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.). Clay Brotemarkle, wanted in Pennsylvania for an alleged attack on a game warden, was returned to jail at Bedford, Pa., yesterday following extradition.

50 Per Cent Cut In Tobacco Tax Will Be Asked

Virginia Delegate Prepares Memorial to Congress Pleading Relief.

Richmond, Feb. 8 (AP).—A joint resolution memorializing the National Congress to reduce by at least 50 per cent the internal revenue tax on tobacco was prepared today by John Morrison, Republican, member of the house of delegates from Harrisonburg, for introduction in the assembly tomorow.

Asserting that the National Government during the last fiscal year collected from its internal revenue tax on tobacco and tobacco products in Virginia "a sum more than twice as great as the aggregate of all State taxes," Morrison asserted that the Old Dominion in effect was being denied the right to tax the wealth produced within her own borders.

He said that this revenue tax took $92,380,436.89 from Virginia during the year ended June 30, 1933, while the commonwealth collected for State purposes during the same period taxes aggregating $41,131,000.

State Is Handicapped.

Pointing out that the State is seeking to find sufficient money for necessary Government functions, Morrison said that the "heavy" Federal tax on tobacco and tobacco products amounts "practically to an inhibition" on the State against taxing this product.

"It is not fair," he asserted, "that one product, the product of the fields and factories of a few States only, should be singled out, to the exemption of all other products of other States, and taxed for the use of the Federal Government, and taxed so heavily by that Government as practically to exclude the levying of a substantial tax on that subject by the State whose product it is."

Virginia, Morrison continued, makes a tax contribution to the United States Treasury that is exceeded only by five other States, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Illinois and California.

He said that the Old Dominion, with a population of less than 2,500,000 inhabitants, is relatively poor as compared with many other States.

Sales Tax Instance.

Conceding that the tobacco tax "is a fair and convenient instance of a sales tax," Morrison asserted that "surely the States adapted to its production, and which foster its manufactures, should have the right to tax it, in part at least, for their own purposes.

"If the United States Government would release its tobacco tax, or a reasonable portion of it, it would be a measure of justice to the tobacco States now long overdue, and those States would be largely relieved of the pecuniary embarrassments that now beset them by the simple expedient of being allowed to tax the products and wealth of their own people within their own borders—a right which has not been heretofore denied or so abridged in other States."

The resolution requested Virginia representatives in the United States Senate and House "to do all in their power to obtain the relief desired to the extent of at least 50 per cent of the present Federal tobacco and tobacco products tax."

Woman's Editor Talks to Students

Feminine News Tastes Are Wide, She Says.

Women are interested in more things than boudoirs and kitchens, and for this reason the successful newspaper woman's page must broaden its scope, Miss Malvina Lindsay, head of the woman's department of The Post, told George Washington University women students yesterday.

Too often, she said, editors have assumed that the only things which would interest woman readers are food, fashions and beauty. Women will always be interested in these subjects, but their interests do not stop there, she said.

Miss Lindsay disagreed with the contention that there is no valid reason for a newspaper segregating news for its women readers. It must be recognized, she said, that women do have and will continue to have some special interests differing from those of men, just as men have their special interests segregated in the sports pages.

Alleged Thief Extradited.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Jedson Pryor, 26, charged with larceny of vending machines near Greencastle, Pa., has been extradited and turned over to Franklin County, Pa., police. William B. Conrad, jointly accused with Pryor, previously had returned to Franklin County.

One Held, One Freed in CWA Graft Charge

Workers Tell How They Paid for Protection of Jobs.

Marked Money Used in Trap to End Alleged Racket.

Conspiracy charges against a supervisor of the Civil Works Administration were dismissed in Police Court yesterday, while the same court held a co-worker for grand jury action under bond of $500.

At a preliminary hearing, charges against Joe George McAlwee, 37, were dismissed by Judge John P. McMahon on grounds the prosecution showed "no overt act of conspiracy." A few hours earlier Judge McMahon ordered Thomas Edgar Archer, 47, held for the grand jury after he waived preliminary hearing.

The conspiracy charges were filed against McAlwee and Archer following complaints by CWA workers against an alleged "protection racket."

Although the prosecution attempted to show that McAlwee was implicated with Archer in the reputed "racket," the court held that allegations against the former did not warrant his appearance before the grand jury.

CWA Men Testify.

Jack B. Countryman, of 2715 Wisconsin avenue northwest, an enumerator employed in a CWA rent survey, testified he had been approached by Archer and subsequently paid $5 in marked money, which resulted in the supervisor's arrest.

He declared, however, that he was at no time approached by McAlwee.

Tells of Plans.

Plans for the alleged "racket" were made in the Archer home, 1631 Euclid street northwest, according to testimony by Mrs. Archer, wife of the accused supervisor. She told of overhearing a conversation between her husband and McAlwee. She said she heard McAlwee say:

"Listen, Tom, some of these fellows are going to be laid off. Let's get together and make them come across to keep their jobs."

Mrs. Archer said she asked McAlwee if he would "really do that to those poor men." He answered, "Why not?" she said.

John J. Roach, William Manuel and Thomas A. Donnelly, all CWA workers, said they were approached by Archer and paid him money for alleged "protection."

Marked Money Used.

James Ring, special investigator for the Senate Rent Investigating Committee, under whose supervision the survey was being conducted, said that all work was checked by him and that at no time was there an efficiency expert in the office.

Detective Sergeant A. D. Mansfield told the court that McAlwee was arrested following his implication by Archer. McAlwee denied charges that the money collected was given to him, Mansfield said.

Virginia House Committee Votes 11-2 in Favor of Horse Racing Bill

Eastern Five Needs Win Today

Mt. Pleasant Quintet Is Out to Avenge Loss; Riders vs. Western.

Standing of the Teams.

	W.	L.	Pct.
Eastern	6	1	.857
Tech	6	2	.750
Central	5	2	.714
Roosevelt	1	6	.143
Western	0	7	.000

Games Today.

Central vs. Eastern.
Western vs. Roosevelt.

First Game Results.

Eastern, 40; Central, 15.
Roosevelt, 33; Western, 29.

EASTERN HIGH SCHOOL today is heading for what it fondly hopes will be that last toss-up in the interscholastic basket ball series. On the threshhold of the championship, Eastern encounters the lone remaining obstacle in its path—a Central team that will be battling for survival as a contender.

Victory today for Eastern, the people's choice, will scrawl a triumphant finis across the series campaign of the Lincoln Park School. Central will have as its objective today a three-way deadlock for the lead, necessitating a play-off. Thus Central also carries the hopes of a Tech team, which would figure in the tie should Eastern fall today.

Different Central Team.

Thwarted, as well as mildly humiliated in the first tiff betwen the two teams, the Central outfit is an entirely different one than that which met the Eastern five a month ago. Gone is the halo of overconfidence worn by several players of the team. Gone is the prepossessing atttitude that made big shots out of ordinary ball players. Tech, in its defeat of the Mount Pleasant quintet last week, knocked out all semblance of these maladies from the Central make-up

Ragged and misconstrued play has cropped up in the Lincoln Parkers' exhibition the last couple of ball games. The defense has sagged sadly, as shown by the fact that two weak sisters of the loop, Western and Roosevelt, have managed to score 45 and 38 points, respectively.

Consequently, the Eastern team must buckle down on basket-guarding and coordinate a trifle more on the passing attack. It is far better to win the ball game, than have the first, second and third high scorers in the league.

New Star May Shine.

Featuring for the Central crew should be Mario Gregorio, Buddy Nau and Bits Keyser, but you never can tell. One of the lads decorating the mahogany throughout the series may arise at such an occasion, and carry off the honors of the hour, or rather the game.

Kong Mandes, hairy-torsoed forward of the Central five, was the main point-getter in the opening battle between the teams, while Dean was the spearhead of the Eastern assault on the Mount Pleasanters' bucket. Tall, lean Dean whipped through the webbing for an even 13 points. Nau, star Central guard, failed to score in that initial tiff, while Nolan was bottled up and held to a brace of field goals, despite the wide-gap, 40-15 win.

Those comiques of the lower rung, Western and Roosevelt, will battle in the nightcap. Just what will happen in this meeting remains to be seen, if the hangers-on after the featured Central-Eastern tussle are able to stay awake.

Neither team has much more than a squad of 10 or 12 lads in uniforms. Jimmy Cocoran, of Western, is the standout of his club, while Rex Smith, who has assumed the departed Cavanaugh's role, is the best man for the Ruf Riders.

Should Western win, it will have snapped a 26 series-game losing streak and at the same time mingle in a tie for the cellar notch with Roosevelt. So snapping a record affords the only solace the Georgetowners can achieve out of the fray. Roosevelt whipped Western in the first tilt, 33-29.

La Salle's Rally Wins Over Bruce Five, 33-23

Westernport, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Rallying in the final quarter, La Salle Institute, of Maryland, defeated Bruce High here in a Western Maryland Interscholastic League game and took possession of third place in the league with four wins and two defeats. The score was 33-23.

'Babe' Didrikson Aims at Golf Titles

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 8 (U.P.). Mildred ("Babe") Didrikson is going after the National women's golf titles of America and England, she said today, just as soon as she has made enough money at basket ball.

The former amateur title holder in many sports and star of the Olympic games of three summers past may have to play another season to get money enough to enter golf competition. She now makes $1,000 a month and expenses in a series of one-night basket ball stands, of which her appearance here last night was the first in New England.

Regardless of how long it takes, Babe thinks she can better a golf score in the middle 70's when she takes the game up intensively.

Old Line Host At Twin Bill Tonight

Terps Seen as Winners in Ring; May Lose Cage Battle.

MARYLAND has a twin-bill on its hands tonight at College Park, where it tackles Richmond in basket ball and St. John's, of Annapolis, in boxing. The ball game starts at 8 o'clock and will be followed immediately by the ring contests.

While St. John's will be the underdog, it has some capable performers. Capt. Vince Farrone, 125-pounder, won against Maryland last year and last Saturday won his bout against Western Maryland. Cal Lotz, the lightheavy, held Kaplan, Western Maryland's intercollegiate champion, to an extremely close decision. Levin, 115-pounder and Snibbe, 145-pounder, also drew with Western Maryland's representatives.

Well-Balanced Squad.

Maryland, however, has a well-balanced squad and on past performances looms as a winner. Coach Jack Harmony will use the same men who have compiled a record of four victories in five matches this winter. A 6-2 defeat by Army is the only blemish on the record.

Richmond's dribblers may avenge the defeat their boxing team suffered earlier in the season. The Spiders are strong, as their 39-21 victory over Virginia Medical College Tuesday night will attest, and have played consistently well all season, while Maryland has been an in-and-outer. Richmond's reserves dominated the line-up against the Medicos. Leverton and Lacy are the team's most dangerous scorers.

Tomorrow Maryland plays host to Western Maryland's rangy but awkward quintet. The game will be followed by boxing matches between teams from Beltsville and Elkridge Civilian Conservation Corps camps.

N. B. A. Officials Ready To Reinstate Dempsey

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 8 (AP).—Announcement that the National Boxing Association is ready to reinstate Jack Dempsey was made here today by Karl D. Malone, chairman of the N. B. A. suspensions committee.

Dempsey was suspended about two years ago as a result of failure of a promoter of a boxing exhibition in Mississippi to pay certain expenses of a bout in which Dempsey was connected.

Malone said that Ed Foster, of Rhode Island, president of the N. B. A., felt also that the Manassa Mauler's suspension had lasted long enough.

Navy Boxers Primed for Virginia

Plebes Furnish Most of Action at Home, With 4 Varsities Away.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.). With four out of eight Navy varsity teams on the road and two others inactive, plebe athletic groups will provide the major portion of entertainment for home fans on Saturday.

Outstanding interest in varsity competition will be focused on University, Va., where Spike Webb's proteges, who have established an enviable record in college pugilistic circles, will swap punches with the Cavaliers of the University of Virginia. The Tars are all set to avenge the defeat they absorbed at the hands of the Virginians here last season.

Team Below Par.

That licking was one of two which Navy has suffered in dual meets in 14 years, the only other institution to turn the trick being Syracuse. Although there is some good material in the Navy camp this season, it can not be said that the team measures up to the standards of former years, even though Western Maryland College and University of North Carolina have fallen victims so far this season. In both of these meets, Webb did some experimenting in one or two classes to hit upon the strongest representatives, as competition has been extremely keen.

Probably the only change for the milling with the Cavaliers, however, will be the return of Bob Hopkins to the lightweight division. Hopkins was a slap-bang scrapper last season. He did not show his customary form in the opening meet with Western Maryland. He lost his bout to Buddy Myer of the Green Terrors on a technical knockout, after Myer opened a cut over Hopkins' right eye that prevented him from continuing under college rules. True, Hopkins had outpointed his adversary during the early stages of the milling.

Blitch Knocked Out.

Jimmy Blitch, normally a featherweight, fought in the lightweight class last Saturday, but he too went the way of the knockout route under the terrific punching of Norment Quarles, North Carolina's Southern Conference champion. Whether Capt. John McNaughton, junior middleweight, who also has not been showing to form, will battle against Virginia has not been determined. To subdue Virginia the Tars are expected to pin their hopes on Chet Smith, in the bantam division; Hopkins, lightweight; Ken Nauman, welterweight; "Beppo" Lambert, light-heavyweight, and Slade Cutter, heavyweight. Peppard and Herold may draw the assignments in the junior and senior middleweights, respectively, while the featherweight choice is between Solquin and Blitch.

A number of Naval and Annapolis boxing fans are planning to make the jaunt to Virginia for the fight. One Naval party will include Lieut. Comdr. Harvey E. Overesch, graduate manager of athletics, and other officials of the Navy Athletic Association who will be special guests of Jimmy Driver, athletic director of University of Virginia.

Wrestlers Face Harvard.

Other Navy varsity athletes who will compete under foreign environment are the wrestlers, who will meet Harvard at Cambridge; the basket ball team, which stacks up against Columbia in New York, and the fencers, who journey to Princeton. The Middies' grapplers expect Harvard to prove a tough assignment. The Navy swordsmen got off to a fine start last Saturday, scoring an impressive triumph over the veterans of the Philadelphia Sword Club.

The swimmers will have an off-day Saturday, but the water polo-ists will be at home helping the plebes to put on a show. Incidentally, the polo game should be a thriller as the former college stars now affiliated with the New York Athletic Club will furnish the opposition. Other varsity teams that will be inactive are the gymnasts and small bore riflists. The plebes will be busy with a three-event program. They will entertain the Cadets of Augusta Military Academy, Fort Defiance, Va., in both boxing and wrestling, and meet Perkiomen School, of Pennsburg, Pa., in basket ball. All of these events will be staged during the afternoon.

Basketers of St. John's College will play host to Elon College, of North Carolina, in the college gymnasium at night.

Harvey Downs Gains.

London, England, Feb. 8 (AP).—Len Harvey, British heavyweight boxing champion, won the British Empire title for good measure tonight by outpointing Larry Gains, veteran Negro from Canada, before a crowd of 10,000 at Albert Hall, in a 15-round match.

Mancuso Signs Contract.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The signed contract of Gus Mancuso, New York Giants catcher who is ill with typhoid fever in Houston, Tex., today was added to the list of contented world champions.

Virginia's Fighting Men Primed for Battles With Navy Tomorrow

Conquerors of Navy last year and the only institution to defeat the Midshipmen in the history of boxing at Annapolis, Virginia risks its clean record for the season tomorrow night at Charlottesville against the Sailors. The three Virginia stalwarts above are, left to right, Maynard Womer, welterweight; Capt. Harold Stewart, middleweight, and Gordon Rainey, featherweight.

G. W. Tackles Elon Five Tonight

Colonials' Season Nears End; Howell Averages 12 Points a Game.

NEARING the end of its schedule, George Washington stacks up against little Elon College tonight over on H street, starting at 8 o'clock. The Colonials have only three games left, including tonight's. The others are with Wake Forest and Washington and Lee.

Should G. W. win all three, it will hang up a record of 11 victories and 4 defeats for the season. Three of their last four court campaigns ended with the same figures. The other year it read 15 wins against 5 defeats. The Colonials should get by Elon, whom they thrashed, 76-21, last season, but Wake Forest and Washington and Lee represent real barriers.

Averages 12 Points.

Jimmy Howell must get at least 12 points in the game to continue his remarkable scoring record. To date, the blond wizard has 148 points to his credit, an average of slightly more than 12 a game. Howell's excellent work at forward has kept the team going since the departure of Sammy Stein.

George Washington's last two games, with Western Maryland and Davis-Elkins, have been thrillers, and in each the local school won only after Garrison finishes. Western Maryland came within two points of tying the score, but Bill Parrish's snowbird saved the day. Davis Elkins wilted before Howell's steady tattoo of shots and lost out in the last four minutes of play.

Little is known of Elon's quintet. Vague reports filtering in from the Southland indicate that it is not on par with G. W., and the Colonials anticipate an easy killing.

Eagles Want Games.

The Flying Eagles want games tonight and tomorrow night with teams having gymnasiums. Call Columbia 7125 between 5 and 6.

Amateur Fighters Blamed

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 (Spl.).—In reply to the current question, "What is the matter with professional boxing?" I should like to venture the solution that may be it is because amateur boxing is so dog-gone good, so cheap, so thrilling and exciting and so sincere. New York's annual Golden Gloves, the most amazing of all amateur boxing tonrneys, is now in full swing in our town, and from four to six thousand people are packing the halls of the little arenas and small clubs around the village every night of the week, and yelling themselves hoarse as the kids struggling for the greatest prize in the sport stage parties and make the brawls of the Kilkenny cats look like a munching party given by septuagenarian rabbits.

I have been on the Golden Gloves trail in New York, Brooklyn, Bronx and Queens for four consecutive nights, and I have seen battles that simply make your hair stand on end. The patrons who attend the professional fights haven't seen such earnest and thrilling struggles in the last five years. Oh, my worshipped and beloved clients, but I have witnessed some fine squabbles these recent nights.

This is my eighth year at looking at the Golden Gloves warriors and I do not find my interest diminishing or the excitement flagging. Each new pair that climbs up through the ropes is a new adventure, a new experience in human nature and ambition, a new canvas on which the portrait of a winner and a loser is painted with lightning strokes before my eyes. First one is down. Then the other. Then both are wabbling.

Which ambition will prevail, which driving stubbornness will outlast the other? Which of the two kids in the ring has the makings? Which one is the lucky one? By now, the first one to land a solid punch will win. Well, you've got to have luck as well as everything else to win that championship. Sheer ability isn't enough. The survivor must have every attribute of a champion, stamina, willpower, courage, strength, aggressiveness, the ability to take it, the ability to get up off the floor—and luck.

When one sees as many amateur boxing bouts especially among the sub-novices and beginners, as I do, one unconsciously classifies the boys according to the style they adopt as soon as the metal-tongue bells summons them to combat.

There is, for instance, the "practical hints to boxers," or "Oh, God, what page shall I turn to now?" type of boxer who has, obviously, got it out of a book. When the bell rings, he adopts what in Fig. 1, Page 7, is known as a "Boxing pose, or proper attitude to assume when emerging from the corner." The left hand is extended to its limit. The right is glued to the side of the face. One leg is prepared to go in, the other to retreat. On his face is a curious expression. There is so much to remember, so many pictures and poses to recall, so many warnings to observe.

What was it the book said about the left lead? Plate 5 on Page 63 showed it. Just then his opponent reaches over and clouts him on the end of the nose with his right hand. Pain, tears, anguish and heaven save us all, blood. Oh, disillusionment! Oh, horror! There was nothing in the book about this, except a suggestion to keep cool when hit. Keep cool my eye! Has the author ever received his death wound so early in the fight? Farewell, little volume. Only Providence can help us now.

Then there is the "Just one shot," or "I-will-hit-him-with-my-right-and-if-it-doesn't-do-the-trick-I-am-in-the-hands-of-my-maker," type of fighter who gets out of his corner at the bell with the right hand either held cocked at his bosom or balanced lightly behind him, describing menacing circles like a fast-ball pitcher ready to throw the third strike past a batter. On his face is a rapt and intensely concentrated expression. He has no left jab, no left hook, no footwork, no uppercut, no defense, nothing but that little package of five fingers wrapped up in red leather that he devoutly hopes he will be able to deliver C. O. D. before the evening's fun has progressed very far.

He knows he must present it soon, because he is not certain he can stand up for nine minutes. And so he stalks his prey raptly. Blap! There it is! Now what? Does the recipient waver, goggle, stagger and fall? Oh, sweet joy who reigneth in our midst. All is well.

But look. The enemy has been smitten fair to the jowls. A clean shot. And still he stands. And still he makes menacing gestures. And still he continues to advance. Then all is lost. Where is the exit? Where is the doctor? What is the referee thinking of? Where are kind friends? Will no one stop this thing before it has gone too far? Is there any use chucking that right again? Were it not better to conciliate than to aggravate farther? All these and more are writ on the countenance, plain to be read. And so another ambitious candidate is lugged to his corner, stimulated to consciousness again and given the glad tidings that all is over.

U. S. Women Defeated In British Squash Play

London, Feb. 8 (AP).—The three American survivors in the English Women's Squash Racquets Championships today were eliminated in the quarter-final round, leaving British forces in complete charge of the semifinals.

Mrs. W. F. Howe, jr., of Boston, the United States champion, fell before the hard-hitting young English player, Miss M. E. Lumb. Anne Page, of Philadelphia, was defeated by Mrs. Keith Jones McKechnie, English runner-up last year, and Mrs. Ary J. Lamme, of Rye, N. Y., fell before the Hon. Anne Lytton-Milbanke. The three Americans were survivors of an original entry list of seven. The others all went out in the early rounds.

Jr. Swimmers Vie Tonight For Title

East's Girls Will Compete at Shoreham in "220;" Diving on Program.

AN imposing array of out-of-town talent in the swim meet at the Shoreham tonight, which is featured by the junior national 220-yard free style and D. C. A. A. U. high board diving championships for women, presages a gala night for lovers of affairs aquatic.

Florence Peck, of the Penn A. C., who has beaten Washington's leading 220-yard free style swimmer, Rita Augusterfer, in two meets recently, will be on hand to try for the National title. The Brooklyn Dragon Club will be represented by Marie Inciardi, a good free style swimmer who is also expected by many to develop into a backstroke champion.

Margaret Wilcox, of the Hoosier A. C., Indianapolis, Ind., has also entered in the 220-yard free style event. The Capital will be represented by three entrants, Annabelle Whaler, Betty Thompson and Rita Augusterfer, all of the Shoreham. The Shoreham crew is pinning its hopes on the sturdy shoulders of Rita Augusterfer, who has bowed only to Florence Peck in recent competition.

Duval vs. Bates.

Marie Duval and Lois Bates are expected to close their usual close battle in the District A. A. U. high-board diving championship. Duval holds the title at present, but was nosed out in a recent competition by Bates, who holds the low board championship. Leonora Taube is expected by many to spring a surprise and Helen McHale, a newcomer to local pools who has shown well in practice, may prove the dark horse of the event.

The Dragon Club has entered several swimmers in the men's events; and the New York A. C. will be represented by John Howland, former Yale captain and Olympic star in the 50-yard free style swim. Charles Long, of the Dragon Club, an entrant in the 100 yard back-stroke race, holds the junior Metropolitan 300-yard medley championship, and his teammate, John Wicklun, an entrant in the same race, is the present senior Metropolitan 220-yard back stroke champion. Neil Ferguson, entered in the men's diving, placed third in the senior Metropolitan high board diving championship.

The meet starts at 8:30. An admission charge of 25 cents will be levied.

Women's Events.

D. C. A. A. U. highboard diving championship—Marie Duval, Lois Bates, Leonora Taube, Helen McHale (all of the Shoreham).

50-yard free style—John McMullen (Western H. S.), Henry Jones (Western H. S.), G. Randle (Western H. S.), John Mullady (Y. M. C. A.), Henry Vedder (G. W.), Helvig (G. W.), Dwyer Ghormley (G. W.), Max Rote (G. W.), Curtis Porterfield (Ambassador), Lewis Gordon (Shoreham), George Groff (Shoreham), John Howland (N. Y. A. C.).

100-yard back stroke—Charles Long (Dragon), John Wilcox (Dragon), Paul Wilson (Y. M. C. A.), James Orme (Y. M. C. A.), William Marmion (Y. M. C. A.), John Hayne (G. W.), Hayden (G. W.), Fred Christenson (G. W.), Lewis Gordon (Shoreham).

Hall, Sponsor Of Measure, Cheered

By Doug Warrenfels.

The House finance committee voted 12 to 2 for establishment of three tracks after tempestuous hearings on two bills to legalize "the sport of kings."

Several hundred spectators cheered William C. Hall, Leesburg, committee chairman and author of the proposed legislation, when he contended the Assembly could "no more prevent the people of Virginia from betting on horses than stop them from drinking liquor."

"We don't contemplate any bootleg tracks," he declared. "We want minimum purses of $600 and mile tracks, so racing in Virginia can be maintained on a high plane."

Stars Bred in State.

It is inconsistent, Hall argued, for the State to breed such outstanding thoroughbreds as Toro, Sun Beau, Sun Briar and Reigh Count and still ban well-regulated tracks. He pointed out $3,418,000 worth of pedigreed horses pranced on Virginia farms valued at $19,320,000.

"The King of England," Hall reported, "attends the Grand National every year. He certainly wouldn't support an immoral sport. Many of our best people frequent the tracks in this country."

Hall predicted the State would obtain much-needed revenue from proposed plants in Charlottesville, Alexandria and Virginia Beach—the sites to depend on local option elections. He cited large racing income of a dozen other States, including $816,000 in Maryland last year.

"Don't forget," he appealed, "that George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Jackson frequently bet on horses in their day. I remember seeing our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, at a track in New York with Mrs. Roosevelt while he was Governor."

Virginia Betters Snoop.

Thomas B. Gay, Richmond breeder, protested Virginians "now have to snoop behind barns when they want to make a little bet on the ponies."

"Racing was introduced in the Old Dominion in 1730," he added. "It was particularly popular throughout the colonial period. You can't legislate the love of horses and horse racing out of our hearts."

Contentions that racing should be permitted because of the large number of breeding farms were discredited by Dr. J. G. McAllister, Richmond minister.

"We don't gamble on bull fights, but we have plenty of thoroughbred bulls," he reminded.

Dr. W. S. Dyerle, Richmond preacher, deplored sentiment behind the Hall bills.

"Gambling in any form is degrading," he said. "Legalizing it doesn't make it less degrading. We're passing through a depression because of Wall street gambling or the same thing that you would legalize in Virginia. The Commonwealth would be better off bankrupt financially than bankrupt morally."

Judge J. H. Ricks, Richmond juvenile court, objected return of racing, would "cause many a poor man to lose his money and deprive his family of bread."

Texas Pro-Amateur Ends in Two-Way Tie

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 8 (AP). Dick Metz, Deal, N. J., professional, sank a 40-foot putt on the eighteenth green for a birdie 2 today to send him and Gus Moreland, Texas amateur champion, into a sub-par tie at 65 with Halbert Grumbles, San Antonio amateur, and Harold McSpaden, Kansas City professional, for the lead in the pro-amateur event of the Texas Open golf tournament today.

Both teams had cards of 33—32—65. Metz shot an individual 66, five under par. Moreland had even par and both bagged birdies on the ninth hole.

Golden Fate Leads From Start to Triumph at Hialeah Park, Paying $13.80

Quel Jeu 2d, Trailing by 2 Lengths

Hokuao Is Victorious in First; Gay Joe Takes His Third in Row.

HIALEAH PARK, Feb. 8 (AP).—Golden Fate, 4-year-old son of The Satra — Golden Fair, which has been racing successfully in claiming races, stepped out and won the Idle Hour Handicap from a field of the fastest sprinters in training here this afternoon. Silvio Coucci had the colt on top from end to end and Golden Fate was well in hand as he passed the wire two lengths in advance of the Arden Farms' Quel Jeu. Shandon Farm's Evergold was beaten a length for the place. The winner ran 6 furlongs in the very fast time of 1:10 4-5, and his backers collected $13.80 for $2.

Golden Fate carried the silks of the Canadian, J. E. Smallman, in hanging up his third straight victory of the winter. Early in the season the B. B. Stable claimed the colt from Smallman. Smallman then reclaimed his sprinter and today the colt ran one of the best races of his career.

The Pelican Falters.

Breaking from the outside, Golden Fate hustled right into the lead and was nursed along with a comfortable margin, going easily. The Pelican, favorite in the field of seven, had enough of the pace early and Quel Jeu took a crack at the ultimate winner. Horn drove Quel Jeu hard, but Golden Fate never was in danger. Evergold was outrun for 3 furlongs. He made up ground in the stretch and was an easy third.

Hokuao, winner of his last race at Tropical Park, was a highly fancied repeater in the curtain raiser, which drew 12 sprinters to the post. The recently suspended apprentice, R. Merritt, rode a fine race on the winner, nursing him along in front of the despised Periodical and drawing clear from the latter in the last furlong. Hokuao won by 3 lengths and paid $7.80. Periodical, returning $50.70 for place, beat Blackmock by 4 lengths.

Angelic Is Winner.

A lot of crowding marred the running of the juvenile event, in which 16 maiden fillies performed. There was a jam as the field neared the furlong pole, several horses being victims. Angelic, under Johnny Gilbert, carried Mrs. Damon Runyon's silks to their first success, the daughter of Infinite leading almost from the start and standing a long drive gamely to beat Below Zero by a half length. The latter forced the pace and was an easy second, 5 spans before Maddening. The winner was favorite, paying $5.20.

Francis Maschek, tiny apprentice rider from Bush, La., who rode his first winner at Tropical Park this winter, took a heavy spill with his mount, Tight Wad, when the colt got in a jam just passing the finish line in the third race. The boy was carried off the track but later reports said he escaped with a shaking up.

Off Duty Triumphs.

Off Duty was an easy winner, coming from off the pace to register by two lengths at $13.80 for $2. Try Fair, always in the thick of the battle, saved second money from Taunton by a length and a half.

Gay Joe made it three out of three at the local oval when he drove home by a half length in the fourth. Precept, making her seasonal debut, was an impressive second, a length and a half clear of Fire Mask. The winner returned $8.60.

Trainer Nat Ray and the filly Kiltamond, both back in good standing following charges of Ray's entry being stimulated, a suspension and a hearing at which reinstatement resulted, got back into action in the sixth race. It was a highly successful comeback, for Kiltamond scored a very easy victory and paid $15.90. Carrying Mrs. G. Spitzer's silks, the filly beat Bartering Kate by four lengths. Inflate was third.

Apprentice Litzenberger made it two in a row by booting home the $3.70 choice, Raecoon, in the final event. Bolilee was second, three lengths back, and four lengths before Resisting.

Tigers Sign Goslin.

Detroit, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Detroit Baseball Co. announced today that Leon "Goose" Goslin, acquired by the Tigers last fall from Washington had signed his contract for 1934.

HOKUAO was away on his toes, but joined by PERIODICAL. HOKUAO finally raced the latter down and drew away in stretch winning in a gallop. PERIODICAL showed excellent speed for five furlongs, then tired. BLACKMOCK suffered early interference, but closed a big gap. TWO TRICKS finished sammy. STYLE CORNER saved many lengths on turn, but faded away in final furlong. SCOUTMASTER closed a big gap.

SECOND RACE—Nursery course. 3 furlongs (straightaway). Purse, $700. For maiden 2-year-old fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, easily. Went to post at 2:47. Off at 2:50½. Winner, Mrs. Damon Runyon's ch. f. (2), by Infinite—Rhea. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:34 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANGELIC, $5.20, $3.20, $3.00; BELOW ZERO, $4.20, $3.70; MADDENING, $6.80.

ANGELIC broke fast, showed good speed, and stood long drive gamely. BELOW ZERO ran good race and finished gamely under good ride. MADDENING, a good looking filly, displayed good speed, but weakened at end. MIGRATE suffered interference. POLLY RUTH closed fast. HOPE ETERNAL broke slow and was on the outside all the way. It was a very rough run race.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:20½. Off at 3:21½. Winner, Middleburg Stable's ch. f. (3), by Our General—Phanton Fairy. Trained by C. Phillips. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OFF DUTY, $13.80, $5.80, $4.40; TRY FAIR, $9.80, $8.50; TAUNTON, $9.00.

OFF DUTY broke fast, was kept in on the rail in early part, was taken to the outside entering stretch, closed gamely, and won going away. TRY FAIR moved up with a rush turning out of the back stretch and held on gamely. TAUNTON trailed far back, but came with a rush in stretch. BICKERING finished fast. ESCADRON had speed for five furlongs, then tired. THE BAILIFF lacked speed. TIGHT WAD had speed, was in a jam just after the finish and fell.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:49. Off at 3:50½. Winner, Mrs. J. Grossman's ch. c. (3), by Craigangower—Madras. Trained by J. Grossman. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY JOE, $8.60, $4.00, $3.40; PRECEPT, $5.70, $4.50; FIRE MASK, $4.20.

GAY JOE in good form at. He handled his weight well, raced PIETY into submission, then drew away into a winning lead, tired, and gamely stalled off the determined bid of PRECEPT. The latter ran a smashing good race first effort. He will be hard to beat in the future. FIRE MASK jumped away to a fast lead, but dropped back and held on gamely. CASH SURRENDER failed to show his usual early speed. PIETY ran a good race.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse $1,000. The Idle Hour Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:18. Off at 4:23½. Winner, J. E. Smallman's b. c. (4), by The Satra—Golden Fair. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:10 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN FATE, $13.80, $6.40, $4.00; QUEL JEU, $5.00, $4.10; EVERGOLD, $6.80.

GOLDEN FATE got away very fast and was sent right to the lead. He displayed good speed, saved ground, and held on well. QUEL JEU broke slow, but went up very fast and made a game effort. EVERGOLD was bothered some in early running, was taken to the outside in stretch, where he closed fast. CLOTHO saved many lengths on turns, but quit. THE PELICAN ran well for half a mile, then quit. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For fillies and mares, 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:51½. Off at 4:52¼. Winner, Mrs. G. Spitzer's b. f. (3), by Pharamond II—Clonakilty. Trained by Nat Ray. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KILTAMOND, $15.90, $7.40, $ 4.10; BARTERING KATE, $4.70, $3.70; INFLATE, $4.00.

KILTAMOND badly outrun in the early part, came to the outside and, closing with a rush in stretch, won drawing away. BARTERING KATE ran into a long lead, saved ground all the way, but weakened fast in last sixteenth. INFLATE made a bold bid ground turn, but could never get up. WELL BUILT had no mishap. HIGHDINE was a poor finisher. AUNT FLOR quit.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:22. Off at once. Winner, Brookmeade Stable's b. g. (7), by Wrack—Robinetia. Trained by R. A. Smith. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:51 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RACCOON, $3.70, $3.10, $2.40; BOLILEE, $4.00, $3.00; RESISTING, $2.70.

RACCOON ran as if much the best. He pushed into lead and, under steady restraint, drew away easily in stretch. BOLILEE moved up with a determined bid around turn and was next best. RESISTING was badly outrun in early stages, closed some ground, but never threatened leaders. CANON LAW ran well for seven furlongs.

Allegany Boys, Girls Defeat Keyser Teams

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 8 (Spl.).—Allegany High School's basket ball teams ran roughshod over their old rivals, the boys' and girls' teams of Keyser, W. Va., High on the local court. Coach Walter Bowers' boys sent 19 field goals through the meshes to win, 40-17, and Coach Kitty Grimm Curry's blue and white clad sextet registered a 30-17 win.

The Allegany boys scored their eleventh consecutive triumph of the season. Paul Twigg and Norman Gerdeman accounted for 9 of the 19 field baskets.

Helen Waring Wins.

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 8 (AP).—Helen Waring, of Pinehurst, repeated her triumph of last year in the Pinehurst St. Valentine's golf tournament by beating Mrs. James B. Given, jr., of Brooklyn, 8 and 7, in the finals match today.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The building illustrated above will be recognized by many as the famous Flatiron Building in New York. A few years ago it was an outstanding landmark in midtown Manhattan—and thousands of picture postcards have been sent back home by visitors to New York showing the then marvel of modern architecture. Yet, strange as it seems, the building was not the Flatiron building—its proper name was the Fuller Building. It was popularly called the Flatiron Building because of its wedge-shaped ground plan. The point of the wedge touches Twenty-third street, Broadway and Fifth avenue run along its sides.

Shatill is a Russian village of the Khevsurian district. It is well isolated from the world in general, and its inhabitants follow many strange medieval practices—such as wearing iron helmets and coats of mail. Another strange thing about the little village is its "city planning." There are only two streets in the village proper, and on one of these only men and their horses are allowed to walk. The other street, which is available to women, is never used by men. In addition, cattle are allowed only on the women's street.

Dear Al:

Trainer Nate Ray, now under suspension due to the alleged finding of dope in the saliva of the horse, Kiltamond, and the apprentice rider, Eddie Litzenberger, who has been the target for a whispering campaign, received a certain amount of vindication here today. Kiltamond and Litzenberger teamed to score a smashing victory in the sixth race, when the trainer, the horse and the boy were virtually "on the spot." And the fact that Kiltamond had figured in the dope revelation had much to do with that $15.90 mutuel. On a day when most of the selectors were thankful to have Racoon at odds on as their only winner. Bennings had Angelic at $5.20. Things really are teriffic. And Mike's appetite improves.

BILL.

First race—If Longford doesn't win this mile race, I look for the wagon to carry him to the glue factory. Gets in with 104 pounds and drops down several notches. Should beat this kind. Phantom Legion and Southard to take care of the others.

Second race—Hilise appears to have an edge over Mrs. Fab in this hop, skip and jump contest for the nursery department. Mrs. Fab will be ready if the top one, a fairly consistent sort, makes mistakes. Whoa Back, second last time, for the show money.

Third race—Boy Crazy has been packing much speed in local appearances. We can't hope for much of a price, but the Bradleyite should step home in front. Bright Bubbles, with feather weight, to defeat Moralist for the minor award.

Fourth race—Croon gets 14 pounds from Fancy Flight tomorrow. As I see it, the main distribution of this purse remains between this pair. Croon turned in a good effort, though second, last out. Kneehigh is probably getting a final tune-up before shooting in a long race.

Fifth race—I'm taking Zulu Lad. That recent victory convinced me that this one can move up and still get to the wire first. [illegible] surprise win boosts his stock considerably. Boy Valet and Night's End will be in the thick of the fight. Pardon me for naming four of them.

Sixth race—God o' War took a decision from Rego when they met at Tropical. Both are of the improving sort and they may fight it out for the main end of the purse in front of the favored Davoc. Look out for Squeeze Out.

Seventh race—Eurydice, Playful Martha and Grayback is the way I like them in the day's finale.

Stocks Rally Vigorously in Final Trading

Selling Flurries Overcome as Turnover Drops to 3,217,550 Shares.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Markets strengthened today after they had absorbed a carry-over of yesterday's selling. Stocks rallied vigorously in the last hour and, although there were some declines left at the close, the net change for the averages was half a point gain.

Shares went through a couple of selling flurries before deciding to turn about; at the worst leaders were off fractions to a couple of points or so, but on each reaction volume had a marked tendency to lessen, and the late rally was one of the day's most active periods. Transactions amounted to 3,217,550 shares.

When the market reversed itself, several stocks appeared to be enjoying strong sponsorship. U. S. Smelting soared half a dozen points and closed near the high.

On Gaining List.

American Can was another favorite, up more than 2, while Allied Chemical gained 3½. Union Pacific, who directors voted a regular dividend of $1.50, was up as much. American Smelting, Du Pont, Howe Sound, Montgomery Ward and U. S. Pipe were other leaders.

Sugars came forward in advance of the President's message which advocated that the staple be made a basic commodity and opposed placing it on the free list. U. S. Steel, General Motors, Sears Roebuck and New York Central improved moderately. Utilities lagged a bit.

Calmer news from Paris may have found some reflection here; French bonds were strong. The Bank of France, which lost nearly 200,000,000 francs in gold in the week ended February 2, or before the heaviest drain got under way, jumped its discount rate to 3 per cent from 2½.

Aid to Money.

This was regarded as a convention step, taken with a view to hardening the Paris market and make it more attractive to funds. What the ultimate effect will be, of course, remains to be seen.

General Motors sales to consumers in January were less than half those of a year ago, although about double December's. The decrease, it was explained, does not reflect current demand for cars, but rather was incident to delay in getting into new-model production.

This week's Federal Reserve statements show a reduction of about $9,000,000 in total discounts and a shrinkage of open market bill purchases. The system dropped its "gold held abroad item" which is now included in the figures on monetary gold stocks of the United States.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—The more favorable French political outlook which induced repurchases of Kaffirs, French bonds and oil shares, caused a better tone in a fairly active session on the stock exchange today. Transatlantic issues, weakened on the proposed New York Stock Exchange regulations, but closed above their lowest. Gilt-edged securities held steady, while Brazilian issues were irregular. The market closed steady.

Paris—Prospects of settling cabinet difficulties brought a recovery in French issues on the bourse, especially in rentes. International issues declined slightly, reflecting the weakness in Wall street. The session was irregular.

Berlin—The good demand for securities on the bourse stiffened prices, especially in the bond sections. Toward the close, prices declined, but closed sustained.

Discussion of Jesse Jones' New York Speech Overlooks Time Relationship Between Credit Expansion and Business Improvement.

By Ralph West Robey.

In spite of the widespread discussion of the address of Jesse Jones in New York last Monday night one of the major points, it seems to me, has received little if any attention. This is the question of the time relationship between an expansion of bank credit and an increase in business activity. Mr. Jones seems to think, as do practically all credit inflationists, that the expansion of loans must come first. The exact reverse is the case. An increase in loans and discounts of commercial banks should follow and not precede an increase in the volume of business activity.

Mr. Jones not only refused to recognize this point of view but took a vigorous stand on the opposite side. The result was that the financial community has found itself completely out of sympathy with his line of argument. Perhaps no member of the Administration, in fact, has made a speech which has been more coldly received or the cause of more biting criticism than this one. The result probably would not have been much different if Mr. Jones had started out deliberately to annoy and irritate all of those who believe in the maintenance of a sound financial system.

Insisted That Banks Must Make More Loans.

More specifically, the burden of the talk was that unless the banks extend more credit the United States Government will assume the task of lending directly to industry. As he explained it, banks should not try to stay in a thoroughly liquid position. Quite the contrary he insisted that they must make loans of relatively long maturity, loans which a century of experience shows are unsuited for the portfolios of commercial banks. He virtually demanded, under threat of socialization of the banking system, that banks lower their credit standards and start to pump funds into the economic system even though the risks are great and the solvency of the institutions is endangered.

For one who has been charged with the responsibility of trying to put our banking system in good condition this is a most extraordinary line of thought. Nevertheless, it must be recognized that it has rather wide acceptance. This is because for the past two or three years there has been a constant bombardment of statements out of Washington to the effect that the banks are refusing to make loans. Many people are convinced accohrdingly, that this policy must be stopped and the banks must be made to ease up on the granting of credit.

Any one who will devote a little thought to the subject, however, will recognize that there is no reason why bank credit should expand until we have a considerable increase in the volume of business activity. Business turns upward when there has been sufficient liquidation to establish a new workable equilibrium within the economic system. In the process of this liquidation and establishment of new equilibrium business organizations, not only to pay off their loans but accumulate surplus balances with their banks. In fact, the accumulation of such surpluses is the most reliable financial indication that we have of the end of a depression. It is because of this that always in the past money rates were low immediately preceding an upturn.

Trade Pick-Up Comes Before Credit Expansion.

Once the new equilibrium is established and trade picks up, it can be carried on for some little ways before any net increase in borrowing takes place. Only when the surplus balances are more or less exhausted will the volume of loans and discounts be increased. This will be, or has been in the past, some months after the start of the business upturn.

What Mr. Jones is asking, therefore, is that we force upon business organizations funds which they do not need, or at least do not need for working capital. Our banks are, and have been for many months, not only willing but actually searching for good credit risks to whom they may make loans. Every study that has been made has shown conclusively that there is no shortage of credit for the type of loans which are suitable for commercial bank portfolios.

The only possible shortage of credit is for long-term funds. If our commercial banks go into this—and apparently this is what Mr. Jones wants them to do—it is only a matter of time until our financial system will be in worse shape than it has been at any time in the last four years.

Curb's Prices Driven Higher In Late Sales

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The curb market closed higher today after staging a sharp rally in the late dealings. Forenoon losses of fractions to more than a point were canceled and many shares converted declines into equivalent gains.

Utilities, oils and alcohols shared well in the recovery. Hiram Walker erased a 2-point dip. Electric Bond & Share, after easing under 20 for more than a point loss, finished a major fraction higher. A number of specialities recorded fairly wide gains, among them Interstate Hosiery Mills, Tubize Chattillon and Safety Car Heating.

United Light & Power convertible preferred rose more than 2. American Gas & Electric, Glen Alden Coal, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Canadian Industrial Alcohol A and Gulf Oil closed a point higher each.

Transfers approximated 492,000 shares, compared with 657,000 for Wednesday.

U. P. Railway Votes Its Usual $1.50 Dividend

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Directors of the Union Pacific Railroad today declared the usual dividend of $1.50 a share on the common stock, payable April 2 to stock of record March 1.

Jantzen Knitting Mills Co. has declared a $1.25 dividend on account of arrears on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, in addition to a regular quarterly payment of $1.75, both payable March 1 to stock of record February 25. Accumulations on the issue will be reduced to $1.25 a share.

Directors of Continental Casualty Co. have resumed dividend payments with declaration of a 15 cent a share dividend payable March 1, to stockholders of record February 15. It is the first dividend disbursement since April 1, 1932.

The preliminary report of Southern Railway Co. for 1933 shows net loss of $734,800 after taxes and charges compared with loss of $11,218,507 in 1932.

Continental Can Co. reports net earnings for 1933 at $7,547,401, equal to $4.31 a share, compared with $4,819,322 or $2.78 a share in 1932.

The company reported an increase of nearly 20 per cent in the dollar volume of sales and nearly twice the inventories carried at the end of 1932.

O. C. Huffman, president, stated that the increase in inventories from $9,601,026 at the end of 1932 to $18,881,890 at the end of 1933 was due to forward purchases of raw materials used in manufacturing processes.

Dow, Jones & Co. said today that the Louisville & Nashville Railroad will show earnings of $1,795,716 for 1933, equal to $1,53 a share, against net loss of $2,108,875 for 1932. December brought a deficit of $67,028 after charges contrasted with profit of $889,981 the year before, which was "mainly responsible," said the agency, "for failure of the road to reach earlier estimates which placed last year's earnings at about $2 a share." The directors last month declared a dividend of $1.50.

Bonds Renew Upturn Under Final Rallies

Rails Lead in Corporate Loan Recovery; Sales, $19,291,000.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—Bonds followed stocks in a late rally today and at the close many of the more volatile secondary issues had recovered some of their previous session's rather severe losses.

The belated recovery came after the list had recorded further declines of 1 to 3 or more points. Trading was not so active during most of the proceedings, transfers totaling $19,291,000, per value, against $20,986,000 Wednesday.

Dollar Drop Ignored.

The market appeared to pay little attention to another sharp decline in international dollar exchange, calming of the recently turbulent French political waters, while interesting to financial circles, seemingly had no particular effect on any except obligations of the republic. These were strong, both the Government and municipal issues advancing 6 and 7 points.

The come-back in corporation loans was led by the rails. Most of the carrier favorites held advances of a point or more, although a few were still under water at the finish. Among the so-called prime bonds which were steady to firm were some of Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Pennsylvania and Union Pacific.

The star performer of the utilities was the 5 per cent issue of American Waterworks, which matures April 1, next. This loan retained a net gain of 6½ points following announcement that the proposed new refunding loan would have a stock conversion privilege. Other utilities that improved moderately included some bonds of American & Foreign Power, American Telephone, Columbia Gas, International Hydro-Electric, International Telephone, Laclede Gas, Postal Telegraph and Utilities Power & Light.

On Gaining List.

Among the industrials, up 1 to 2, were issues of American Rolling Mill, Cuban Cane Products, Hudson Coal, Midvale Steel, National Dairy, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, United Drug, U. S. Rubber and Warner Bros.

The majority of U. S. Government securities were up 1-32d to 10-32ds of a point, but the turnover here amounted to only about $1,000,000.

In addition to the buoyant French loans, a number of other foreign loans improved along with their currencies. Swiss Government 5½s were up 3¼, bonds of Dutch East Indies recovered 2 to 4 and British issues were up a point or more. Cuban loans advanced 1⅝ to 3¼, and the Germans and Australians were fairly firm.

Wheat Values Follow Rise in Other Markets

Drought Reports Provide Aid to Prices; All Grains Climb.

Chicago, Feb. 8 (AP).—Brisk upturns of grain values late today went hand in hand with rallies made by securities and the cotton market.

Adding momentum to the late upward trend of wheat was a forecast pointing to likelihood of virtually unbroken drought both in Kansas and Nebraska.

Official Kansas reports indicated that there had been further crop damage to wheat in the western section of the State as a result of continued excessive dearth of moisture.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm at almost the day's top level, ⅛ to ⅝ above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅛ to ½ up; oats, ¼ to ½ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12 cents.

Until shortly before trading was ended, wheat prices showed a pronounced disposition to sag, and at one stage reached more than a cent a bushel overnight loss.

Scattered rains in parts of Texas and Oklahoma with sprinkles in southwestern Kansas had a temporary bearish effect, together with early weakness of the stock market. The declines carried wheat to more than 3½ cents under Monday's high point, but at below 90 cents for May contracts, demand for wheat increased, and at the extreme top later the market was up 1⅝ from the low.

Drag on Values.

A notable drag on wheat values at times was word of proposed fresh legislative alterations of grain exchange methods. During much of the day, new speculative buying was of relatively small volume, although the Department of Agriculture estimated the carryover of wheat in the United States on July 1 next at 305,000,000 bushels compared with 400,000,000 bushels a year previous.

Italy's wheat acreage was officially announced as 11,807,000 acres against 12,504,000 last year. The French wheat crop was reported as having been damaged 10 to 15 per cent by freezing and thawing weather.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat. Nearly 2 cents bulge in March corn quotations at Buenos Aires attracted notice. There were reports that corn crop damage in Argentina had been seriously increased during the past week. Provisions had an unward slant, responsive to action of hog values and of grains.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, Feb. 8.—WHEAT—Shipments from elevators, 4,600 bushels. Stocks in elevators, 1,066,332 bushels. Opening prices were: No. 2 red winter, sarlicky, spot, domestic, 98; February delivery, domestic, 98; March delivery, domestic, 98¾. Receipts of wheat running light and demand is fairly good here for No. 2 red winter, garlicky. Off grades hard to sell.

CORN—Receipts, 1,376 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators 171 bushels. Stock in elevators, 22,215 bushels. Receipts of corn from the nearby section have recently been running freer. Yellow and high-colored mixed there is fair domestic demand. Cob corn quoted at 2.75@3.00 per barrel for carlots, time nearby yellow on spot. Offerings more than ample for present wants. No. 2 yellow corn (old) arriving here by car quoted at 66@67 per bushel with trading sluggish.

OATS—Shipments from elevators, 8,085 bushels. Stock in elevators, 5,028 bushels. Receipts of oats show considerable variation in weight, being mostly light. Demand fair in a jobby way. Cod heavyweight oats are relatively scarce and such command a good premium. No. 2 white oats, 49@53 per bushel as to weight and position.

Note—On all sales of oats for the local trade, excepting those by track, there is an additional charge of ½ cents per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 5,247 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 2,036 bushels. Stock in elevators 77,904.

HAY—General hay market is quiet. No surplus of good timothy. Prices are from 12.00 to 14.00 per ton, as to grade and kind. The poorer grades of mixed hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below No. 3 timothy.

U. S. Exports 10 Per Cent of Citrus Fruit

Shipments Valued Are at $9,474,000, Slightly Below '32.

Exports of citrus fruit from the United States during 1933 were valued at $9,474,000 compared with $10,328,943 for 1932 and represented approximately 10 per cent of the year's citrus fruit production estimated at $80,230,000, according to M. A. Wulfert, foodstuffs division, Department of Commerce.

Oranges, valued at $6,655,000, accounted for the largest proportion of the year's citrus fruit exports. Foreign sales of grapefruit during the year were valued at $2,181,000, while exports of lemons contributed $628,000 to the total trade, statistics show.

Canada purchased 59 per cent of the oranges exported, the United Kingdom 25½ per cent, and the remaining 15½ per cent were sold to 47 other countries, sizable markets being found in Germany, Netherlands, France, China, Hongkong, New Zealand, Sweden, Belgium and Norway.

Shipments of oranges to the United Kingdom increased from 407,180 boxes in 1932 to 867,607 boxes in 1933, despite strong competition in that market with fruit from Spain, Italy, Palestine and South Africa. Total exports of oranges amounted to 3,398,782 boxes compared with 3,129,135 boxes exported in 1932.

Exports of grapefruit amounted to 967,747 boxes, valued at $2,180,818, a decline from exports of 1932, due to smaller shipments to the United Kingdom, the principal market. Canada takes about as much grapefruit from the United States as the United Kingdom, these two countries absorbing over 94 per cent of the exports in 1933.

Exports of lemons amounted to 170,743 boxes, valued at $628,488 in 1933, a decline of approximately 21 per cent from 1932 shipments, due to smaller exports to Canada, the principal market. Exports to many other markets increased in 1933.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Textiles—"Reports from every direction of textile production and distribution are impressive," says the current letter of Scheuer & Co., cloth brokers. "Finished goods shipments and bookings are large. Gray goods sales, more especially in the cotton division, approach record proportions. The synthetic gray goods movement presents a less uniformly satisfactory picture, but on the whole it, too, has experienced a substantial flow of business."

Chemicals—Orders for copper sulphate are being placed in good volume for the account of the agricultural trade. Prices are reported fully maintained at $3.75 to $4.40 per hundredweight.

Percales — In the corporation printer division certain leading houses are reported to have advanced 80-squares percale to a basis of 14½ cents a yard, a rise of ½ cent. Prices were also raised on 60-48s ¾ cent to 10½ cents.

Lead — Demand has improved moderately during the last few days, balancing or exceeding intake of some of the larger producers. Prices are firm at 4 cents a pound, New York, and 3.90 cents, East St. Louis.

Bank Rate Rise In Paris Seen As Cash Curb

Discount Charge Is Above New York and London; Gold Dwindles.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP).—The increase in the Bank of France's discount rate to 3 per cent from 2½ was explained in Wall street as a traditional central banking measure designed to curb an outflow of funds, including gold.

The reduction of the New York Federal Reserve Bank's rate to 1½ per cent from 2 a week ago was explained as, among other things, a gesture indicating that this country was not seeking to embarrass Europe by trying to corner the world's gold supply.

The Central Bank rate, it was explained, tends to influence credit rates. Under the new rates, funds should therefore be able to earn more in Paris than in New York.

The new Bank of France rate is also 1 percentage point above the Bank of England rate, so credit should be able to earn more in Paris than London.

Whether a higher discount rate will be effective in keeping funds at home, banking authorities explain, will depend largely upon a restoration of confidence.

Such rate increases have rarely been effective when confidence in the currency is seriously impaired, and when international movement of capital is unrestricted.

Decline in Gold.

The Bank of France statement published today, which was for the week ended February 2, showed a decline in gold of only $12,862,200, measured by the new parity of the franc, leaving the huge reserve of $5,084,492,000. Bankers here believed that there had been a substantial efflux of gold since February 2, however.

At 3 per cent, the French rate is equivalent to that of the Bank of The Netherlands, and since Amsterdam has been losing gold to Paris, it was suggested here that the Dutch Bank might also lift its rate. It checked an outflow of gold last spring and early last summer, in part by a temporary rise in its rate.

Other rates of the gold bloc countries include Belgium, 3½ per cent; Switzerland, 2 per cent, and Italy, 3 per cent.

Among the higher rates in Europe are Greece and Bulgaria, both 7 per cent.

Hercules Life Gets National's Assets

Chicago, Feb. 8.—The contract whereby Hercules Life Insurance Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co. subsidiary, takes over the reinsurance of the 112,000 policyholders of National Life Insurance Co. of the U. S. A., was affirmed by Judge William J. Lindsay, of the superior court, yesterday. National Life was placed in receivership on October 17 last.

The contract provides that the assets are to be conveyed to and administered by Hercules.

Hercules agrees to pay the full face value of all premium-paying policies in case of the death of any policy holder within the next ten years, as well as those which occurred before the effective date of the contract, and full liability is assumed for supplementary contracts outstanding on October 17, 1933, arising from such death claims.

January Shipments Of Steel May Drop

New York, Feb. 8 (AP). — Dow, Jones & Co. say figures on shipments of finished steel by the United States Steel Corporation in January will show a substantial decrease from the 600,639 tons delivered in December, which was 170,281 tons better than shipments in November.

"It is apparent," the agency says, "that there has been a reversal in the trend of shipments as compared with previous years. Since 1930, December has recorded rather large decreases in deliveries of finished products as compared with November, while January always recorded good gains over the final month in the previous year."

The report for January will be made public Saturday.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Feb. 8 (AP). — This week's total of engineering construction is $23,937,000, of which $22,814,000 is for public projects, says Engineering News-Record. The volume is slightly above the average week to date for 1934.

Schiff Co.'s January sales increased 36.1 per cent over a year ago, totaling $486,530; December was 20.2 per cent above the same month of 1932.

J. C. Penney Company's January sales totaled $12,445,239, an increase of 43.2 per cent from the 1933 month.

Standard Statistics Co. says that accompanying the expected general expansion in industrial activity this spring "there promises to be a sharp upward trend" in machinery sales. "Replacement of inadequate and outworn industrial manufacturing equipment will be undertaken on a fairly broad scale in industries sharing in the general recovery," it states. "Expansion in building construction will broaden markets for many types of machinery."

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous production in the United States for the week ended February 3 at approximately 7,550,000 net tons against 5,850,000 for the corresponding week of 1933.

Net sales of Spiegel, May Stern Co. in January were $927,916 compared with $320,710 a year ago, an increase of 189.3 per cent.

New minimum prices on tool steel, Pittsburgh base, showing a reduction of one-half cent a pound, have been filed with the American Iron and Steel Institute. They are effective February 17.

Peppermint Oil Exports Equal High '32 Mark

Exports of peppermint oil from the United States in 1933 nearly equaled the high record established in 1932, according to a compilation prepared by the Commerce Department's Chemical Division, which shows that 235,000 pounds were sold abroad during the year, whereas in 1932, 263,000 pounds were exported.

C. C. Concannon, chief of the division, pointed out that the tendency is for an increasingly large percentage of the domestic production to be sold in foreign markets. In 1933, approximately 47 per cent of the total crop was exported, compared with 62.8 per cent in 1932; 33.6 in 1931; 21.1 in 1930, and 20.6 in 1929.

Westinghouse Gets Tech Pact In Radio Needs

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 8.—W. C. Evans, manager radio department of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., today announced negotiations carried on for some months with the Washington Institute of Technology had been concluded with the result that Westinghouse in the future will manufacture radio devices developed and perfected by members of the institute.

This commercial tie-up is of international significance because of the fact that it links the radio engineering and manufacturing facilities of the Westinghouse Company, a pioneer in radio development, with outstanding radio scientists formerly with the Bureau of Standards at Washington. These scientists, relinquished by reason of the economy act from the Bureau of Standards, were organized by Col. Sidney F. Mashbir into the Washington Institute of Technology.

The purpose of the Institute as outlined by Col. Mashbir is to design, perfect and make commercially available radio aids to flying. The men of the institute have been working for years in this specialized field and are now installed in a new laboratory on the historic College Park Airport, near Washington, D. C.

Their first contribution is the Direct-Aire, a commercial adaptation and further improvement of the radio direction finder developed at the bureau. Their newest development, the Air Track, is a simplified and improved blind landing system adaptable to any airport and airplane, details of which are soon to be announced.

Loans to Brokers Climb to $8,000,000

(Associated Press.)

Loans to brokers and dealers held by weekly reporting New York City member banks amounted to $896,000,000 during the week ended February 7, the Federal Reserve Board reported today, representing an increase of $8,000,000 for the week.

Bank of France Gold Supply Severely Cut

Paris, Feb. 8 (AP).—The Bank of France suffered a diminution of its gold reserve for the third successive week in the period ended February 2, according to its report today.

During that week its reserve diminished 195,000,000 francs, the largest decrease in any of the three weeks. The report does not indicate the effect of the 59-cent United States dollar which was decreed at the end of the period covered by the report.

Du Pont Rayon Factory To Build Large Unit

Richmond, Va., Feb. 8 (AP).—Construction of a new $5,000,000 unit of the Du Pont Rayon Co. at Ampthill will start as soon as working plans for the buildings can be finished, Willis Shackelford, Richmond plant manager, announced today.

He said the addition ultimately will give employment to some 700 or 800 additional employes, but added that no additional employment is contemplated at present.

Canadian Car Sales Up.

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 8 (U.P.).—A 40 per cent increase in new car sales in Canada this year as compared to 1933 was predicted here Wednesday by Wallace R. Campbell, a president of the Ford Motor Car Co., of Canada. Campbell said he expected nearly 75,000 sales in Canada this year. General Motors and Chrysler officials predicted a similar increase in sales in all provinces. They were attending the fifteenth annual auto show here.

German Unemployment Drops.

Berlin, Feb. 8 (AP).—The labor office said today that unemployment in Germany had declined by 285,000 persons during January because of the absence of frost.

The office now lists 3,774,000 unemployed—2,239,000 less than on January 31, 1933.

Delays Menace Age Pension And Alley Bills

D. C. Officials Blamed for Slowness Making Reports to Congress.

Failure of the District Commissioners and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to submit reports promptly on the old age pension bill and the alley improvement bill is reducing the chances of enacting the measures into law at this session.

Chairman Norton of the House District Committee yesterday had to postpone a special meeting she had scheduled for today because the District agencies stated that the reports would not be ready before the first of next week.

The Commissioners have put the blame for delay on the Budget Bureau, to which they must submit all legislation involving expenditures.

Had the reports been ready for a committee meeting yesterday, they could have been presented to the House Monday as it is District day. As it is, they may have to go over two weeks until the next District day unless special permission is obtained from the Speaker to consider them earlier.

The bill amending the banking act so as to protect the shareholders in the merged Franklin, Mount Vernon Savings and Washington Mechanics banks will consequently be the only measure of any consequence ready for House action Monday.

There are approximately 144 District bills pending before the House committee, but the majority have scant chance of consideration at the current session.

Richmond Bank Rate Cut.

(Associated Press.)

The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond has reduced its rediscount rate from 3½ to 3 per cent, effective today, the Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday.

Radio Waves and Ripples

UNTIL we ran across a short-wave radio magazine giving instructions on how to write stations using languages other than English, it began to look as though Aunt Sadie's study of Danish would serve no useful purpose.

She bought all the Danish grammars she could find and studied them assiduously for several days, learning the verbal and written equivalents of "This is the book of my Uncle Jon," "Is this the book of my Uncle Jon?" "My Uncle Jon has many books. Take one," "Please pass the salt," &c. When we finally suggested that full and complete knowledge of the condition of Uncle Jon's books probably wouldn't be of much interest to Danish broadcasters, Aunt Sadie began to see that she wasn't getting very far. Then we produced the short-wave magazine.

As luck would have it, instructions on how to write Danish stations were a shade more complete than those for corresponding with broadcasters using Portuguese, also given in the magazine—a pretty handy little thing, at that. In addition to printing a sample letter in Danish, without an English translation, however, the instructions included 25 words for describing various sorts of programs in Danish, like marimbo undvalg for "marimba selection;" herre stumme for "man singing;" rumfang svag for "faint volume," and talende styker for "talking." Aunt Sadie was patently relieved. Almost gayly she put away her grammars and went back to short-wave listening with Mr. Herringhoffer, the butcher.

And just in the nick of time, too. N. B. C. was exchanging programs with Buenos Aires, and it was Mr. Herringhoffer's contention that no true short-waver would deign to pick up the Argentine program as it was being rebroadcast from New York. He would get it direct. Neither would he consider anything so simple as listening to New York broadcasting to Buenos Aires. He would tune in the Argentine rebroadcast. With this Aunt Sadie warmly agreed.

Aunt Sadie's faith in Mr. Herringhoffer remains undaunted, though his best efforts merely filled the house with static and code signals. But in Aunt Sadie's summation of life, moral victories count heavily.

For just such an emergency as a broadcast by Max Big Man, chief of the Crow Tribe of Indians, WJSV has been keeping several sets of sleigh bells.

They'll wear the bells so you can hear the dancing.

WJSV has gone to a lot of trouble to make the President's radio call to the Nation's Boy Scouts tomorrow a success.

In addition to running a line into Washington Auditorium where the District Scouts assembled may hear the President's message direct, WJSV is broadcasting instructions for the conclave by Lynn C. Drake, District chief, and Commodore W. E. Longfellow.

When Mr Roosevelt finishes tomorrow, Columbia will pick up Mayor LaGuardia in New York urging the Scouts to back up the President and WJSV will put the auditorium program on the air.

The Columbia has plans for broadcasting Japanese Ambassador Hiroshi Saito upon his arrival at New York today, the time depending upon when his ship docks. A description of the bustle and excitement attendant upon the arrival of a distinguished foreigner will be part of the program.

The weather forecast yesterday morning read, "Fair and warmer."

But that was no reason for Don Douglas reading it on WMAL's Breakfast Club with all that snow falling outside. Douglas later explained that it usually takes him several hours to get so he can see things like falling snow in the morning.

N. B. C. on February 24 will broadcast the first session of the Virginia Legislature to be held in the old Assembly House at Williamsburg in 150 years.

The House and Senate will meet with Gov. Peery and other notables, and Carlton Smith, of WMAL, will do the announcing.

Getting Personal.

Bert Ambrose, musical director of London's Mayfair Hotel, will be Paul Whiteman's guest conductor at his Biltmore Hotel concert Sunday evening, February 18 . . . taking no chances, Ambrose sails for England the morning after . . . Georgie Jessel has had a cigar named for him . . . Anthony Frome—The Poet Prince—has had a biography written for him . . . Dutton will publish it March 15 under the title "Me" in four years Jeannie Lang claims to have attended 84 college proms . . . Buddy Rogers buys a complete set of new instruments every time he goes on a new engagement . . . the old ones are given to charity . . . Mildred Bailey is mourning the death of a dachshund pup, "Fritz" . . . Harry Horlick has auditioned 1,000 girls without finding a vocalist for his Gypsies program . . . 9-year-old Baby Rose Marie celebrated her fifth anniversary on the air the other night . . . Geraldine Farrar has joined the campaign to save the New York Philharmonic-Symphony . . . she sang for the Liberty Bond drives during the war. Remember?

The Metropolitan goes on the air. In box 44 of the famous old opera house are Edwin L. Dunham (left), production man, Charles Grey, engineer, and Milton Cross (rear), announcer.

PARTNERSHIP NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given this 29th day of January, 1934, that on January 1st, 1934, T. BAKER ROBINSON withdrew from the limited partnership of "F. BOOKER & CO.," heretofore formed by GEORGE HEWITT MYERS, as special partner, and YELVERTON E. BOOKER, HARRY W. FINNEY and T. BAKER ROBINSON as general partners, all residents of the District of Columbia, by certificate duly recorded in the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia on October 1st, 1929, and renewed by certificate recorded in said office on April 21st, 1933, and said limited partnership has been renewed and will be continued by Yelverton E. Booker and Harry W. Finney, as general partners, and George Hewitt Myers, as special partner, under the same firm name, for the purpose of transacting a general investment, banking and stock and bond brokerage business for the term expiring on September 30, 1936, unless sooner dissolved by mutual consent, with the same total capital of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000), of which the special partner, George Hewitt Myers, has contributed one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($125,000), and the offices of the partnership will continue to be in the American Security Building, 730 Fifteenth street northwest, Washington, D. C. The business of the partnership will be transacted by the general partners only. George Hewitt Myers, special partner, shall not be liable for or subject to any loss or liability beyond the amount of his aforesaid contribution.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Hopeless One.

The old man's sometimes hopeless, he's foundered in his grief; the current news is dopeless of comfort and relief. He sadly looks around him where bleak disaster reigns, and all the signs confound him and give him dark green pains. He says, when tired of weeping, "Yes, good times may come back, but I shall then be sleeping beneath a tamarack. Prosperity may flourish where wolves of want now tread, and large demands may nourish the industries now dead. The forges may be blazing upon some future day, and farmers may be raising large profits from their hay. Though such thoughts are amusing, they cut no grass with me, for I shall then be snoozing beneath a basswood tree. Perhaps on some tomorrow, whose down is yet remote, the world may shed its sorrow, regain its long lost goat. Perhaps the merchant princes will make three bucks or four, by selling prunes and quinces to patrons in their store. Perhaps the hard-pressed grocer may look out doors nor see the sheriff drawing closer to levy on his tea. The people may be jesting once more, in this sad realm, but I shall then be resting beneath a slippery elm." But what's the diff, I wonder, if he is sleeping under a tree upon the lawn, when those who follow after the gray-beards now on earth shall fill the world with laughter and resurrected mirth?

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — An Ideal Landlord — By Harry J. Tuthill

I SAW HER HIGHNESS NEXTDOOR TEARING DOWN HER SMOKE-COLORED CURTAINS TODAY, SO I KNOW SHE, TOO IS GOING TO MOVE.
AH, FINE! IF SHE LEAVES THEN WE CAN STAY. GREAT!
WHAT A BREAK! FINE! WHAT A THRILL TO KNOW WE WON'T HAVE TO TEAR ALL OUR STUFF APART HERE AND PUT IT TOGETHER AGAIN AT SOME OTHER PLACE.
WHAT! STAY HERE AFTER THAT SILLY LANDLORD LET HER SCARE HIM INTO TRYING TO FRIGHTEN ME?
HE'S ONE LANDLORD IN A MILLION. EVEN WHEN WE OFFER TO PAY HIM WITH A CHECK HE'S POLITE.
ALL LANDLORDS ARE POLITE ABOUT HOW THEY GET THEIR RENT THESE DAYS.
YOU LIKE HIM BECAUSE HE ALWAYS PRETENDS TO BE LISTENING WHEN YOU TELL HIM WHAT YOU THINK OF THE NEIGHBORS.
FOR A LANDLORD HIS WORD IS HIS BOND. IF HE TELLS YOU HE'LL FIX SOMETHING THE CHANCES ARE AT LEAST 50-50 THAT HE'LL DO IT.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker

Harris & Ewing Photos.

Miss Abelyne Rush, General File, RFC, and Orland Finley Wilson, Research and Planning, NRA, were selected by the president of the West Virginia State Society as typical young people of that State. Miss Rush is from Clarksburg, a graduate of Glenville Normal School. Mr. Wilson's home is in Charleston. He attended Greenbrier Military School and West Virginia University.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

THIS is West Virginia Day in the Federal Diary's Parade of the States. Three days each week there will appear in this column a survey of some State and the part its citizens are playing in the Government. The series will cover all 48 States and the District.

BAKER.

Watch for your State in the Diary. We are anxious to learn of new arrivals from all sections of the country and their activities in Washington. The Diary invites all Federal employes to send in items about fellow workers from their home State.

West Virginia Hills.

Oh, the West Virginia Hills,
How majestic and how grand,
With their summits bathed in glory
Like our Prince Immanuel's land;
Is it any wonder then, that my Heart with rapture thrills,
As I stand once more with loved ones
On those West Virginia hills.

Oh, the hills, beautiful hills,
How I love those West Virginia hills.

If o'er sea or land I roam,
Still I'll think of happy home,
And my friends among the West
Virginia hills.

By MRS. ELLEN KING.

PRIDE in one's State should come from knowing what that State has accomplished for mankind's benefit, what that State is "famous for." The historians go busy this month, and have plucked form a Southern empire, back in 1805. The first land engagement of the Civil War was fought at Phillippi, on June 3, 1861.

45 Inches of Rain.

West Virginia has an area of 24,643 square miles. Its extreme length is 245 miles, and the extreme width 274 miles. The average temperature is 54.2 Fahrenheit, and the annual rainfall is 45 inches. The lowest point in the State is Harpers Ferry (260 feet above sea level), and the highest is Spruce Knob, almost a mile up.

West Virginia is the second State in the Union in the production of glassware, and aproximately half of all the stemware and tumblers manufactured in this country are made in West Virginia. In fact, the largest tumbler, bottle, and sheet-glass manufactories in the world are located within the area of this State.

Wheeling, the largest iron nail factory in the world. The Kelly Ax Co. at Charlston is larger than all other ax companies in the world combined.

The largest sheet metal mill in the country is in Wheeling, and the world's only Monel metal plant is in Parkersburg, where is located the unique vitrolite plant, also. Richwood leads the world in making clothespins, Clarksburg in toy marbles, and Martinsburg is the home of the largest mill in the world making hosiery exclusively for men.

268 Kinds of Birds.

There are 268 species and subspecies of birds recorded in the State, and 3,431 species and varieties of plants. There are 167 species and varieties of grasses, and 125 kinds of trees. What is said to be the largest white oak tree in the world is

MRS. ELLIS A. YOST.

AGRADUATE of West Virginia Wesleyan College and Ohio Northern University, Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, of Huntington, has long been prominently identified with Republican activities. She is a former member of the Republican National Committee and was the first woman to preside over a Republican State convention (at Wheeling in 1920).

Mrs. Yost is a member of the State board of education, a trustee of West Virginia Wesleyan College, American Asspciation of University Women, League of American Women, D. A. R., and Pi Sigma Alpha Sorority. She is also a member of the National Woman's Country Club. Mrs. Yost lives at 1800 K street northwest.

EMPLOYES at War Department remember Col. J. William DeGrange, who retired last July as chief of the Archives Division. As a researcher he was in Federal service for more than 45 years, having entered service in auditing at Postoffice Department.

DeGRANGE.

He was transferred to War and employed in the office of the Surgeon General for a short time, then transferred to the office of the Chief of Engineers, where he remained until retired.

The title of "Colonel" was given Mr. DeGrange by former Gov. W. M. O. Dawson. President McKinley called Mr. DeGrange "Colonel" at his inauguration, as did Theodore Roosevelt and Taft later, when Mr. DeGrange served as a State aid at the three inaugurals.

Col. DeGrange was active in the founding of the West Virginia State Society in 1914 at the Old Masonic Temple and was delegate to the All States Society for many years. He lives at 1756 Kilbourne place northwest and is still doing research work for scholars and officials.

AS a member of the Democratic Committee, Mrs. J. C. Burchinal, of Fairmont, has been active in the Federal and State Government for many years.

Mrs. Burchinal was known to many Washingtonians as Miss Rose Burns, when she attended Mount St. Agnes College at Mount Washington, Md. She is also a member of the Democratic State Executive Committee, Fairmont Woman's Club, League of Women Voters, Cook Hospital Board, Catholic Daughters of America, Family Welfare Board, Delphian Sorority, and the National Democratic Club. She attended the Democratic conventions at New York, Houston, and Chicago.

NUNNALLY.

The affair will include a reception and ball in honor of the West Virginia-Georgetown University basket ball teams. Dr. John R. Turner, president of West Virginia University, will attend, as will the Rev. Coleman Nevils, president of Georgetown.

Representative George W. Johnson will be honor guest and will speak during intermission. Mrs. Johnson is chairman of the reception committee and will be assisted by Mrs. Ellis A. Yost and Mrs. J. C. Burchinal. Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the floor committee, will be assisted by H. W. Campbell and Maj. Heber S. Rice.

BATEMAN.

The society, one of the largest in the District, is making a drive for 1,000 new members. Applications will be accepted by any of the following officers:

Mr. Nunnally, Bureau of Standards; John L. Bateman, G. A. O., secretary; A. E. Westrater, financial secretary; Col. J. William DeGrange, retired, War, treasurer; D. W. Gall, historian; David S. Davison, sergeant at arms; and vice presidents, Robert L. Ramsay, Mrs. Jennings Randolph, Mrs. Lynn S. Hornor, Mrs. George W. Johnson, John Kee and Joe L. Smith.

THE two Senators from West Virginia are recognized by their Capitol Hill colleagues as very able men.

Senator Henry D. Hatfield, of Huntington, is a Republican. He is a member of the following committees: Agriculture and Forestry, Immigration, Interstate Commerce and Mines and Mining. Senator Hatfield formerly was Governor.

Senator Matthew M. Neely, of Fairmont, is a Democrat. He holds positions on the following committees: Civil Service, Interstate Commerce, Judiciary and Rules. Senator Neely served in the Spanish-American War in the West Virginia Volunteer Infantry.

HATFIELD. NEELY.

OVERTIME work at Civil Service Commission will end Saturday, the commissioners announced yesterday to more than 440 employes in the Washington offices.

The increased volume of work necessitated by an enlarged examination program and changes in Governmental personnel since last spring placed a burden of at least five hours' overtime on Civil Service staff each week.

Chief Examiner L. A. Moyer pointed out that this has been tolerated under the assumption that it was temporary. However, the work has been steadily increasing and promises to gain still further. The commission, therefore, feels that it can not ask employes to continue indefinitely working overtime, Mr. Moyer said.

"The spirit shown by employes in responding to the needs of the commission during the past six months has been most gratifying," a statement declared. "It is the hope that the same spirit will be shown in the future, and that, under the regular hours every employe will do his or her utmost to help keep the current work up to date."

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Meyer Davis Orchestra, Jans and Lynton Revue and other acts; screen, "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen") or to Loew's Palace (Constance Bennett and Franchot Tone in "Moulin Rouge") or to Loew's Columbia (Heather Angel, Ralph Morgan and Norman Foster in "Orient Express"). Persons whose names appear on holidays, call for tickets the next day.

Guess I'll settle up that debt,
Get the dough I've lent,
Smoke a long-lost cigarette.
Good old ten per cent!

All employes at Internal Revenue are invited to hear an address by Luther C. Steward, president National Federation of Federal Employes, at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow. The meeting will be held in the lobby at the Constitution avenue entrance, J. O. Burnham, president of Treasury Branch of Local No. 262, announces.

Today's Epitaph.

Here lies the man whose reading drove
Him to an end obliteral—
The cookbook said, "Sit on the stove."
Poor thing, he was too literal.

West Virginians in High Positions

Famous for Apples.

The apple growers in Hancock and Brooke Counties were the first to make commercial use of the cold-air storage, and the demonstration apple-packing plant at Inwood, Berkeley County, was the first of its kind in the world. George Washington, incidentally, was the first fruit grower in the Eastern Panhandle. The famous Grimes Golden apple tree came from seedlings found in Brooke County, and what is said to be the only marker in the world to an apple tree may be seen on the spot where the original Grimes Golden tree stood.

While George Washington looked on, the first boat propelled by steam in the United States was tested on the "Potowmack," near Shepherdstown, back in 1784. It was the invention of James Rumsey, of Jefferson County.

Blennerhasset Island, near Parkersburg, is known as the place where Aaron Burr (slayer of Alexander Hamilton) made plans to in Mingo County. It is 34 feet in circumference.

The geographical center of the State is near Flatwoods, Braxton County, and the center of population is at Pigeon, Roane County.

Ice Mountain, in Hampshire County, contains many huge boulders among which great quantities of ice form in the winter. At any time in the year, one may uncover this ice in under the boulders where it is protected from the sunlight.

The first rural free delivery route in America was out of Charles Town.

Morgan Morgan was the first permanent settler in what is now West Virginia. He settled in Bunker Hill, Berkeley County, the oldest county in the State. It was founded in 1772.

First Golf at White Sulphur.

Approximately 200 West Virginia soldiers were honored for heroism during the World War, and 39 were awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

What is said to be the only deposit of solidified petroleum in the world is found in Ritchie County. It is mined there like coal.

There is a buffalo farm located on Blue Creek, Kanawha County.

Gas Price Here Steady as 'War' Talks Continue

Members of the National Petroleum Board yesterday continued their conferences with officials of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey about the District gasoline war as third-grade gas prices remained steady another day.

Although no official statement was given out about progress in the negotiations, it was believed the conferees were working toward a solution of the vexing third-grade price problem.

The discussions were being conducted by Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co., and members of his staff, and Nathan Margold, chairman of the Petroleum Administrative Board, representing Secretary Ickes, and other oil administration officials.

Third grade prices remained at 10 cents per gallon at independent stations yesterday and 10½ cents at Standard and other major stations. The same prices have prevailed several days, leading many to believe a temporary truce had been declared during the negotiations with the oil board.

Meanwhile, in conference with its agreement with the Government, the Standard Oil Co. was "liquidating" its discontinued "Babe Ruth Boys' Contest." In an effort to dispose of some of the baseball equipment prizes, they were distributed to entrants in impromptu awards at the Y. M. C. A.. The announcement of the discontinuance of the contest, which brought withdrawal of the Government's injunction suit against the firm in District Supreme Court, revealed the company would attempt to provide trips offered as prizes in some manner satisfactory to Secretary Ickes.

Sled and Bicycle Lost? Policeman Found Them

If Junior has lost his sled and bicycle and you don't know where to look for them, it may do no harm to try park police headquarters in the Navy Building.

Policeman G. G. Fulcher was cruising along Rock Creek-Potomac parkway when he found the sled and bright red bicycle lying in the road near Calvert street. He put the toys in his car and took them to headquarters. The bicycle is a two-wheeler with solid tires. The owner may obtain them after proper identification.

Crowds Skate on Rough Ice Over Lincoln Pool

The rink was closed at nightfall, but will be open until late tonight, park officials said, provided the rough spots do not appear too dangerous.

Spanish Paper Seized After Call for Revolt

Madrid, Feb. 8 (AP).—Copies of the newspaper Socialista were confiscated by police today because an editorial called for a revolution of "workers against the present regime of the republic."
